"Three black crows," when chased back to the starting point, become very often, "something black as a crow," as in the old rhyme, which every school boy knows. Country villages are proverbial for their facility in starting rumors. You are out, and a sudden shower comes up. You have no umbrella and Mary Ann Jones, on the side walk opposite, has none. It is a simple act of good nature to offer her pretty round hat and scarlet tipped the shelter of your umbrella on her safe home. Next day some one says she saw Mr. Gray walking home as easily as possible with Mary Ann Jones. Before the week is over you are engaged, and the wedding-day fixed for you, without your having seen Miss Jones since she walked from under your umbrella into her own door.

How many lives have been wrecked, and loyal hearts broken, by baseless rumor. Some careless looker on, makes a laughing speech. It is repeated by the hearer in grave earnest. It gathers weight as it rolls along, and is strong enough by and by to ruin an honest man's credit, or crush a good woman's fair fame. Against these intangible stories, moreover there is no defense. You cannot arrest a person for scandal, because they hope a thing isn't so, or horsewhip a man for a wink, or a meaning smile. And so every mischiefmaker goes scot-free.

Indeed, not all the story-tellers have actual mischief in their hearts. Half of them, perhaps, would be really sorry to do any harm. They wish everybody well; they are no one's enemies—only it is so natural to tell what one hears; and to a certain order of minds it is such a pleasure to communicate news—to be listened to eagerly—that the temptation of telling all that they know, and piecing out knowledge with surmises, is irresistible. And so—"behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth!"—the mischief is done.

The only cure for this tendency, at least the best one, is to be so busy about ones own affairs as to have no time for one's neighbor's. It is not through the working bees in the hive that the mischief comes. They have enough to do to gather their own honey. Scott's parting counsel used to be—"Be good," ours is—Be busy.

"Do you know," said a wag to a Jew, "that they hang Jews and jackasses together at Newgate?" "Indeed, brother; then its well you and I are not there!"

—It is said to be satisfactorily demonstrated that every time a wife scolds her husband she adds a wrinkle to her face! It is thought the announcement of the fact will have a most salutary effect, especially as it is understood that every time a wife smiles on her husband it will remove one of the old wrinkles!

The Tecumseh Herald.

TECUMSEH, MICH., OCT. 13, 1864.

The Presidential Campaign.

The campaign of 1864, is fairly begun. The platforms are announced, and the tickets are in the field, and in a few weeks more the whole matter will be definitely decided.

In fact, before this paper is issued, the State elections in Pennsylvani, Ohio and Indiana will have taken place, and the results there will be at least regarded as highly significant of the general result in November.

From our position as an independent rather than a partisan paper, we do not propose to dictate or control the vote of any one, and yet because of our position in this respect, we may perhaps the more properly allude to the spirit in which so [illegible] ed and the more important considerations which should influence the vote of every one.

It will have been noticed by all that the canvass thus far has been a peculiarly earnest one. Arguments, not assumptions—reasons, not raillary, are what is demanded for such ti es as these.

Men are not disposed to cast a merely partisan vote, and for the sake of accommodating partisan candidates. They feel that the future of their country, and the weal of their children's children is involved in the vote they are now called upon to cast, and all they desire to know is the better cause, and the better way, and this when it is once clear to them they are prepared to sustain without regard to mere partisan affinities.

And therefore it is that it becomes those who address the public upon political issues, to be earnest and sincere in their statements and arguments.

The fact is the people are in earnest in this matter and are in no mood to be tampered or trifled with. Any detected attempt to mislead or deceive, in so important a crisis as this cannot fail to tell fearfully against the cause in behalf of which it is used.

There may be, and there must be differences of opinion, but in such a time as this the unmistakable demand of public [illegible] honest one, and not as is too often the case, one merely trumped up for partisan effect.

Bitter invective, too, will convince no one, but is only regarded as an evidence of consciousness of weakness and wrong on the part of him who uses it.

We have faith in both the judgment and patriotism of the people, and that the voice of their carefully considered, earnest vote, in this crisis of our nation, will vindicate their ability in the hour of trial, as of calm, to govern wisely, and safely to direct the helm of state.

From the 26th Regiment.

The following resolutions were adopted by Co. F, 26th Michigan Infantry, on the occasion of the death of John Jackson, a volunteer from Ridgeway.

At a special meeting of Co. F, 26th Michigan Infantry, held at U. S. Bakery, Alexandria, Va., Sept. 24th, 1864, for the purpose of expressing our sympathy and condolence with the wife, children and friends of our deceased comrade, John Jackson, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased the Supreme Ruler of events to remove from our companionship and his place in the ranks of our company, our beloved comrade, John Jackson, therefore,

Resolved, That in him we lose a kind companion, a true friend, a dutiful and brave soldier, and one who always could be depended on in time of need.

Resolved, That we tender to the wife of the deceased our heartfelt sympathies in the sad bereavement caused by the loss of her husband, who died after faithfully serving two years in the service of his country, and as a token of our respect, we, the members of Co. F, 26th Michigan Infantry, have freely contributed the sum of eighty-five dollars, to defray the expenses of embalming and expressing his remains to the wife and friends of the deceased.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the wife of the deceased, also a copy to the Tecumseh and Adrian papers.

Army Correspondence.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., Sept. 29, 1864.

EDITOR HERALD:—

Military movements in this department are not, perhaps, of the greatest interest; yet a few notes from this out-of-the-way place, may be acceptable to your readers, as some of them may be as ignorant of the country as myself, ere the fortunes of war caused me to reside in it. It is so far removed from the armies of Grant and Sherman that it is viewed almost as an out post.

Battles are fought and heroic deeds performed which are unrecorded; and yet it is an army which, as to numbers, moral and equipment, is by no means to be despised. The forces contending with it are commanded by Price and Shelby. They act independent of the main army, and carry out no general plan of operation, except as guerrillas and bushwhackers, to fire into transports, pick off stragglers, and annoy without materially injuring us. They are generally well mounted, and supply themselves with horses and mules without expense to the confederate government. They seize old men and boys,—"robbing the cradle and grave"—who are taken to reinforce their armies in Georgia and Virginia. The [illegible] are not encumbered with expensive supply trains. A number of expeditions have been sent out against them of late, none of which have met with decided success.

They have shown great activity of late, appeared in large force, made a raid on the Little Rock & Memphis R. R., broke up a large force of laborers employed in cutting government hay on the prairie, and captured six companies of the 54th Illinois Infantry, who were guarding them, after a severe engagement. They also made a demonstration on this place a few days since, which was undoubtedly intended as a feint to cover other movements they had in view; perhaps a raid into Missouri, which they will find a difficult movement to execute, and if undertaken a force will follow them which will not only checkmate them but bring them to condign punishment.

The Michigan troops serving in this department are the 3d Cavalry and 12th Infantry. The 3d are stationed at Brownville, on the R. R. running between this place and DeVall's Bluff. The health of the men is much better than it was at the latter place, where they suffered much from sickness. Its original term of service expires on the 5th of next month, at which time those who did not reinlist will be ordered North to be mustered out and [illegible]

Col. Wizner is now North, with a view of obtaining for the regiment the Spencer Carbine in place of a very inferior arm they now have, and also further to advance its interest.

The 12th Infantry is at DeVall's Bluff, and fully sustains the high reputation which the gallant sons of Michigan have attained in whatever field they have been called to act. W. D.

Disaster to the 18th Reg't.

The rebel forces under Forest some time since were at Athens, Tenn., several thousand strong. We learn from letters from Major Hulburd and others that Captain Weatherbead and 199 others of the 10th Regiment, on the 28th of September, were ordered to report to Col. Elliot, of an Ohio Regiment, and went from Decatur north, towards Athens. About five miles from Athens they met some of Forrest's skirmishers, whom they drove to within two miles of Athens, where they found themselves surrounded by vastly superior numbers. After fighting bravely for several hours they were compelled to surrender. Twenty-three were killed belonging in part to the 18th and to the Ohio Regiment. A few who were acting as skirmishers escaped. It is not known as yet who are killed or wounded, as the wounded were taken prisoners with the others.

Maj. Hulburt gives the following names as among the missing:

Officers of the 18th Regt., Lieuts. Davis, Hill, Spalding, Kelly, and Hurd. Missing from Co. A: Capt. Weatherbead, Corporal Carleton, Spring, Bradish, Knapp. Musician, Warren Rowley. Privates, O. B. Rowley, Doney, Nat. Eugleson, O. P. Hale, E. E. Hinds, N. Hinkly, O. J. Johnson, Henry Koon, B. F. Ludlum, J. L. Myers, J. H. McCall, George Proper, Jonathan Robbins, J. L. Slick.

—Signor Brignoli, chief of Italian tenors, arrived safely in Paris, and at once entered into an engadment with M. Bagier, director of Les Italiens, for thre years, to sing seven months a year at the rate of $1,600 a month for the first year, $1,800 a month the second year, and $2,000 a month for the third year.

—The extensive iron works of Mr. F Letz, on south Franklin street, Chicago, were destroyed by fire on Tuesday morning. The works destroyed comprised a large foundery and battern machines and finishing shops. Loss $40,000.

The News

Monday, October 10.

The rebels have confiscated a large amount of property belonging to Union men in Arkansas. Albert Pike has been appointed rebel Chief Justice of the State, and has caused the arrest of men for treason who have taken the oath of allegiance to the United States.

Gen Burbridge attacked Salisville, West Virginia, a few days since. This is the location of the great salt works of the Confederacy, and had been very strongly fortified by the rebels. Gen. Burbridge captured a large amount of property, but, finding the place too strong, retired with a small loss. Among the killed was Colonel Mason, of the 11th Michigan Cavalry.

The Richmond Examiner is in favor of making soldiers of negroes, and urges upon the rebel congress the purchase of 250,000 for that purpose. It says that Virginia has exhausted her whites, and must now fight with her black men.

The rebels are confident that they will make trouble in Sherman's rear. Beauregard is to command the department of Georgia, which is to include Gen. Hood's army.

Rebel papers say that Longstreet is to [illegible] command in Western Virginia.

Tuesday, October 11.

We have the cheering intelligence of a great victory by Gen. Sheridan. Having accomplished the object of his campaign, he was falling back down the Valley. The rebels, thinking, evidently, that he was retreating, followed him up closely with all their available force of cavalry. Sheridan felt them in his rear, near Fisherer's Hill, when he stopped, as he says in his dispatches, "to settle this new General and Savior of the Valley." He attacked the enemy next morning, and completely routed them, scattering them in all directions, capturing 11 cannon, a large number of wagons, and many prisoners. He pursued them 26 miles. Gen. Custer displayed particular gallantry during the action.

Wednesday, October 12.

The Herald's correspondent with Sheridan says the retrograde movement of his army was not determined upon until after the rebel army had been broken up and driven from the Valley, and the Valley itself rendered untenable by the destruction of all the forage, grain, etc., it contained. Sheridan, then withdrew in order to be nearer his base of supplies, as his subsistence had to be hauled in wagons almost 100 miles. On retiring, a considerable number of the enemy were seen following until the [illegible] large body of cavalry, under Rosser, appeared. They attacked a portion of our cavalry, and were handsomely repulsed, but bivouacked near by for the night. Next morning Sheridan ordered our cavalry to settle this new Cavalry General, which Torbett, immediately proceeded to do. Custer's and Merritt's Divisions formed and took position. Custer drove the enemy back a mile to a strong position on a brook, where they determined to make a stand behind breastworks, rails and stones. Custer, however, threw in his whole command, making three magnificent charges, and at last carried the position by assault. At the same time a junction was formed with Merritt, when skirmishing ensued until Custer's brigade succeeded in striking on their flank, creating consternation in the rebel ranks, in Merritt's front. The whole Division line then pushed forward, and the rebels broke and fled in a perfect panic and disorder. Pursuit was given, and the guns, caissons, wagons, cattle and several hundred prisoners were captured. They were driven through Woodstock, Edenburg and Mount Jackson, a distance of over 20 miles.

Thursday, Oct. 13.

The California Supreme Court adheres to the decision against the constitutionality of the military suffrage act. This, it is estimated, will make a difference of at least 5,000 in the vote of the State.

Gen. Sherman has made out his official report of his glorious Atlanta campaign, which occupies 20 printed columns. He pays a merited tribute to all those in command under him, as well as to his brave soldiers, and estimates the rebel force against him at 60,000, of which 10,000 were cavalry.

—The citizens of Minnesota are at present in a great state of excitement, in consequence of a raid of bears upon the towns and villages of that state. The Anoka Star says that 64 of the bruen species have been seen durig a week within an area of a mile from its public square. Two men recently attacted a ferocious bruen, one of whom was terribly bitten and lacerated before the monster was dispatched. The raid is pretty general throughout the State.

—The United States Grand Jury were notified to assemble on Thursday, the 29th of september, to investigate the matters connected with the late rebel piracy on the lake, and the allegep complicity of American citizens in the plot. Witnesses have been supbonaed anq a searchning examination will be made into the affair.

Scraps of News.

—On Monday last 1700 troops left N. Y. for Gen. Grant's army.

—According to the the annual report on the railways in India, there are now 2,687 miles of railway completed in that country, and as many more are authorized by the government.

—Philadelphia has just voted 1,000,000 for new school-houses. The money is to be raised by a loan.

It is understood that Captain Speke, at the time of his death, was preparing for another expedition in the direction of the Nile's source.

—The Nashville Times says that a bachelor-looking gentleman was prosecuted before the Recorder's Court in that city recently, by two young ladies, for telling them that they were pretty, and fined $10.

—Petroleum has been discovered near Lockport, N. Y. Parties from the Pennsylvania oil regions believe that oil will be found in great abundance at the depth of 600 or 700 feet. A well is now being sunk.

—On Saturday evening last, a terrific boiler explosion occurred at Muscatine, Iowa, by which the Nevda Mill was demolished, but none seriously. A livery stable adjacent to the mill was burned.

—A negro who was dashed from Williamstown, Mass., last summer, and failed to report, is on trial at Gallup's Island for desertion. He is also a "jumper" in the matrimonial line, having after losing his first wife, married a white girl only 16 year old, with whom he lived four days, and then ran off with another man's wife.

—The Nort Carolina papers assert that the mountains of that State are full of Tories (meaning Union men), and report that a band of 75 made a decent upon Mitchell county on the 14th ult., and shot men, and carried off 25 members of the home guard, severel citizens, 10 negroes, and a large number of horses and mules, and were evidently moving to the yankee lines.

—A number of Indian relics have recently been boought to light by excavation in Dorchester, Mass., consisting of Indian skeletons. The formation of the skulls indicates great firmness and destructiveness, and many of the bones give unmistakable evidence of large frames and great strength. Severel bead, knives, pine-tree shillings, an arrow, and other rare relics, were among the remains, which will no doubt, be inspected with great avidity.

A Pleasant surprise.

The parishoners and friend of the Rev S. E. Vishard, pastor of the Presbyterian Church and society, of this village, made him and his family a spontaneous visit on Friday evening last, and left them [illegible] free will offering, in token of their appreciation of his earnest, self-denying labors amongst them and the general inadequacy of clergymen's salaries for their competent support in times like these, a gratuity of about one hundred and fifty dollars.

PASSION.—The man who gets into a passion is said to forget himself; but the fact is, he forgets other people. The man or woman who buys any other Saleratus but Herrick Allen's Gold Medal, not only forgets other people and themselves, but runs the risk of scattering broadcast dyspepsia, and many other evils naturally attending the human system. As you value health and good eating, never buy any othe. Have the Gold Medal or none. Most everybody sells it. Depot 112 Liberty St. N.y.

Mr. President,—I wish the friends in the forepart of the meeting would speak up, so that the friends in the back part of the meeting can hear what is said in the front part of the meeting. Friends in the back part of the meeting feel as much interested as the friends in the forepart of the meeting; it is highly necessary that friends in the forepart of the meeting should speak up, so that the friends in the back part of the meeting can hear what is going on in the front part of the meeting, especially if there are anything saying about the J. Monroe Taylor Gold Medal Soap, which every one says is so good.

To obtain any of these letters, the applicant must call for "advertised letters," give the date of this list, and pay one cent for advertising. If not called for within one month, they will be sent to the Dead Letter Office.

Letters to strangers or transient visitors in a town or city, whose special address may be unknown, should be marked, in the lower left-hand corner, with the word "Transient."

W. ANDERSON, P. M.

Large Reduction of prices at Moores.

As some of my neighbors are attempting to instil into the minds of my customers that I have paid more for goods than they have, and consequently they can sell Goods lower than I can. I respectfully request that all those who are in want of Dry Goods will examine my stock critically, and compare qualities and prices with those of my neighbors. I shall at all times be down to the lowest market price that goods are sold at in this county. My entire stock is paid for. I defy any person in New York to present to me an unpaid bill, for goods sold to me. My entire stock belongs to me and I will sell it at just such prices as I please. I have no disposition to cut prices or undersell my neighbors or 'blow' on their Goods, or over my own, just for the sake of trying to sell all the goods in town. No one man can do it. But I will sell at the lowest market price without regard to cost. I do not sell goods on the "Jew system," viz. make from one to ten prices on the same piece of goods in the same day. I began the "one price system" three years ago and I have done a successful business under it and trust that a reasoning, thinking community will sustain me in it. I believe it to be the only true, just system of selling goods, for under the low cash system the buyer is constantly incurring the risk of being shaved at every turn, and it must be obvious to all that one price reduces the seller to the lowest terms, and if the market goes down, he must decline in price. Goods have fallen in New York and my prices are lower than heretofore, and I invite all who want anything in the line of Dry Goods. (I deal exclusive in Dry Goods and carry the largest stock in this village, I have no saleratus or matches to fill my shelves with,) to call and examine my Goods and see for themselves how I am selling and be convinced of this fact that the true place to buy Dry Goods is where the dealer's whole attention is given to that one class of goods, hence he has the advantage, the exclusive grocer, shoe dealer, hardware dealer or clothier can undersell, all those who dabble in their line of goods,—because each one can stock up in greater variety and suit you better. My terms of sale are Cash on delivery.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tonic, gentle stimulant and unequalled morning appetizer. Prepared in ripe old Bourbon. Being now used to the exclusion of all other Bitters in more than fifty United States Army Hospitals, and millions of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been especially exempted from stamp tax by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ They are made of ingredients well known, and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with sufficient strengthening properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirit, Sallow Complexion,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
FOR
Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these agreeable bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, so that thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.
☞ If your druggist or tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.
☞ Remember the name, and take no other.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ The composition of Dr. Swain's Bitters, having been made public through the columns of Medical Journals, and having been adopted as a standard remedy by the Medical Profession, are by the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, EXEMPT FROM STAMP DUTY.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that subscriptions, will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum, principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, at the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of fifty, one, five, ten, and twenty hundred, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of deposit as the same can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent, which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deduction for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country. And it CANNOT pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than, nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation.

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment; while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in bank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

Subscriptions will be received by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

for exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

from all parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superseding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stitch, alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a lifetime and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew from fine gossamer gauze to the coarse fabrics, requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using Weed's Patent Thread Controller. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

October.

BY ALICE CAREY.

Not the light of the long blue Summer,
Nor the flowery huntress, Spring,
Nor the chilly and moaning Winter,
Doth peace to my bosom bring,
Like the hazy and red October,
When the woods stand bare and brown,
And into the lap of the South land,
The flowers are blowing down;
When all night long, in the moonlight,
The boughs of the roof tree chafe,
And wind like a wandering poet,
And all day through the cloud-rifts,
The sunbeams sequittishly rove—
For then in my path first unfolded
The sweet passion-flower of love.

With bosom as pale as the sea-shell,
And soft as the flax unspun,
And locks like the nut-brown shadows
In the light of the sunken sun,
Came the maiden whose wonderful beauty
Enchanted my soul from pain,
And gladdened my heart that can never,
No, never be happy again.
Far away from life's pain and passion,
And our Eden of love, she went
Like a pale star fading softly
From the morning's golden tint.
But oft, when the bosom of Autumn
Is warm with the summer beams,
We meet in the pallid shadows
That border the land of dreams.
For seeing my woe through the splendor
That hovers about her above,
She puts from her forehead the glory
And listens again to my love.

Sylvester, the Hunchback.

BY MRS. PHEBE H. PHELPS.

"Oh, if I could only get a place in a store?" said Sylvester to his mother; "how glad I should be! Then I could earn as much as if I were strong."

"I wish you could, my son; but keep up heart, study well this winter, and perhaps a chance may open to you. Remember that God puts us where he wants us to be."

[illegible] welcome and refreshing to the mourning earth, as the light and warmth of a sunny, loving nature, to the darkened heart.

"Why, Clarence, do you really think I write better than you do?" asked Sylvester returning to the subject after they had walked on a little farther.

"I do. Let's compare books to-morrow, and see."

The next day the two boys compared books. They wrote differently. Clarence's writing was marked by ease, skill, and finish; Sylvester's by care, effort, accuracy, and neatness. The boys could not decide which wrote the best. Sylvester and Clarence did. Clarence praised Sylvester's writing, and tried to think it best. Sylvester said it was well they were not the school committee; but Clarence said he wished he was a committee of one to decide the matter, for he knew who deserved the prize, and who would get it then.

After all, he was somewhat afraid that Sylvester would not get it, for the master evidently liked his writing best, and the committee might. But Sylvester must have it. It must not be otherwise. Could he do nothing to secure it to him? What could he do? Write the half-dozen remaining lessons badly? That would not be right. It would not be just towards the teacher, who had a deep interest in the improvement and [illegible] of his scholars. He wished he could withdraw from the trial, but he knew that the teacher would not permit him to do so. He thought of staying at home, but he knew his parents would not allow this.

He was full of these perplexing thoughts and feelings during the writing hour next after the comparison of the books, and, as a consequence, wrote a very poor copy; one even poorer than the first, and standing next his best, the result of a winter's progress, as it did, it seemed all the poorer therefor. At first, Clarence was pistressed at its appearance; but, after a moment's thought, he was glad, for he felt that the prize was now sure for Sylvester. His own chance was gone. His desire that Sylvester should have the paize, had secured it to him, even without his intention.

The long-expected and important day arrived, the last day of school, when the classes were to be examined, and the writing prize given. What excitement and expectation now! Notwithstanding his quiet and subdued manner, no one was so deeply interested and excited as Sylvester. During the examination of Arithmetic, Clarence was seated next to him. He heard his deep breathing, and forgot himself in his sympathy for him. He was rejoiced at the promptness and correctness with which Sylvester solved the problems, and answered the questions on rules and principles proposed to him. No one in the class answered so well except Clarence himself.

When the regular examination was concluded, one of the committee, an old-fashioned gentleman, asked for a solution of what he termed "an extra;" one which he had puzzled over and solved when a boy. It was it rhyme:

"If the third of six be three,
What will the fourth of twenty be?"

It was given out to the whole class. Half a dozen boys, with scarcely a moment's thought, declared the answer to be five. And when told that they were incorrect, insisted that it must be so, since four times five are twenty; and seemed greatly perplexed when further told, "Not when a third of six is three."

Clarence heard Sylvester breathing hard, and counting in a low whisper. He would not count himself. If Sylvester could solve the question correctly, let him have the credit alone; if not, he certainly would not surpass him, even if he could.

He was waiting for Sylvesters answer, when the teacher spoke—

"Can't you answer it, Clarence?"

"No, sir," answered Clarence.

"Can you, Sylvester?"

Sylvester's countenance lighted up. He had just solved the question. "Seven and a half, sir, is the answer."

"Right, right, exclaimed the old gentleman who had propounded the question; I am glad there is one boy can answer it."

The writing books were then brought forward and examined. A few rapid glances and most of them were laid aside. Three or four underwent a careful examination. Finally, there were only two, which occupied the attention of the committee—Sylvester's and Clarence's. It was evident that the committee were not agreed, in opinion, concerning the [illegible] giving the preference to Clarence's another to Sylvester's, and the third, the old man who had given out the extra, was to make the decision.

How anxiously Sylvester waited! So did Clarence, noble boy! He thought Sylvester sure of the prize when he had spoiled his copy, but now he had fears; people differ so much in taste and opinion. The old gentleman arose with an assured and satisfied manner to announce the decision. There was a profound silence. The interest among the boys was intense. Sylvester and Clarence scarcely breathed.

"I rise," said the old gentleman, "on behalf of the school committee to express their gratification with the general deportment and attainments of the pupils of this school. They have been particularly gratified with pleasure to announce that the prize for writing is awarded to sylvester Bates."

There was now a general whispering. Sylvester's face grew red he could scarce believe his own senses, that he had so much honor. Clarence was full of rejoicing.

Sylvester was called forward to receive the prize. No one despised the poor hunchback then; no one smiled at his misshapen form; no one even pitied him; but many envied his success, his triumph. Sylvester took the prize, bowed low, in thanks and returned to his seat. There was, at least, one bright, rich, satisfying moment for the poor, stricken, denied boy. He handed the prize to Clarence, whispering in a low, but heartily grateful tone, "I owe it to you. Thank you, Clarence."

It was once a knife as had been expected, and fully equalled the most glowing anticipations of its excellence, being pearl-handled, silver-plated, and six-bladed; two large blades, three small ones, and a file blade; a very beautiful and valuable knife. No other boy in school had such a one, nor even hoped for such a one before manhood.

When the school was dismissed, and Sylvester and Clarence were walking home together, Sylvester addressed Clarence: "Why, Clarence, I never saw such a boy before. You seem as glad that I received the knife as if you had received it yourself."

"I am more so."

The teacher joined them.

"Well, Sylvester, I congratulate you," he said. "You came off with flying colors. You were the hero of the day."

"Thank you, sir," said the poor, deformed boy, embarrassed and blushing; unused to congratulations, his experience having been one of severe suffering and endurance, with little satisfaction or success.

The master turned to Clarence. "But Clarence, couldn't solve the puzzle?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Did you try?"

"No, sir."

"Why not?"

Clarence said nothing Sylvester answered, "Clarence is generous; too generous to claim his due. I owe him all my honors."

"Ah, is that so? And you are just and generous enough to acknowledge it. I am glad that they have learned 'to be kindly affected one to another, in honor preferring one another.' Why, boys, I cannot express to you my pleasure at this new development of merit.

It is better than all your school attainments and honors. I might envy you, Sylvester, so noble, so unselfish a comrade as Clarence, did I not envy Clarence his noble, unselfish disposition."

☞ "Well, my good woman," said a clergyman, who was sent for in the midle of the night by one of his congregation, "so you are ill and require the consolation of religion. What can I do for you? "No," replied the lady, "I am only nervous and can't sleep." "How can I help that?" asked the minister. "Oh, sir," said she, "you always put me to sleep so nicely when I go to church that I thought if you would only preach a little for me!"

The Price of Two Potatoes in 1808.

Mhe following anecdote of the first Napoleon is related in a letter from a correspondent, who was a considerable time in French military service, and who vouches for its authenticity:

The evening before the battle of Ulm, when Napoleon the First, in company with Marshal Berthier, was walking incognito through the camp and listening to the talk of soldiers, he saw in a group [illegible] was roasting some potatoes in the ashes.

"I should like a roasted potatoe above all things," said the Emperor to the marshal, "ask the owner of them if he will sell one."

In obedience to the order, Berthier advanced to the group and asked to whom the potatoes belonged. A grenadier stepped forward and said, "They are mine."

"Will you sell me one?" inquired Berthier."

"I have only five," said the grenadier, "and that's hardly enough for my supper."

"I will give you two napoleons if you will sell me one of them," continued Berthier.

"I dont want your gold," said the grenadier; "I shall be killed, perhaps to-morrow, and don't want the enemy to find me with an empty stomach."

Berthier reported the soldier's answer to the Emperor, who was standing a little in the back ground.

"Let's see, if I shall be luckier than you," said the latter; and, going up close to the grenadier, he asked him if he would sell him a potatoe.

"Not by a long shot," answered the grenadier; "I have not enough for myself."

"But you may set your own price," said Napoleon. "Come, I am hungry,

"I tell you I haven't enough for myself," repeated the grenadier; "besides all that do you think I don't know you in spite of your disguise?"

"Who am I, then?" inquired Napoleon.

"Bah!" said the grenadier. "The little corporal, as they call you. Am I right!"

"Well," said Napoleon, "since you know me, will you sell me a potatoe?"

"No," said the grenadier, "but if you would have me come and dine with you when we get back to Paris, you may sup with me this evening."

"Done!" said Napoleon. "On the word of a little corporal—on the word of an Emperor!"

"Well and good," said the grenadier. "Our potatoes ought to be done by this time. There are the two largest ones; the rest I'll eat myself."

The Emperor sat down and eat his potatoes, and then returned with Berthier to his tent merely remarking, "Ths rogue is a good soldier, I'll wager."

Two months afterwards, Napoleon the Great was in the midst of a brilliant court at the Palace of the Tuilleries, and was just sitting down to dine when word was brought him that a grenadier was without, trying to force the guard at the door, saying that he had been invited by the Emperor.

"Let him come in," said his majesty.

The soldier entered, presented arms, and said to Napoleon, "Do you remember once having supped with me of my roasted potatoes?"

"Oh is that you? Yes, yes, I remember," said the Emperor; "and so you have come to dine with me, have you? Ruthan, lay another cover on your table for that brave fellow."

Again the grenadier presented arms, and said, "A grenadier of the guards does not eat with lackeys. Your majesty told me I should eat with you; that was the bargain; and trusting to your word, I have come hither."

"True, true," said the Emperor. "Lay a cover here near me; and lay aside your arms, mon ami, and draw up to the table."

Dinner over, the grenadier went at his usual place, took up his carbine, and turning to the Emperor, presented arms. "A mere private," he said, "ought not to dine at the table of his Emperor."

"Ah! I understand you," said Napoleon, "I name you Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, and Lieutenant in my company of guards."

"Thank you heartily," returned the soldier. "Vive l' Empereur!" he shouted, and then withdrew.

Root of Evil.—Stump of an aching tooth

In a Bad Fix.

In the village of B., State of Massachusetts, lived a handsome young maiden seventeen, whom we will call Fanny L., and George M., was her accepted lover. The course of true love ran smooth, and in due process of time came the happy termination of their wooing, and the twain were made one by the benediction of the holy church.

They were married early one summer morning, and the same day traveled cozily [illegible] the wedding tour. A companion, a young rascal, accompanied them, and well it would have been for the happy pair if they had trusted themselves to their own society, and left James at home to ornament dog's tails and spit-ball the schoolmaster.

Well, the party arrived at the Galt House, Philadelphia. While George was dutifully attending to the comforts of the young wife, James, in his duties as groomsman, went to the office of the hotel to enter the names and select appropriate apartments. Pen in hand, a brilliant idea struck him, and in pursuance therewith, he entered their names on the register thus;

James L.
Miss Fanny L.
George M.

Fanny retired early, being somewhat fatigued with travel.

George smoked his cigar for an hour or two, and dreamed of his bachelorhood, we suppose, and finally he requested to be shown to his apartments. An obsequious waiter, with candle in hand, attended him, and asked what number it was.

"With the lady who came with me," replied George.

The waiter smiled, hesitated, and then appproached an exquisitely dressed clerk, and repeated the question.

George answered again, blushing to the tips of his ears.

The clerk smiled and shook his head, as if in pity, at the young man's ignorance.

"It will not do sir; you have mistaken the house, sir. Such things are not allowed here, sir."

"Will not do? why I only want to go to bed."

"That you may certainly do in your own room, sir, but not in the lady's apartment, sir!"

"The lady's apartment? Why that lady is my wife?"

The clerk bowed ironically. "All very fine, sir, but won't go down, sir; here is the entry, sir."

George looked at the register, and there was the entry, sure enough.

"Miss Fanny L."

"George M."

He saw the whole secret at a glance. He protested and entreated, but it was no use. He called on James to witness his veracity, but James was nowhere to be found. The bystanders laughed, but the clerk was inexorable; and the poor fellow was forced, in his solitary chamber, to pass his bridal night invoking blessings on the whole class of "respectable hotels" and younger brothers.

Honesty and Trust.

The following plesant anecdote is from "Glances and Glimpses," a book by Dr. Harriet H. Hunt, who was once a teacher in Boston:

A cousin of mine in Charlestown having passed away, it became proper that I should attend her funeral. It was school afternoon; I did not dismiss the scholars; as they disliked a monitor, I hit upon the following plan of leaving them: I placed in the chair the large old-fashioned slate, (it had been my father's,) wrote upon it the names of the scholars in the order in which they sat; and arranged the needle-work and reading—or as I always had some interesting work read aloud by some older pupil every afternoon—and then said, "Now, children, when the clock strikes five, leave your seats orderly, go to my chair, and place by each of your names a unit for good behavior and a cross for bad. When I return I shall look at the slate, and in the morning when you are assembled, I will read the list aloud, that every thing may be confirmed. But I trust you!" On my return I visited the school room and found but one cross upon the slate; and that where I least expected it, appended to the name of a beautiful, open, bright, brave child, who then promised much to the world—the fact of her having rich parents being the greatest drawback. She was the last child in the school that I should have thought capable of any misconduct. The morning came; the list was then read; it proved truthful; but when I came to this name I said,

"My dear child, you must explain. Why is this? What did you do?"

Looking up to me with those sorrowful eyes, and speaking with a sorrowful tone, which ever made her an object of sacred intrest, she replied:

"I Laughed aloud! I laughed more than once—Icouldn't help it—because a

The Humors of Politics.

We are in the midst of a sharp political contest, and some of the scenes that pass before our eyes would be eminently ludicrous if the subject was not so serious as to cause us to feel pain instead of pleasure. For instance, two gentlemen who have long been friends, suddenly discover that they cannot agree respecting the merits of certain yrominent men who are candidates for office. Do they undertake to argue the matter in a sensible and neighborly manner? Not at all. ties become warm, and one exclaims:

"You're a fool—you know nothing about the subject"

The other retorts, in tones of indignation:

"You miserable jackass, don't you know as much once?"

Then the other, who grows more angry under the taunt, replies:

"I know a blamed sight more than you do, or ever did, or ever will know."

Of course a few oaths are uttered by both parties, as though they would help the matter, and then the men separate and meet no more as friends. They mentally call each other fools and knaves, and take every occasion to utter disparaging remarks respecting each other's honesty.

This is the height of insanity, but there appears to be no method of correcting the abuse, unless a law should prevail, condemning a man to a straight jacket the instant he lost his temper while discussing politics. This might prove effectual during all the contests excepting a presidential one. During the latter, all who are entiled to vote and carry torch-lights, go raving mad, and do not recover their senses until the chief magistrate of the country is inaugurated. After that they possess manias, but only fo office.

But the strangest spectacle is exhibited in the daily newspapers. Editors fortify themselves with coffee, or something stronger, and then write articies after the following style:

"We tell the liar of the Daily Squash, that he has no more patriotism in his heart than a turnip. He would cheat his father and mother if he could secure a vote, and would rather tell a falsehood than the truth. This, however, is to be expected. A man who passes years of his life in the State Prison cannot possess much refinement."

The editor, who receives such a libellous broadside, reads it, smiles, is buried in deep thought for a moment, and then writes an answer like this:

"The devil's imp, the ruffian, who beats his wife and infant child with an oak club, the wretch who enriches the Daily Flounder with his contributions, calls us a liar. We humbly thank God that he did not call us his friend. A fiend like him, who once cheated the gallows; who rests under the imputation of selling his country for ten dollars and a jug of whiskey; who is suspected of murdering his grandmother for the purpose of stealing a pot of preserves, can receive no mercy at our hands. In a few days we shall show him up."

Now it would hardly be suspected that the men who wrote such paragraps, were quiet and civil under ordinary circumstances, but politics warps their minds and turns them sour, as though suffering from bile and indigestion. We wish that a reform could be effected.

CHATTANOOGA, 15.—Reports of scouts fail to show the presence of any considerble body of the enemy north of Tunel Hill. There is nothing definite as to Sherman's whereabouts. He is known to be energetically at work to open and keep open the route to Atlanta, no matter what rebel column intervenes.

Gen. Butler's retaliatory order is having a good effect; the rebels have entirely ceased shelling the Dutch Gap canal, which has already proved to be a success. Death of Chief Justice Taney.

The death of the venerable Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Roger Brooke Taney, is announced. He was borne in Calvert county, Maryland March 17, 1777, and consequently was in his eighty-eighth year. For several years his health has been failing, and his extreme feebleness has bitterly totally incapacitated him for business.

He was descended from a family of English Roman Catholics, which settled in Maryland about the ... century; and he always, we believe, adhered to the faith of his ancestors. He graduated at Dickinson College, Pennsylvania in 1796. He commenced the practice of law in Calvert county, but, in 1801, removed to Frederick. In 1816 he was elected State Senator, and served in that capacity eight years. In 1822 he removed to Baltimore, and, in 1827, was appointed Attorney General of the State.

In 1831 he was appointed by President Jackson Attorney General of the United States. Upon the removal of Duane September 23, 1833, for refusing to remove the deposits from the United States Bank, Taney was appointed to succeed him, and at once issued the order for removal, as instructed by the President. When his nomination as a Cabinet Minister came before the Senate, that body being strongly opposed to Gen. Jackson, and, in a heated condition, refused to confirm the appointment. This was in June, 1834, and the vote of the Senate on the question of confirmation, was 28 nays to 18 ayes. In 1835, Mr. Tany was appointed by Jackson an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. The Senate again rejected him. Jackson was not the man to be prevented by an obstinate Senate from placing his favorites in office, and in 1863, when Chief Justice Marshall died, the complexion of the Senate having been changed, Roger B. Tany was, upon the nomination of President Jackson, confirmed as Chief Justice of the United States, and took his seat in January, 1837—being at that time sixty years of age, and has served twenty-seven years.

The Fourth Mich. Infantry.

Col. Hall received on Thursday the official order from Washington to organize the regiment, and the probability is that its stay here will be very short. All who have not witnessed the fine display ... given on dress parades should do so at once. For some time there have been but five companies in camp here, but on Tuesday night three companies came from Pontiac and were attached to the fourth regiment.

Yesterday was the first parade with the eight full companies, and the men presented a splendid appearance. The five companies who have been here, and recived the benefit of Col. Hall's personal attention, present a neat and soldiery appearance which would compare favorably with regiments whose term of service number months instead of weeks. Col. Hall has been indefatigable in his efforts to bring his men to a high state of efficiency and their appearance and proficiency in the various movements do great credit to his energy and skill. The new accessions to the regiment, under the impetus which the example of the others will give, will rapidly develop the best qualities of soldiers.

There are now in camp here eight companies, numbering upwards of ninety men each, which with the two full companies of veterans in the field makes the regiment full.

Col. Hall may well be proud of his men and their appearance, and we doubt not that under its efficient field, line and staff officers this regiment will prove to mean rival of the honors which cluster so thickly around the officers and men o the glorious old Fourth.—Adrian Watch tower.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT FOR ENDEAVORING TO OATAIN A SUBSTITUTE IN CANADA.—We learn from a gentleman in Ontario county the particulars of a costly attempt to escape the draft by fleeing to Canada and endeavoring to obtain a substitute there, Two young men, named Jarvis and Gilford Bawerman, belonging to a wealty family at Farmington, stepped over into Canada just before the 6th of September to await the "eventualities" of the draft. The latter was drawn and set about hiring a Canadian substitute. He engaged his man and was ready to leave with him, when the authorities, who had been apprised of the proceedings, arrested them on a charge of violating the law against foreign enlistments. He was tried, found guilty, and sentenced to a term of eighteen years imprisonment The young man was, doubtless, not aware of the penalty he incurred in endeavoring to procure a substitute in Canada. His case will serve as a warning to others who may have visited Canada under like circumstances. Mr. Bowerman, we understand, leaves a wife and one child at Farmington.—Rochester Union.

Sugar Cane.

Monday, Sept. 17, 1864.

MR. EDITOR:—Having planted and tilled a small patch of sugar-cane, and feeling a deep interest in its production under the present state of our country, I will state a few facts relative to the growth and manufacture of it according to the best information that I have been able to obtain from time to time.

We planted 50 rods of ground, from the growth of which we received 28 gallons ... and sents per gallon, estimating the labor expended thereon at $2 per day, including 30 cents per gallon for manufacturing. This is by no means a full or average crop; and I will make a few statements in comparison with this, to show the great profit that might accrue from the proper cultivation of this most indispensable article. Mr. Peter Kishpaugh, of Franklin, planted 30 square rods of ground, having manured it well with mellow barnyard manure, which yielded 44 gallons of first quality syrup, or an average of 234 2-3 ... The above crop was planted ... of May, at a distance of 3 1-2 feet between the rows, and from one and a half to two feet between the hills. It was not suckered, and when harvested averaged from eight to ten well manured stalks to the hill. Mr. Hanford, of the same town, obtained 66 1-2 gallons of syrup from 45 rods of ground, or an average of 236 4-9 gallons per acre.

Mr. Thomas Lowry, of Tecumseh, raised a crop of cane yielding 58 gallons of good syrup from 33 square rods of ground, an average of 287 gallons per acre. The Cane Mill of I. L. Talman is doing quite an extensive business by way of manufacturing syrup. I understand up to the date of this article he made nearly fourteen hundred gallons. The probability is that there will be manufactured at this mill three thousand gallons before the season is done.

There seems to be a great want of mills throughout the country for the purpose of manufacturing this important article for home consumption as well as export, as will readily be seen from the fact that there has been a large amount of cane drawn to the above mill from the township of Franklin; a less quantity from Cambridge, Manchester and Ridgewater, and some even from the township of Rome.

I think it would be of great benefit, as ... to our Franklin neighbors if some person of enterprise and the necessary capital would establish a mill at one of the two water mills in that town. In passing by a few weeks ago we were looking at the location, and there is no doubt as to the success of the enterprise, from the fact that waterpower is cheaper than any other for crushing. Then at 30 cents per gallon (the present price for manufacturing.) it must necessarily become a money-making business, as there can be made with a single Pan or Evaporator from 80 to 100 gallons per day, if well driven,—at an expense for fuel of one cord of dry wood to every hundred gallons of syrup made. I have been informed that it does not require more than three hands to do all the labor of crushing, boiling, removing debris, waiting on customers, etc.

This syrup sells readily now at $1,25 per gallon at the factory, and there can be no possible doubt as to its profitableness both to the farmer and manufacturer

Will some enterprising person take hold of this matter, and improve upon the knowledge already gained, the system of manufacturing, and establish more mills? Had I a little of the courage of Joan, of Arc, or the audacity of Annie Dickerson, I might move in this direction; but as it I leave the work for Brother Man.

THE NEW ATLANTIC CABLE.—The Quebec Mercury, which has received a sample of the new Atlantic cable, thus describes its appearance: "It is an inch and a quarter in diameter, and is composed of seven strands of No. 20 fine copper wire, encased lengthwise in a gutta percha tube of five eighths of an inch in diameter, covering the whole enclosed in an independent wrapper of ten strands of iron wire of the best gun metal, No. 12 size, each wrought inside of a small hempen rope of about a quarter of an inch in diameter, saturated with tar and laid spirally in a compact manner over the gutta percha rope containing the insulated conducting wire. The cable is two thirds the weight of the old one, which was almost entirely of metal. A mile and a half of it has been extended, and found to bear, without injury, seven tons weight."

MAXIMILIAN'S FIRST COINAGE.—The N. O. Picayune says: "We have been shown a Mexican picayune of the Maximilian issue, a very neat little coin of silver, on one side of which appears the familiar eagle of the Mexican Republic, with an imperial crown upon his head, and surrounded with the words "Imperio Mexicano." On the reverse, between two laurel wreaths, is the inscription, "5 Cents 1864. M."

In Centralia, Ill., Oct. 8th, Mary Elizabeth, wife of George Osgood, and daughter of Burtis Bird, Esq. of Macon, aged 27 years.

Not alone on a deeply afflicted husband and two motherless children does this sudden death fall like a crushing blow. The sad tidings cast a gloom over many hearts that held her very dear.—Her kind amiable, self-sacrificing disposition, together with her constant piety won the love and respect of all that knew her and while we mourn our own irreparable loss, we have the heavenly consolation that our loss is her great gain—a bright and happy home in Heaven.

Novelties in Dry Goods

Our neighbor Moore, Dry Goods dealer, left our village, Tuesday last, for New York. He says if there is anything good, beautiful and cheap in New York, in the way of Dry Goods he will have it in Tecumseh for sale in ten days or two weeks. So look out for the newest styles in Dress Goods and everything else usually found in a Dry Goods stock. Moore is active and energetic in his business, and always aims to give you the best goods for the least amount possible. Don't fail to see his New Goods when they arrive. He goes to New York at just the right time, goods have just begun to advance from the lowest rates of the season and he takes advantage of the times, and will give you the benefit of it.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths per cent. per annum,—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder of twenty into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect. They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be by fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges, upon after the receipt of the original certificates of subscription, duly receipted.

As the notes draw interest from Aug. 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT PAY in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation.

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and Designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

Union Livery Stable

"Union now, and Union ever,"
Shall be every freemen's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong—
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages,
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or ots or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.
The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Hayden's and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

THE SCANDINAVIAN Remedies

"Be ye healed from sickness and pain,
For the whole healthy frame is gain."

DR. ROBACK'S
and
BLOOD PILLS
have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an Immense Popularity,
far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.
An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable Curative Properties,
and hence their
Rapid Sale
and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend
of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the Numerous Certificates
which have been showered upon him from
All parts of the Country.
The peculiarity of the
Blood Purifier and Pills
is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.
ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.
The doctors pronounced the case incurable.
ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.
ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.
ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.
Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills
Work like a Charm.
The Blood Pills
are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.
They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.
They are really a
Blood and Liver Pill,
hich, in conjunction with the
Blood Purifier,
will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,

Doubt no more.
As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT.
TIGHT STITCH
SEWING MACHINES
WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT
Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superseding all others.
They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:
They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.
on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.
They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.
The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.
The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.
They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.
and Gather without basting.
They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.
They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.
They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the "Slack Thread" equal to it.
Every Machine is Warranted
Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.
Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.
We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.
All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

The Promised Kiss.

"House full? Why, how much company have you?"

Mrs. Louise Anslie, our pretty little hostess, who was on her knees before my trunk, engaged in admiring my wardrobe while she chatted, turned immediately to my sister.

"My dear Julia, we are actually crammed," said she. "There hasn't been such a summer rush for the Maples since I can remember. First came the Athertons and Wilsons; then Hattie Latimer and her sister; then Harry Vernon, Charlie Wayne, Fred Lawton, and his pretty little cousin, and consequently her ardent admirer, Mr. Mayard. I thought we were certainly full, and James was just saying, last night, that we couldn't possibly accommodate anybody else, when a carriage drove up, and out sprang Hugh Cheston!"

"Hugh Cheston?" said I, my face flushing.

"Hugh Cheston?" exclaimed my elder sister, Gertrude, who was tumbling over the contents of her trunk in search of something. "Oh I am delighted!"

"He's the best catch I know of, Louise," said Julia.

"Well, of course he had come to spend a week or two, and James was just as glad to see him as if there wasn't a soul in the house and we had whole suits of rooms," replied Mrs. Anslie; but I was at my wits' ends for a place to put him in. But at last I remembered what a good little soul you are, Mattie, and so ventured to let him have the chamber I had reserved for you. You won't think it an imposition, will you, dear?"

"No indeed. I can manage capitally with you, Julia," said I.

"It's very good of you. He's just returned from the continent," continued Louise, "(oh, what a love of a bertha, Mattie!—and has brought home a French valet, who is almost as handsome as his master, and who is turning the head of every maid in the house. How delightful it is to hear them talk French—master and man! Mattie, where did you ever find this perfect trimming?"

"I haven't seen him for nearly five years," said Gertrude; "but I used to be desperately in love with him. Such handsome eyes as he had!"

"He is very rich, which is much more to the purpose," said Julia, whose twenty-six summers had brought her to appreciate the practical part of life. "Mattie, you homely little thing," she added, "what are you dreaming about?"

I got up from the floor where I had been sitting for the last ten minutes, with my hair about my shoulders, and went to see what a bright color there was upon my cheeks.

My sisters were dressed in a few moments more, and went down stairs with Louise. When the sound of their voices had died away I threw myself upon the carpet by a chair and fell to dreaming. Five years before—it did not seem long—I had seen Hugh Cheston, and for the only time in my life. It was on the night of a party given at my father's house, in honor of my sister Gertrude's eighteenth birthday. Little more than two years before I had lost my dear mother, and the idea of a crowd of young people thronging the room where she had rested in her coffin on that last sad day, filled my childish heart with grief and indignation. But no one took any notice of me. I knelt there by the window of my little room, which was in a wing of the house, and overlooked the terrace of the main building—my face wet with tears, and the most wretched feeling I had ever felt lingering around me. Suddenly a light from the ball room streamed out broadly upon the darkness, as some one drew the window drapery aside, and an instant afterwards two persons stepped out upon the terrace. It was my sister Gertrude and a gentleman. I could hear their words plainly as they passed backwards and forwards. They talked carelessly and gaily about a great many things, some of which I could understand, but others I could not. At last I was startled into a sudden attention by hearing my name mentioned:

"What is that?" he said.

"What?" said my sister. "What do you mean, Mr. Cheston?"

"I thought I caught a glimpse of a child's face at that window," replied the gentlemen. "And if I am not mistaken it is wet with tears."

I drew back quietly with a beating heart, but I heard my sister say, "Oh, 'tis Mattie, my little sister, I suppose. The child is averse to our giving this party to-night, and declares that we are all heartless and forgetful of my dear mother. Of course, as you are aware, the idea is very absurd, but no one could make her believe it, and she has shut herself up in her room and cried all day."

Gertrude has told the truth. These were just the facts of the case. If her words had called forth a smile from her companion, I should have hated him forever; but peeping carefully from behind the curtain I saw his face as he passed by the lighted windows, and it was grave and gentle as I could have wished. He made Gertrude no reply.

A few moments afterwards they stepped through the window into the room again. Leaning back into my old place I dropped my head into my hands and fell to thinking, but not of my troubles. Suddenly I was startled by hearing my name called. After a moment's bewildered hesitation I leaned forward and looked out. Mr. Cheston was standing alone upon the terrace.

"Won't you come down a moment?" he said, smiling at my frightened face. "I want to talk with you."

Springing up, I left my room, and tripping lightly down the stairs, stepped through the hall doo upon the terrace, and stood before him with a beating heart. He took my hand, and stooping down looked kindly into my face.

"What have you been crying for he said gently.

"You know," I replied laconically.

"So I do, little Mattie," he said smilingly; and I called you down because I wished to tell you that I don't think you foolish at all, as the others do, and that I am very sorry for you.

I allowed him to kiss me, which was a liberty I should have indignantly resented under any other circumstances.

In a few months I am going away, and shall be gone for several years," he said, after a pause, during which he looked keenly but kindly into my downcast face. "When I come back you will be a young lady, Mattie.

"I know it," said I. "And I'm very sorry for it."

"For what reason?" he asked.

"Because I don't like young ladies," I replied.

"Why not?" he asked.

"They are so foolish," I said. "They talk about nothing else but dress, and gentlemen, and parties, and are always the very crossest people in the world to me."

The idea that Mr. Cheston was laughing at me flashed into my mind as I finished speaking; but glancing up quickly into his face, I saw that it was unusually grave.

"Your opinion of your sex is not a very flattering one, however truthful it may be," he said. "Do you believe all young ladies are like these, whom you see every day?"

"I don't know," I said.

"Do you think it necessary that they should be?" he asked.

"No sir," I said, "for I don't think my mother was such a young lady."

"Don't you think that you could grow up to be a sensible, useful woman, if you were to try?" he asked.

"Yes sir," said I.

"Will you try?" he asked.

"I will," was my earnest reply.

"And I hope you may succeed, my dear Mattie, both for your sake and my own," said Mr. Cheston. "Now I must leave you. Will you kiss me good by?"

I astonished myself very much by the act, when I pressed my lips to his, as he bent down. Something in my face attracted his attention a moment after, and he laughed.

"You are a queer little thing," he said. "What would you tell me if I were to ask you if you liked me?"

"The truth, of course," I replied.

"Then I'll spare your blushed you remarkable morsel of womanhood," he said. "But, Mattie," he continued, more seriously, "will you kiss me when I come back?"

"Yes, sir," said I.

"You will be a young lady then, remember."

"But I shall be myself just the same," I said.

"So you will," said he. "I shall hold you to your promise. Remember it. Now, good-by."

He turned away as some one came upon the terrace, and I sprung through the hall door, and flew back to my room. And this was the scene I was thinking over as I sat upon the floor of my room at the beautiful country seat of the Anslies—a girl of seventeen, dark, plain, shy, and sensitive.

"Mattie, what for mercy's sake are you doing that you are not dressed yet?" 'Tis nearly dinner time," said my sister Julia, dashing into the room for something, and stopping short as her eyes fell upon me. "Have you been asleep?"

"No," said I, sullenly, getting up and going to the mirror.

"Oh, you queer child," said she. "Now do be quick. You'll find me in the drawing room if you ever get ready to come down," and out she swept.

I think there are few persons in the world who can understand what I suffered when I entered the room where Mr. Cheston was. Everything was a blank to me as I crossed to the window where my sister sat. I realized nothing in existence but the heavy pulsations of my heart, which seemed as if they would beat out my life. When I came to my senses I was sitting by good Mrs. Wilson, who was always kind to me, and whom I sometimes thought I loved better than either Julia or Gertrude.

"You did not expect to see so many people, dear, and were frightened," she said, with a smile on her kind, motherly face. "I saw it the moment you entered the door."

I answered, only with a glance, and slipped my hand into hers.

"Mrs. Wilson," said my sister Gertrude, "if Mr. Cheston comes this way again I want you to take Mattie round to the other side of you. You will won't you?"

"No, my dear, that is very ungenerous of you," replied Mrs. Wilson. "I shall warn Mr. Cheston that you have serious designs on him."

"I don't see the necessity of warning a person against a danger of which he is already aware," snapped a young lady with very black eyes, who stood behind the sofa on which we sat.

Gertrude turned round with a crimson face

"What is the subject of discussion? Won't you admit me to your confidence, ladies?" said a familiar voice, so near my ear that I started in affright.

The black eyed young lady slipped aside to give Mr. Cheston a place near us. Several persons were presented to him; I among others. He paid me no particular attention, and took a chair beside Gertrude.

"Didn't you inquire what we were talking about? Mr. Cheston," said the black-eyed young lady.

"I believe I had the audacity to do so," he replied, smiling. But the smile was very different from the one I remembered to have seen upon his face.

"We were speaking of kisses," said Gertrude, quickly, with a saucy smile. "And Hattie Latimer declared that she didn't believe you cared for them."

I started. I had never before heard my sister utter a deliberate falsehood.

"I am very sorry that Miss Lattimer thinks me so indifferent to the most perfect luxury in life," he replied, glancing up at her.

"Victory, Hattie! Mr. Cheston does believe in Kisses," cried Gertrude, with a smile so bright as to dazzle the eyes, so that but two of us saw the hidden malice.

I think Miss Hattie was about making an attempt to struggle out of the position into which my sister had thrust her; but Louise Anslie, who had sauntered up a moment before, exclaimed, "Oh, Mr. Cheston, don't you remember that you once attended a British party, and wore the most dissatisfied face I ever saw in my life, all the evening?"

"But, Mrs. Anslie, that was because I consider forfeits a sacrilege of the caress," he replied.

"It is converting the beautiful into the useful, and ruining its peculiar value by so noing. I regrit, however that my face betrayed my feelings. I assure you that the rudeness was not intentional.

"Mr. Cheston is apparently unconscious that several ladies are looking at him very admiringly," said a low voice near me.

I turned round. It was Mr. Maynard, who spoke, a frame of indolence beaming with light and coming forward, sat down beside me. It was Mr. Cheston.

"Mattie," said he, I intend going away before 9 o'clock to-morrow morning, and shall probably not see you again. I did not reply; and he continued—"Haven't I a right to ask for a good-by kiss?"

The light was not so dim but that I could see a laughing light in his eyes.

"You have the right which the promise of a child gives you, I suppose," I replied, somewhat annoyed by his light manner. "It was so little for him to say good by to me. It was so much for me to say good-by to him.

"A child in years you certainly were, Matie, but more of a woman at heart than thousands twice four age," said he. "Do you know that you made a conquest of me, little one, when you kissed me in the darkness that knight?"

"A conquest? I said, startled.

"I carried that kiss away with me," he replied. "I loved the remembrance of it as I did my life. I would not have parted with it for all the wealth in the world, for it was a sweet hope on which hung all my light of the future. The lips of no other woman have pressed to mine since then. I said to myself that, until I kissed another, your kiss remained. Do you understand?"

My eyes were full of tears, but I tried to answer.

"You were a sweet child, Mattie," he continued, "and have grown into a sweet woman—such a woman as I have been waiting to find that I might marry. Now I ask you for that promised kiss, and if you give it to me I shall take it for granted that you give me your self with it."

Mr. Cheston was sure of what I had never acknowledged to myself—my love for him. I felt it in the confident clasp of his arm; I saw it in the confident glances of his eyes; and content, that he should read the heart of which he was so certainly the master, I acted my simple self, and gave him 'The Promised Kiss.'

Several of our party had returned home, and one clear September morning Mr. Cheston informed Mr. Anslie at the breakfast-table, that he must return to town the next morning. It frightened me to know how shocked and pained I was, and at the first opportunity I rose and left the room.

That evening, when the drawing room was deserted by the few that remained of the gay company, and I could hear their gay voices far down the moonlit park, I strolled into the dark, silent room, and [illegible] stately form one sketched upon the [illegible] light and coming forward, sat down beside me. It was Mr. Cheston.

"Mattie," said he, I intend going away before 9 o'clock to-morrow morning, and shall probably not see you again. I did not reply; and he continued—"Haven't I a right to ask for a good-by kiss?"

I think Miss Hattie was about making an attempt to struggle out of the position into which my sister had thrust her; but Louise Anslie, who had sauntered up a moment before, exclaimed, "Oh, Mr. Cheston, don't you remember that you once attended a British party, and wore the most dissatisfied face I ever saw in my life, all the evening?"

Rose Lawson's bright eyes were fixed upon the gentleman in question.

"Take care, Mr. Cheston," cried Gertrude. "I'm afraid you don't know what you are bringing upon yourself. Having declared yourself so much in favor of the 'most perfect luxury in life,' we young ladies may have you quite at our mercy. According to your assertion, I doubt if you could resist the reward of a kiss from a pretty girl who might be suing for a favor. Could you?"

"Yes," he replied.

"How so?" she asked.

"Because a kiss given in that way would be of little value," said Mr. Cheston.

"I consider that a very unkind speech, coming as it does from the lips of a man who is well aware that kisses are a lady's favorite bribe," replied Gertrude, finished, but laughing. "It is a most ungallant speech, Mr. Cheston; you must stand trial for punishment."

"I will make it short by choosing Rose Lawton for my judge," he replied, laughing, and glancing up into the smiling eyes of the little beauty.

"Your chastisement shall be to confess whom you kissed last," said she gaily.

"That is not fair," he said.

"Why?" she demanded, quickly.

"Because," said he, "the lady is present, and the punishment would fall neither upon her than me." Whereupon they all burst into a merry laugh.

"Well then, you can tell who you intend to kiss next," said Rose.

"That will not do, either," said he. "I should never be able to put my intention into effect."

"Do you keep an account of your kisses as you do of your expenses, Cheston!" called out Mr. Maynard.

"Yes," replied Mr. Cheston, quietly.

"Now I have it," cried Rose Lawson. "You shall tell me how many ladies you have kissed during the last five years."

"I will do so on condition that my word shall not be doubted," he said gravely.

"We will believe you, certainly, said Rose. "Now listen, good folks!"

"Not one," said Mr. Cheston, quietly; upon which everybody looked astonished.

"Oh, Mr. Cheston, you amaze us!" cried Rose.

"Hugh is probably faithful to some fair lady who favored him before," said Mr. Anslie, who had been listening quietly for a few moments.

"Exactly," said Mr. Cheston, rising with a bow, and turning away to some one who called him impatiently.

Oh, the significant glances and exclamations of wonder that were circulated through the group after his departure!

"And what are you thinking of, little mouse?" said Mrs. Wilson, bending towards me. "Your cheeks are as red as roses."

She would have been overwhelmed with astonishment if I had told her.

* * * *

Three weeks passed, and Mr. Cheston and I were on no more intimate terms than we had been on that first evening. We rarely met except at the table or in the drawing room of an evening, and he seldom addressed me when we did meet. By degrees I overcame my shyness and sensitiveness regarding him. He had forgotten, I thought, the romantic incident of my childhood, which had always had such a charm for me, and I wondered at myself for ever supposing that he had remembered it beyond the moment. It made me a little sad to know that all my pleasant thoughts concerning it were useless in the air, and slightly humiliating, in connection with his polite indifference to me, to know that those thoughts were many.

Mr. Cheston was a great lion among the people at 'The Maples.' The ladies liked him; the gentlemen were jealous of him while they strove to imitate him. My sister Gertrude declared privately that she was in love with him. Everybody talked of him; everybody admired him, either secretly or openly.

The summer wore gradually away.

☞ No vocabulary can furnish language sufficiently strong in commendation of that excellent and indispensable article known as the J. Monroe Taylor Gold Medal Soda. The lady having aught to do in any household department, from the washtub to the finest needle work, should not fail to supply herself with a year stock. It only requires a person to use it once to use it their whole life. Most of the grocers sells it.

☞ No more puny children, decryed teeth, or yellow bread, if you will use Herrick Allen's Gold Medal Saleratus. There is nothing equal to it. It is far superior to soda to use with cream tartar. Bread or Biscuit raised by it is more easily digested than by any other. Try one paper, and you will not fail to use it ever after. Have the Gold Medal or none. Grocers and Druggists keep it.

A SHARP WOMAN.—An elderly lady telling her age, remarked she was born on the 23rd of April. Her husband, who was present, observed, "I always thought you were born on the 1st of April." "People might well judge so," rejoinded the lady, "from the choice I made of a husband!"

The Tecumseh Herald.

TECUMSEH, MICH., OCT. 27, 1864

Monday, October 24.

Yellow fever is still raging at Charleston and Wilmington. One hundred and nineteen deaths occurred at the latter place in 24 hours. At Charleston the mortality is said to be terrible among children.

An engagement took place between Gens. Blunt and Price, in Missouri, on Saturday, which resulted in the former being driven back. Blunt lost 50 men, but it is said Pleasanton is co-operating with Curtis and Rosecrans, who are near also in the vicinity with his command.

Gen. Butler has released those prisoners whom he had at work on the Dutch Gap canal since learning Gen. Lee's order to the same effect relative to colored troops which had been placed under fire of our artillery. The latter has agreed to treat colored soldiers as prisoners of war. There will probably be no more difficulty from that cause.

Twelve of the St. Albans raiders are in jail in Canada, and great excitement exists among the citizens. A troop of cavalry were called out to prevent the rescue of the robbers. The amount taken by them amounted to $223,000; a greater portion, however, has been recovered. The rebel Lieutenant in charge of the raiders, has published a letter which we transfer to our columns this morning, giving his views of the affair; he claims to be a regularly commissioned officer of the rebel Government, and says it was his intention to burn St. Albans and the surrounding villages in retaliation for Sheridan's operations in the Shenandoah Valley.

Business at New Orleans has stopped, and will not be resumed until the trade regulations are removed.

Tuesday October 25.

Gen. Argur's plan of placing prominent secessionists on railroad trains, run- [illegible] works well. Firing on trains has entirely ceased, and it is believed that the guerrillas have left the vicinity.

It is now stated upon the authority of our Washington and New York dispatches, that Secretary Stanton, of the War Department, will be appointed to the Chief Justiceship made vacant by the death of Judge Taney. Cameron, Banks and Butler are prominently named as likely to fill the War Office.

Gen. Custer has been promoted to a Major General, in consideration of brilliant service in the Valley. This was announced to Gen. Custer at the War Department yesterday during the presentation of flags captured by Gen. Sheridan in his late victories at Cedar Creek. The announcement was received with loud applause by a large crowd assembled to witness the presentation. This is showering honors on a true, noble, faithful and deserving officer in every respect.

Gen Ricketts is reported to be in a low and failing condition. The ball was extracted from near the shoulder blade, but it is believed internal bleeding has commenced, caused by the cutting of an artery.

A Richmond paper of the 21st says there are no signs of our army into winter quarters. Good. We opine there will be less going into quarters of the army of the Potomac this year than any time since the war began. Our noble chieftain, Gen. Grant, don't propose to winter outside the city of Richmond, where good accommodations await his faithful soldiers.

The situation in Northern Georgia remains about the same. Both Sherman's and Hood's armies are in Whitefield, Walker and Dade counties, where the commanding officers are trying to get advantage one of the other. The wily Sherman has outgeneraled the rebel Hood before, and we have no fears but he will do it again. Hood's great aim is to get into Alabam, bu he was shut out by a range of mountains. His army is obliged to subsist on roasted corn.

Wednesday, October 26.

The immense gun at Fort Hamilton, New York harbor, the largest in the world, will be tested to-day. It is expected that ten shots will be fired, commencing at 11 o'clock. The weight of the ball used in this gun is about half a ton.

The soldiers in Gen. Grant's army are engaged in voting for President. Several regiments of New York troops have given large majorities for McClellan, while others have voted almost a unit Abraham Lincoln. Gen. Grant, it is said, will insist, on the Commissioners leaving at once, or make some arrangements whereby the attention of the soldiers will not be taken up while important military movements are pending. Political discussions excite the soldiers, and in some cases lead them to neglect their duties.

Late Richmond papers call attention to the fact that the rebel soldiers are in the habit of getting drunk, and ascribe the late defeat of Early's army to such a [illegible]

Important Indian Treaty.

Dr. Alvord, Special Commissioner for the United States, and Mr. Leach, Indian agent, concluded an important treaty with the Chippewas of Saginaw, Swan Creek and Black River, at the Isabella Indian Reservation, on the 19th inst.

The leading features of the treaty are as follows, viz:

The Indians relinquish their reservation of six townships on the Saginaw Bay, and also the right to locate 36,000 acres of land outside of the six townships in 1855 for Indian purposes.

The United States gives to the Indians all of the unsold land in the six townships in Isabella county, to be divided severally among the Indians as follows, viz.:

To each head of a family, 80 acres;

To each single person 21 years of age, 40 acres;

To each orphan child, 40 acres.

To each child now raising, or who may be born hereafter, when he or she shall arrive at the age of 21 years, 40 acres, so long as any of the land on the reservide lands for their young men and women for at least 40 or 50 years.

The treaty also provides for the establishment of a mutual labor school on the reservation, for the support of which the United States gives $2,000 a year for 10 years. The school is to be under the control of the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, and the necessary buildings are to be erected at the expense of said society, who now have some $4,000 in money and lands belonging to that mission. A Board of Visitors, consisting of Mr. Leach, the Governor, and the Superintendent of Public Instruction, and one to be appointed by the Missionary Society is provided for, who are to visit the school once a year, and examine the same, and also the character and qualifications of all persons connected therewith, and report thereon to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The treaty also provides for the issuance of patents to the Indians in fee simple to those who are competen to manage their affairs, but to those not competent the patents will contain a provison that the land shall never be sold or alienated without the consent of the Secretary of the Interior.

The treaty contains many minor provisions beneficial to Indians, which we have not time to mention.

We are informed that the treaty gives universal satisfaction to the Indians, as well as to the whites. Messrs. Alvord and Leach deserve great credit for its successful accomplishment.

Dr. Alvord reports that the Indians are in a prosperous condition, and have the best feeling toward the Government. Many of them have fine farms, which are well cultivated, and yield quite a surplus.

☞ The destruction of rebel property in the Shenandoah Valley, as the only means of preventin the recurrence of the destructive raids of the enemy which have been such an annoyance since the beginning of the war, is going forward. The Richmond papers counsel retaliation, by employing incendiaries to burn the principal cities of the North. They say that a million of dollars would burn our proudest cities, and that if we should resort to the same method they would still have the advantage, as New York is worth a dozen such cities as Richmond or Charleston.

☞ A firm in Philadelphia has invented a scientific apparatus for lighting gas by electricity. It is a neat and elegant fixture, consisting of a brass cup, lined with silk, a loosely fitting India rubber stopper, and an insulated copper wire coil, with a platinum point, directly over the burner. Within the stopper is placed a small piece of tin foil, to hold or store for use the electricity generated by the friction of the India rubber upon the silk lining of the cup. While the cup is closed there is a complete electric current is broken, and the electricity passes down the coil of wire to the burner. At the same moment the gas is turned on, and is instantly lighted.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—The World's Washington special to-night says advices from the Shenandoah received to-day show that no movements of importance have been made. The enemy are in no position and have made no demonstration of any kind since their abandonment of Fisher's Hill.

The Tribune's special, dated Martinsburg, the 25th, says 1,100 prisoners have just arrived from the front, being the first instalment of about 4,000, taken on the 19th. We have 64 guns captured, including 26 taken from us by the enemy in the morning.

☞ Two men were captured on Saturday in the vicinity of Warrenton by Capt. McPherson of the 160th New York, who represented themselves as Lieut. H. Turner, aide to Gen. Lee, and Capt. D. H. Maguire, of the 6th Virginia cavalry, but it is believed he is Capt. Chapman of Mosby's guerrillas.

Lieut. Colonel Savlers.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 18, 1864.

Col. L. Saviers, (at that time Major,) served in the First Division, 2nd Army Corps, while that Division was under my command.

I always regarded Col. Saviers as, in every respect, one of the best officers I had, and in the management of a skirmish line, I have never seen his equal.

Col. Saviers was always prompt, faithful and efficient, in the discharge of his duties, and served most gallantly until [illegible] paign,

At a meeting of the officers of the 26th Michigan Volunteers, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Whereas, Our late commander, Col. Lemuel Saviers, has been obliged to retire from the service on account of disability caused by wounds received in action at Spottsylvania, Va., May 12th, 1864, while bravely leading his command to the assault of the enemy's works on

Resolved, That in the retirement of Col. Saviers, the regiment has lost an able and efficient commander, an officer of rare merits and ability, and a gentleman of unblemished character.

Resolved, That our thanks are due to him for the high state of discipline and perfection in drill to which he brought the regiment while under his command, and which has won for it an enviable reputation during the terrible campaign of 1864.

Resolved, That our best wishes accompany him, with the earnest desire that his health, now seriously impaired, may be speedily restored, and he permitted to live a long, happy and useful life.

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolutions be forwarded Col. Saviers.

Manufacture of Glass Beads.

Besides the invention of mirrors, reticulated glasses, for which we have to thank the Venetians, the art of making glass beads was also first discovered in the glass-houses of Murano, and is practised there at the present day on an extensive scale.

The small glass beads are fragments cut from small pieces of glass tubing, the sharp edges of which are rounded by fusion. Glass tubes of the proper size are first drawn from one hundred to two hundred feet in length, and of all possible colors, (in Venice they prpeare two hundred different shades,) and are broken into lengths of two feet. These are then cut by the aid of a knife into fragments of the same length as their diameters; they now they now present the form of beads, the edges of which, however, are so sharp that they would cut the thread on which they are strung. The edges have consequently to be rounded by fusion; and this operation must be preformed upon a great number at once, and they must not be allowed to stick together, they are mixed with coal dust and powdered clay previous to their being placed in the revolving cylinder in which they are heated. The finished beads are then passed through sieves sorted to their size, and strung upon threads by women.

There is another kind besides the ordinary knitting-beads manufactured, called perles a la lune, which are firmer and more expensive. These are prepared by twisting a small cord of glass softened by the glass-blower's lamp, round an iron wire.

The glass beads made in imitation of natural pearls for toilet ornaments, the invention of which dates from the year 1656, are very different from the preceeding, both as regards their aplication, mode of production and origin. Jaquin, a maker of rosaries, was the first to discover that the scales of a species of fish of black comunicate a pearly hue to the water. Based upon this observation, glass gobnlets were first covered on the outside, but at a later on the inside, with this aqueous essence. The costly essence, however, of which only quarter of a pound could be obtained from the scales of four thousand fishes, was subject to get one great evil, that of decay. After trying alcohol without success, in consequence of its destroying the lustre of the substance, sal-ammoniac was at length found to be the best medium in which to apply the escence; a little isinglass is also mixed with it, which causes it to adhere better. The pearls are blown singly at the lamp; a drop of essence is then blown into them through a tin tube, spread out by rolling, and the dried varnish is then covered in a similar by a layer of wax.

☞ The grea "Bed of Ware," which Charles Dickens recently purchase, is said to have been built at the union of the houses of York and Lancaster. It is 12 feet square, the posts are of mucmmo size, and are carved with red and white roses, the date, 1573, is painted on the headboard. This beadstead weighs half a ton, and 10 persons can repose on it comfort-

Details of Wednesday's Victory.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The Herald's army correspondent's account of Gen. Sheridan's victory, printed this morning, is of a highly interesting character. The following is an account of how Sheridan won the victory: After taking command, about half past one o'clock, Gen. Sheridan commenced driving the rebels. The 19th Corps' lines were thrown forward, and, with their batteries playing briskly on the rebel position, affairs began to assume a more cheerful aspect. The rebels [illegible] forts in the morning, for their yells at this time were both few and far between. Our lines continually advanced, slowly, it is true, but very surely. The charge which decided the fate of this eventful day was made at 4 o'clock p. m. Fifteen minutes before that time, Gen. Getty's division, 6th Corps, formed in two lines of battle on an open piece of ground on the right of the turnpike. The other divisions of that corps and Gen. Emery's command of the 19th Corps, formed in a similar manner, but under cover of the

At 4 o'clock the line commenced to move forward. More than half the distance was traversed, and scarcely a shot fired. Then suddenly the rebel batteries opened with terrific effect on our advancing lines. The spectators held their breath, or asked in hushed and eager whispers whether the troops would meet with success their bravery merited. But mingling with the roar of artillery and the din of exploding shells, was now heard the roll of musketry. The firing was the most constant and rapid which has ever been heard in the Valley, and was never equaled on this continent except at the battle of the Wilderness. Our troops wavered under the withering fire of the rebel batteries, but they did not give way or fall back. When but a short distance from the rebel lines, the last grand rush was made. Our men were inside their lines and the day was won. Without any regard to the order of their going, the rebels fled through the streets of Middletown, leaving their guns in our hands, and many small arms and several stands of colors. Gen. Sheridan with his usual promptness ordered a pursuit to be kept up. Our cavalry was at once ordered forward, and the rebels continued their flight over Cedar Creek, en route for Strasburg, which place they also left in their rear shortly after sunset. During the latter part of the day, the rebel Gen. Ramseur was mortally wounded and he subsequently fell into our hands, and the rebel Gen. Lodor, commanding a brigade in Kershaw's divisions is also reported killed, and his body in our hands.

The substantial results of this victory are now to be seen in the shape of 43 pieces of artillery, and a large number of wagons and ambulances. Gen. Custar has just sent in word that the prisoners he has captured are being constantly increased, and that assistance will be needed to guard them. Gen. Sheridan has kept his word, and re-established headquarters in the place they occupied this morning; the different corps have also gone back to their old camping grounds. Our wounded have been sent to Newtown and Winchester, where everything is being done for their comfort. Of course, at this time no estimate can be made of the losses on either side, and the country between here and Winchester is filled with stragglers, who will doubtless return to their commands in a few days, which will reduce our at this time apparently great losses. The rebels are being followed up with the greatest vigor, and our advance will doubtless be somewhere in the vicinity of Woodstock before morning. This has been the most complete and crushing defeat Gen. Sheridan has inflicted on the old man Early, and it is extremely problematical whether the latter will again endeavor to dispute with him the possession of the Valley. Capt. Beers, Gen. Crook's Adjutant General, was killed early in the day. Maj. Hart, Inspector General on the staff of Gen. Grover, was severely wounded. During the early part of the day, while endeavoring to save some artillery, Captain David C. Knowlton, of the 114th New York, was killed; Major Jones, of the 6th New York, was mortally wounded early in the day.

Since writing the above, I learn that Gen. Custer has captured several more pieces of artillery from the retreating rebels.

☞ A man named Luther, employed in an oil refinery near Pittsburg, Pa., was fatally burned on Thursday last. He had gone into the still for the purpose of cleaning it, having with him a candle. There was a little oil yet remaining in the still, which caught fire from the candle, and in a moment M. Luther was enveloped in flames. When he was rescued, he was so badly burned that his physician has no hope of his recovery.

☞ A frightful accident has just taken place at Ulm, from petroleum oil. During a repentation at the theatre, 24 lamps attached to the chandelier susbended from the roof burst in succession, with great rapidity, and the burning oil fell like a shower of fire on the spectators, among whom were a number of ladies. In a moment the dresses of 20 of them were in flames. Several died within a few hours afterwards.

☞ IRISH AND SCOTCH ROYALTY.—When george the Fourth went to Leland, one of the "paintry," delighted with his affability to keep the crowd on landing, said to the toll-keeper, as the king passed through, "Coll, now! "Then there's the dirty money for ye," says pat; "it shall never be said that the King came here, and found nobody to pay the turnpike for him." Tom Moore, on his visit to Appotsford, told this story to one Walter Scott, when they were comparing notes as to the two royal visits. The next morning Grisney was found hanging to the limb of a tree on the river bank.

Attempt at Robbery and Murder.

Last Sabbath evening 17 years old, as one of my boys, a aunt's, living near Pennington's [illegible], and when nearly half-way he saw some persons with horses standing in the road just ahead of him, he supposing them to be some of the neighbors until he came to them, but proved to be two men with three horses. When he came up, he had to pass within five or six feet of them, and when about opposite them was accosted with: 'Where are you going?' to which he replied I am going home. 'That you won't,' 'The boy again said he should. 'Not to-night you won't with that horse.' At this instant the boy started his horse on the run, and at the same time he saw the villian whipping his horse and start after him. The boy and horse were to quick for the infernal rascal, and when the fiend saw that the boy had eluded his grasp, he fired his pistol at him; but thank Heaven the ball only whistled by his right side. The one having the two horses did not speak but stood still while the other gave chase some twenty-five rods and then came to the house. Of course the boy was not long in coming 1 1-2 miles, when myself and others immediately informed more than half a dozen of the neighbors, but no particular advice or council could I get from one of them, nor no help to pursue those thieves and murderers.—Some looked upon this outrageous act as a very trifling affair and others had not moral, manly or humane principals enough to act, and a third class were cowards and dare not act, and so the robbers and murderers were allowed to go unpunished. I would ask, would not those neighbors and fathers feel interested if they had a horse and boy placed in a like situation. Is it not high time that the community were awake and on the look-out for those marauders that infest the country.

PENINGTON.

Macon, Oct. 25th, 1864.

Married,

At the residence of the bride's brother in law, T. T. Kneeland, Esq., on Tuesday Oct. 25th, 1864, by the Rev. E. N. Nichols, Mr. Homer L. Stewart, Esq. of Desmoines, Iowa, and Miss Fannie J. Brewer, of this place.

Beloved by all, and even from childhood one of our social circle here, we cannot but greatly miss the youthful bride thus taken from our midst, but with the warmest wishes for their mutual happiness, we shall ever follow them to their [illegible] and hope to often welcome them as from time to time they shall again revisit their childhood's early home.

Oct. 19th, by Rev. D. C. Wright, Mr. Gregg S. Henry and Miss Helen M. Robison.

Died,

At Tecumseh, on Sunday, Oct. 23d, 1864, after a brief illness of Typhoid Fever, Moses Y. Hood, Esq., aged 40 yrs.

This is indeed a sudden and afflictive dispensation, and has cast a gloom upon the entire community. Mr. Hood was one of our most esteemed merchants, being a member of the firm of A. Hood & Co., a man of fine social qualities, great public spirit, undoubted integrity and lofty christian character and died as he had lived in the full triumph of a christian's faith.

He was ill only a few days and was hardly considered dangerously so until a short time previous to his death. All the stores of the place were closed upon the day of his interment in our village cemetery, as a fitting momento of sorrow, that a true and good man was thus early and unexpectedly taken from our midst.

He leaves, besides his two brothers and widowed mother, a bereaved wife, and an only son to mourn his early loss. But 'tis not Death! What seems so is transition;

This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysion
Whose portal we call Death.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from July 15, 1864, which notes shall bear interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum, interest accrued and unpaid to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder into gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect. They will be issued in denominations of $50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and will be subject to no taxation, either by the United States or any State or municipality. They will be exempt from the payment of income tax, and will be received at par in payment of all dues to the United States except duties on imports, which are payable in coin. They will be issued in exchange for Compound Interest Notes, and will be delivered free of transportation charges, when offered in the original certificates of Deposit in the order they shall be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for three days at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

It is a NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation.

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be coupon or registered notes. When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

"By proving their merits are proven, For the sick healing balsam is sent."

and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

for exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
	Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of any local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box; or 5 boxes for $1.

R. EAT IMPROVEMENT
TIGHT STITCH
SEWING MACHINES
WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superseding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity of construction of management, so that diligent minute instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stitch alike

Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not impede it.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and ex-time and keep in ord.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

THE TIGER'S LEAP.

BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR., ESQ.

The American ship Cremona was on the eve of leaving Calcutta on her homeward-bound passage. The starboard anchor hung at the cathead, and the other was already a-peak—the sails hung in graceful festoons from the clewlines and buntlines, the studding sail gear was all rigged, the topsail halyards were cleared ready for running, and all that good ship waited for was the presence of Mr. Bowditch, the owner, who was going home in her.

At length Mr. Bowditch came, accompanied by his daughter Mary, a girl of some thirteen years of age, and two Malay servants. Most of his luggage had been on board for several days, but on the present occasion he brought off a huge box which he desired to have very carefully taken over the side, and after all was safe and snug, and the old ship fairly under headway, the men learned that the great box contained no more nor less than a large Bengal Tiger.

At any time the immediate neighborhood of the Royal Tiger wears an atmosphere anything but pleasant, but when the neighborhood is bounded by the narrow confines of shipboard, it is reasonable to suppose that some anxiety, at least may be exercised on the occasion. Some of the sailors on board the Cremona were rather inclined to superstition—not more so, perhaps, than the common run of sailors—and under the peculiar circumstances of the present case, they found plenty of food for superstitious dread; but then the thing was done, and it couldn't be undone—the tiger was on board, and they concluded that they must make the best of it.

One man in particular, by the name of White, who belonged in Connecticut, experienced the utmost dread of the forest tyrant, and no assurances on the part of those who felt perfectly secure, could set his mind at ease.

The cage was in the hold, directly beneath the main hatchway, and ever anon, as the deep savage growl of the Royal Bengal came up like the rumbling of an earthquake from the bowels of the ship, White would start back from his occupation, whatever it might be, and tremblingly, stand, like one thunderstruck, till the noise had ceased. Not many weeks before, poor White had been one of a party who went up the Hoogly as far as Burdwan after a boatload of ivory, and on their return, as they were stopping at a spring which bubbles up on the edge of a large jungle just above Chilsura, the party were startled by the cry—

"I b'lieve you isn't married, Ned?
You doesn't know the sweets.
Vich exists upon that sacred state,
Ven man and women meets?
The bussum's vurm emotions, Ned,
And the nice vashed things, and the starched stock'ns

The American ship Cremona was on the eve of leaving Calcutta on her homeward-bound passage. The starboard anchor hung at the cathead, and the other was already a-peak—the sails hung in graceful festoons from the clewlines and buntlines, the studding sail gear was all rigged, the topsail halyards were cleared ready for running, and all that good ship waited for was the presence of Mr. Bowditch, the owner, who was going home in her.

At length Mr. Bowditch came, accompanied by his daughter Mary, a girl of some thirteen years of age, and two Malay servants. Most of his luggage had been on board for several days, but on the present occasion he brought off a huge box which he desired to have very carefully taken over the side, and after all was safe and snug, and the old ship fairly under headway, the men learned that the great box contained no more nor less than a large Bengal Tiger.

At any time the immediate neighborhood of the Royal Tiger wears an atmosphere anything but pleasant, but when the neighborhood is bounded by the narrow confines of shipboard, it is reasonable to suppose that some anxiety, at least may be exercised on the occasion. Some of the sailors on board the Cremona were rather inclined to superstition—not more so, perhaps, than the common run of sailors—and under the peculiar circumstances of the present case, they found plenty of food for superstitious dread; but then the thing was done, and it couldn't be undone—the tiger was on board, and they concluded that they must make the best of it.

One man in particular, by the name of White, who belonged in Connecticut, experienced the utmost dread of the forest tyrant, and no assurances on the part of those who felt perfectly secure, could set his mind at ease.

The cage was in the hold, directly beneath the main hatchway, and ever anon, as the deep savage growl of the Royal Bengal came up like the rumbling of an earthquake from the bowels of the ship, White would start back from his occupation, whatever it might be, and tremblingly, stand, like one thunderstruck, till the noise had ceased. Not many weeks before, poor White had been one of a party who went up the Hoogly as far as Burdwan after a boatload of ivory, and on their return, as they were stopping at a spring which bubbles up on the edge of a large jungle just above Chilsura, the party were startled by the cry—

"I tiger! I tiger!"

Every man knew the voice of the native guide.

The water buckets were dropped, and all hands rushed for the boat, but just as White placed his right foot over the bows, a piercing shriek sounded in his ear from one of native guides.

The water buckets were dropped, and all hands rushed for the boat, but just as White placed his right foot over the bows, a piercing shriek sounded in his ear the spring, and on the edge of the thick jungle, his only brother, a youth not more than 16 years of age, within the fatal grasp of the tiger.

The ill-fated boy gave one more cry, and then the sharp fangs of the brute purple life-tide went forth from [illegible] that soon ceased beating.

The horror-stricken White gained the ship, but he was in a state of mind which for some time totally unfitted him for work, and he was just getting over his peculiar debility when his nerves were again set in quick vibration by the presence of the animal which Mr. Bowditch had brought on board.

"This is the ship of death!" said White, as Capt. Langdon tried to assure him that there could possibly be no danger; "the edifice of death is on board the Cremona, and woe be to him who first feels its cold gripe.

"I thought you had got over your fright," said Capt. Langdon in return, as White let go of the wheel with his right hand and drew the sleeve of his jacket across his eyes.

"Fright, sir," answered the hardy sailor, as he raised his eyes from the compass, and regarded his commander with a mournful look; was it a fright, sir, to have an only brother sacrificed to the tiger-demon? to have left that boys bones to whiten beneath the heathen sun of Bengal?

Oh, sir, I saw that boy's face as it seemed turned with mute supplication up toward the spotted satan, and I heard his agonizing cry for mercy as the fiery balls of the monster gleamed upon him—and oh, God—I saw that monster's long white was true, but one thing is certain, it is a very different affair to take care of a full-grown tiger on ship-board from the same office on shore, but nevertheless he answered unhesitatingly—

"Open the hatches, and let Bowditch. And turning to the captain he continued—

"Will you have your men hoist the cage on deck?"

Capt. Langdon gave consent to this request was rigged to the mainmast and hoisted into the stout lashings of the cage, when the men seized the rope and easily swayed the large grated box upon the deck.

The cage was composed of stout teakwood, strongly bolted and barred, the front being e[illegible] save the strong iron rods th[illegible] particularly from the top to the [illegible] and as it was so pointed in the [illegible] it fronted toward the bulwarks, so that the men might pass by the opposite side of the deck without disturbing the inmate.

For some time the tiger seemed much pleased with the change of his situation, which he manifested by the peculiar manner in which he snuffed up the fresh air and lashed about his tail, but in the course of about fifteen minutes his lashing ceased, and soon afterwards all within the cage became as quiet as the grave.

Whenever a long continued silence is which followed the ceasing of the monster's movements, there was something at once startling and oppressive, and more than one brave heart sank a degree lower. A fearful suspicion had taken possession of the men—as they had seen the cage hoisted on deck, the perpendicular bars did not seem to be strong enough—they had not seen them before, for when the cage was hoisted on board, it was entirely closed up; but though each held the suspicion, yet no one dared to give the thought utterance. Harry White's fire that flashed from his eyes was as bright and sparkling as that which shone in the orbs of the beast before him.

"Back, Harry, back!" shouted Captain Langdon. "Here come loaded muskets. Stand back and let the men fire!"

returned Harry, without moving his eyes from the tiger. "I, I, must do my duty first. There is blood upon the demon the calls to me for vengeance. See—these hell-sent fangs that drank my brother's life away—how they glisten and by strength.

As he spoke in accents of almost maniac madness, his body swayed to and fro for an instant, and then just as the tiger strained his nerves for the fatal leap he raised his knife high in the air and rushed forward.

The gleaming eyes of the beast caught the approaching form, and with a low, premonitory growl, the muscles relaxed their strained tension, and the tiger raised himself upon his haunches.

The white fangs glistened horribly within the blood like lips, and the raised paw revealed the fearful armament of sharp hooked claws. All hands on board would have risked much to save the maddened man, but he was too quick for them and every heart ceased its beating as they saw the avenger start forward.

The rays of the setting sun gleamed an instant on the uplifted blade, and on the next it was buried in the side of the monster, but ere it was drawn forth those long fangs had settled upon the canvass covering of the left arm, and upon the instant a sharp grating was heard as the bone cracked and splintered beneath the meeting jaws. Again and again descended the knife, and as each stroke opened some new passage for the monster's blood, that huge paw found its hold in the quivering flesh of Harry White.

The men rushed forward and would fain have rescued their ship mate from two combatants had rolled over together upon the gore stained deck.

In one dark stream mingled the blood of the tiger and the man. Harry White had struck his last blow, and the knife was sunk to the haft in the heart of the beast, from whence he who struck it thither had not the power to draw it forth.

"You may touch them, if you please," said Kouli Thasah, as he regarded the fearful scene, "but all the power on earth cannot loose the death gripe of the tiger. His claws were set like iron into the sides of his victim, and till his eyes close, his muscles will not relax."

But the spectators had not long to wait, for scarcely had the Malay ceased speaking when the royal brute gave one fierce struggle, and then the giant paws laid powerless upon the body of the devoted sailor—his huge jaws settled back, and his head fell like a leaden weight upon the deck. The royal tiger was dead! Little Mary was safe—the men were safe and—oh, how every heart beat with joy, as the truth was known—Harry White still breathed the breath of life!

There was one death the more from the tiger's presence on board that ship; but twas the life of the beast only that went out to fill the prophecy, for Harry White still lives. To be sure he has lost an arm, and the deep marks of the tiger's claws are left to tell the tale of that fearful struggle; but yet he lives, and from the bounty of Mr. Bowditch he enjoys an independence from the wants of this physical world.

Between Enfield and East Windsor, on the beautiful Connecticut, there is a small, red cottage, and its owner may be seen on any pleasant evening, with his pipe in his mouth, sitting upon his piazza in a large arm-chair, which is covered with a huge tiger's skin. That man is Harry White, and if you wish to see his eyes sparkle and snap beneath their heavy lashes, just ask him to tell you about "The Tiger's Leap."

Sharp Practice.

A New York soldier recently stationed at Harper's Ferry, relates the following case of sharp practice:

die else, if they gave them a drink. On one occasion, a peddler came up to the guard on picket and wanted to pass out which the picket said he could do provided the peddler gave him five dollars. The fellow gave him the five dollars, and as the peddler had some shirts at two dollars each, just what the soldier wanted, it was agreed that the money should go for the shirts; but after the latter were rec'd and the peddler was about to walk off, the sentry said:

"Hullo—look here!"

"Well, what is it?"

"Where's my money?"

"I've got it."

"I know that, and I want it."

"But the shirts?"

"Don't talk to me, you swindler, about the shirts—I've paid you for them. Fork over."

And the peddler was compelled to, or else turn back. Rather sharp, that.

John Bull sold.

A Calais, Me, correspondent relates the following incident that happened at St. Stephens, N. B.:

A sea captain recently visited a shop in St. Stephen where the ardent was sold, and asked the price of brandy per gallon. The shop keeper told him that it would be three dollars in good money (meaning specie) or seven dollars in bad

"Well," said the captain, "I will pay you with the bad money."

He took the brandy, and gave the dealer two fives on a broken bank in Boston. In the afternoon the dealer came to Calais, raving about the money; he could not pass it, &c. He found the man who gave it to him, and said:

"Why, that was bad money you gave me. I cannot pass it."

"I knew it was bad money," returned the captain. "You said you would take seven dollars in bad money, and I gave it to you."

"Sold, by thunder!" exclaimed the dealer. "Come over, and I will give you another gallon of brandy to keep dark about it."

But its to good to keep, so I tell the story.

Large Eyes.

"Aven," of Warren, R. I., writes:

I believe it is some months since I sent you anything, for I have not lately felt very musical. However here is something for you. It was related to me by a relative of the little boy mentioned, and though a trifle, it amused me and many others.

Unconscious irreverence is an attribute of childhood. A friend of mine has a little boy who one day received instructions as to the omnipresence of the creator, when he suddenly asked:

"Can god see me in the garret?"

"O, yes," was the reply, "certainly he can."

"But," persisted the little fellow, "can he see me in the night, when it is all dark?"

"Yes," replied his tutor, "he can see you everywhere."

"Well," replied Charley, after musing a moment, "he must have busters of eyes!"

☞ A boy residing in the town of South Danvers in Essex County, went into the water, and not knowing how to swim came near drowning in consequence. His father, who was about half-witted, hearing of it, reprimanded him severely and in closing said:

"Now Sammy, don't you go in swimming again until you know how to swim; if you do I shall whip you hard."

The lad promised obedience.

☞ Let every one protect himself from a sullen, egotistical spirit, for there can be no worse.

The Use of Words.

There is much virtue in an "if," we are assured by Shakespeare. It is a great peace-maker. If you said so and so then expect mischief. But if you had or Harry, and James, William or Edward then all's right and so on. Ah! the value of words in all delicate cases is immeasurable. He who always utters what he thinks, in direct language, may be an honest man, but he cannot be a with the diplomatic "ifs" and "ands" words were only given to us to conceal ideas, we deny that they were bestowed upon us to use with so offensive frankness. There is nothing like qualifying bluntness with an "if," in order to maintain the amenities of social life, and cherish its courtesies. For however obligatory it is upon us to speak the truth at all times (if we speak at all,) there is no necessity for clothing it in language more disagreeable than the occasion demands.

The proper use of words, considered in this sense, is an art of which every man should make himself master, who desires to go through the world with peace and be considered at all amiable. It is not only the virtue in an "if," but the virtue in every other word calculated to soothe or to molify that should be taken into account in our association with each other, for politeness of speech is, half the time, merely the employment of unmeaning terms of compliment; and yet without that politeness, social life would almost retrograde to the rudeness of the barbaric ages. Flattery is politeness exaggerated, or run to excess, and flattery is a thing to be avoided, as one of the worst species of hypocrisy. But in avoiding one extreme, we should not run into its opposite. Hence, in sedulously eschewing flattery, let us just as carefully eschew that plainness of speech which which some vulgar people justly or unjustly knows to be little more than a cowardly desire to outrage the feelings of others from behind a masked battery of unmeaning candor.

☞ It is well known that in law, when a man and his wife are engaged in a lawsuit in making out a docket, she is called up. One day a case occurred where Moses Shaw and ox were engaged in a lawsuit. It so happened that Mrs. Shaw was a stout woman, and a slight mistake was made, which made the affair quite ludicrous. The clerk in making the docket, wrote "Moses Shaw and ox, issues" of Moses Shaw and ox. When the affair came into court, it would have done your readers good to see the laugh go round when the case of Moses Shaw and ox was called. The incident but well fitting joke, was the subject of considerable talk, for some time in the town where the action occurred.

The Moon.

The surface of the moon is only the sixteenth of that of the earth. Supposing that both were exposed to similar changes, and that they had gradually cooled down from a very high temperature—which is nearly certain of the earth—the moon has been in a solid state for a much longer period than the earth. Its present surface is very different from that of the earth. Some of its volcanoes are twenty eight miles in diameter, and 28,000 feet in lngth. As the moon has no atmosphere, the stars, to an inhabitant, would be visible at noon day, and the sky would be perfectly black; but, from the absence of air, and consequently of water, which could be present only as vapor, animal or vegetable life, like what is on our earth, is impossible. The moon is, besides, subjected to extreme changes of temperature. Her day being a fortnight in duration, the heat rises most probably beyond that of boiling water with us; and is estimated that from her night being of equal length, the cold becomes at least 300 degrees below the zero of Fahrenheit.

When the meal before mentioned was ready, the mother, a strong, rugby Irishwoman, came out, and boxing the ears of each of them, said in stern tones, a rich brogue:

"Go into the house, yez young spunkers, bodese, no shoes on your futs, and no breakfast in your bellies."

Beauregard and Hood are both reported with the rebel army in Georgia. The latter recently, in a general order issued to his troops, assured his men that Gen.

ed on a stern policy in Missouri hereafter. The rebels most shamefully treat our wounded, which fall into their hands, invariably leaving them naked, and with wounds undressed.

Six rebel soldiers were shot at St. Louis Saturday in retaliation for the murder of Maj. Wilson's men.

Dispatches from the Shenandoah Valley represent all quiet. Guerrillas between Martinsburg and Winchester are very bold. Strong guards are necessary to protect trains, and persons passing through report that the rebels are preparing for an extensive raid toward West Virginia.

Gen. Gillen, who killed the notorious John Morgan, and routed his command, has had another battle in East Tennessee, in which he gained a great victory over Gen. Vaugn. A large number of prisoners were taken, besides McClurg's celebrated battery, one Colonel, one Major, six Captains, eight Lieutenants, five 12-pounders, and one mountain howitzer. The prisoners and artillery arrived at Nashville Saturday morning.

Tuesday, Nov. 1.

The New Maryland State Constitution goes into effect to day, and by its occurrence the slaves of the State are emancipated, and slavery forever abolished. The Washington City Council have taken measures for a proper celebration of the event, and pursuant to a resolution adopted yesterday afternoon, the Mayor issued a proclamation directing a salute of 500 guns to be fired to-day at sunrise, at noon and sunset. The bells of the city were to be rung, and citizens requested to display their flags.

Affairs in Kentucky appear to be getting worse. A part of Forrest's command sunk a steamer on the Tennessee River on Saturday morning last, and attacks on the small garrisons are quite frequent. At Paducah the citizens are kept excited by rumors that the guerrillas are about to attack the place. Business is entirely suspended, and the merchants have packed up their stocks, and in some instances sent their goods to places of safety.

Information brought from near Woodstock, in the Valley, says Early's late army is re-organizing at Newmarket, having been reinforced by two divisions of infantry. Longstreet is positively said to be in command, having superceded Early.

Wednesday, Nov. 2.

Quite a lively fight occurred between a large force of Mosby's men and a portion of the 8th Cavalry last Sunday, in the neighborhood of Salem, Va. Mosby expected to surprise our troops, and sent three detachments of his men to make a simultaneous attack, but he found them ready for any hostile demonstration; the consequence was the guerrilla chief was routed; we lost but two or three men killed and three or four wounded; the rebel loss was more than double this, besides twenty prisoners captured.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A prisoner escaped from Andersonville, says the death in August averaged 100 daily, principly from scurvy and starvation. After Atlanta fell the rebels feared raids and released the prisoners. Macon and other points were hastily fortified.

The Feeling at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Oct. 31.—The city was patrolled by military and a large force of police last night, and companies were stationed on the docks. Nothing occurred, but it is thought the prompt action of our authorities, and the fact that military were all out yesterday attending Gen. Bidwell's funeral, frustrated the rebels' designs. A number of suspicious persons have been observed in town within a short time. Parties started to-day, rockets thrown up and guns fired last night by unknown parties. They are thought to be signals to parties on the opposite shore ☞ On Monday, the 24th, 5,000 guns were shipped from the Springfield armory and the week previous 20,000 were sent to St. Louis.

Letter from Rev. Taylor.

FAIRFAX SEMINARY,
NEAR ALEXANDRIA, VA.,
October, 1864.

EDITOR HERALD—

Dear Sir:—More than a month has transpired since I parted with my friends in Tecumseh, with the view of entering, for a time, upon the duties of a delegate of the U. S. Christian Commission. Ill health detained me some three weeks on the way, but the discomforts of the delay among the friends of my youth, and amid the scenes of my childhood. Arrived in Washington on the evening of the 8th of October, and passed the following day, Sunday, in the time-honored city of Georetown, preaching in the evening from a pulpit which has been occupied by a present venerable Bishop McIlvaine, of Ohio. On the next morning in company with two clerical friends, took my way for the rooms of the Christian Commission in Washington. Passing along the Main Street in Georgetown, an old union House, was pointed out, where such men as Clay and Webster made their homes, during the sessions of Congress, in the happier and more peaceful days of our Republic. What men were these! and what changes have come upon our land since their voices sounded in our legislative halls,—changes which their farseeing intellects predicted, and against which they repeatedly, but in vain, raised the warning.

The President's House soon came in our way. The lawn in front is much less spacious than I had supposed, but is shaded by a stately growth of trees. The house itself is plain and has nothing remarkable in its exterior. The doors were open, and we had only to walk in and make ourselves at home. The reception room, and the East room where his excellency holds his levees were the only apartments we explored. The former was quite destitute of furniture, with little to attract the eye, save two marble heads, one of Columbus, the other of Vespuceus, which stood opposite each other on the chimney at each end of the room; that of Columbus with calm self-conscious dignity impressed upon its features; that of Vespuceus with no marks of mental superiority, but distinguished for a kind of restless and daring energy, indicated both by the deep lines of the countenance and the elevated position of the chin.

I think no one could wish to be President simply for the sake of occupying the White House. It seemed to me a cold and desolate affair. The Brussels Carpet in the East Room might once have been splendid, but it now looks worn and faded, the upholstery of the sofas and chairs, (very few in number,) were in a tattered condition, for which the covering and the gilding over doors and windows, and the heavy damask drapery of the windows, in no wise atone.

While awaiting my papers for the Commission Rooms, passed through the Patent Office building, with its innumerable objects of interest, not a few of which were models of instruments of war, invented since the present bonflict began.

The next day found me located at Fairfax Seminary. The field assigned for me to labor in embraces a series of forts, 8 or 10 in number, extending some four miles north and south, and about two east and west. The view from the Seminary is very imposing—for a long distance overlooking the broad valley of the Potomac. To the south-east two and a half miles is Alexandria; and eight miles to the north-east is Washington, with the Capitol, its dome rising in such massive grandeur that in the distance it seems like an extinguisher to all the rest of the city. The old flag floats in every direction, over hospitals, camps, and massive fortifications. In sight of the Capitol some sixty forts have been planted, and in the circumference of 160 miles around Washington, it is said, there are no less than 180 fortified ports. There is now certainly very little danger to be apprehended by the city from the rebels. In passing from Georgetown to Arlington Heights, or down the river to Alexandria, one almost feels as if he was in a foreign country—nothing but forts and soldiers, and camp wagons, to be seen on the one; while gun-boats, transports and steamers laden with soldiers float on the other. Blue-coats are everywhere, and not a few are the the men one meets who bear the honors of the battle-field in deep seated scars, or the loss of limbs. Honor and long life to these brave defenders of their country, and God grant the time may soon come when no more men shall be called from their homes to peril their lives in contending against their own rebellious countrymen.

My letter is like my life here, a rambling one. The only excuse I can make for its length and want of interest is that my time is so constantly taken up among our good soldiers in Fort, or Hospital that I have not time to make it what it should be. Respectfully yours,

J. RICK TAYLOR.

Will write again if I can find time and matters of sufficient interest to write about. J. R. T.

—Forrest is again reported in Tennessee. Last accounts represent him entering the State below Florence, Ala., having crossed the Tennessee River near the last named place.

—Nine rebel commissioned officers and one hundred and one enlisted men, prisoners of war, arrived in Louisville a few days since, having been forwarded from Chattanooga. The officers will be sent to Johnson's Island, and the enlisted men to Camp Chase. A large number of stragglers from Hood's army are being picked up every day by Sherman's cavalry, and they will swell for the next few days the receipts of rebel prisoners from the front.

—When, after laying waste the upper portion of the Shenandoah Valley, Sheridan fell back in accordance with Grant's plans to the line of the Manassas Gap Railroad, the rebel journals announced

They now lay great stress on the fact that our infantry did not pursue their routed forces after Wednesday's battle, and argue from this that we were too badly cut up to make a pursuit. When our rebel cotemporaries hear of Sheridan's troops operating in another quarter, they will then understand why it was that they did not follow Early on up to Mount Jackson.

There are said to be fully six or eight thousand negroes at this point, who are no doubt being flotten in readiness to participate in the nex battle south of Petersburg. Let them go on if they think there is no hereafter." The same paper says: "The Yankee troops are being extensively armed with a repeating rifle or musket. This weapon has the improved musket-barrel, but is chambered and fires twice without reloading. It is an ingenious piece of workmanship, and is said to be a very superior weapon. Many of these guns have been captured from the enemy, and placed in the hands of our skirmishers, and sharpshooters, and the Yankees have the pleasure of feeling the weight of their metal. The Yankees can beat "all creation" ingenuity, but Confederate troops are the boys to roq them of their fruits.

—The prospects for the early completion of the Jackson and Lansing Railroad are very flattering. Over 150 men are now at work grading the road, which it is expected will be ready for the iron by the 1st of January. The bonds of the city of Jackson to aid in the completion of the road will be put into market on Monday next.

—Martha Bacheltar, an inmate of the Ionia county poor house, endeavored to set fire to the Poor House buildings on Friday last, but fortunately the flames were discovered and extinguished before doing much damage. She was arrested, and after an examination was remanded to jail to await the next term of the Circuit Court.

—On Monday last, while two boys were playing near the sand bank in the rear of the Union School, the bank caved in, completely burying one of them, named Treadwell. His companion had the presence of mind to take the sand away from his head and face, and then ran for assistance. He was rescued from his perilous condition as soon as possible, but not until life was nearly extinct. Up to Tuesday afternoon he was still unconscious, and doubts were entertained of his recovery.

—A company of swindling vagabonds calling themselves "Armstrong's Combination Troupe," advertised to perform in East Saginaw on Saturday and Monday nights last, decamped on Monday morning, on the Flint train, leaving an unpaid bill at the office of the Enterprise for printing small programmes—also, without paying a boy for circulating their bills. They will doubtless undertake the same game in other places they may visit. Printers and others are cautioned against trusting these arrant swindlers.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

By the President of the United States of America.

It has pleased Almighty God to prolong our national life another year, defending us with His guardian care, against unfriendly designs from abroad, and vouchsafed to us in His mercy, many and signal victories over the enemy, who is of our own household. It has also pleased our Heavenly Father to favor as well our citizens in their homes as our soldiers in and seas, with unusual health. He has largely augmented our free population by emancipation and by immigration, while He has opened to us new sources of wealth, and has crowned the labor of our working men in every department of industry, with abundant reward. Moreover, He has been pleased to animate and the great trial of civil war into which we have been brought by our adherence, as a nation, to the cause of freedom and humanity, and to afford to us reasonable hopes of an ultimate and happy deliverance from all our dangers and afflictions.

Now, therefore, I, Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, do hereby in November next, as a day which I desire to be observed by all my fellow citizens, wherever they may then be, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to Almighty God, the beneficent Creator and Ruler of the Universe; and I do further recommend to my fellow citizens aforesaid, that on that occasion they do reverently humble themselves in the dust, and from thence offer up penitent and fervent prayers and supplications to the Great Disposer of Events for a return of the inestimable blessings of peace, union and harmony throughout the land which it has pleased Him to assign as a dwelling place for ourselves and our posterity throughout all generations.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington, this 20th day of October, in the year of Our Lord, 1864, and of the Independence of the United States the eighty-ninth.

By the President,

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

WM. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

The Pursuit and Captures.

NEW YORK Oct. 24.—The Herald's correspondent has the following concerning the captures at Cedar Creek and the pursuit of the enemy. Gen. Devin, with his little brigrde, keeps swooping down upon their rear, gobbling up their officers and men by scores. He pressed them so hard that it was impossible to get their artillery out of his way, or their wagons, or ambulances. Drivers and cannoniers dismounted, ran off into the woods on o of the demoralized rebel army, if it had one, followed suit, leaving the whole trains in our hands, limber caisons, wagons and ambulances were all huddled together in the greatest disorder. The following is the principal part of Gen. Devin's captures: 22 pieces of artillery, including a section of 32 pounders, 39 army wagons, 30 ambulances, 43 mules, and 117 horses. Two stand of colors and a guidon, and 352 prisoners were captured, and a small quantity of small arms. We followed the enemy up the base of Fisher's Hill, when Col. Nicholson, with his gallant New York cavalry, charged them again and drove them back, leaving a considerable portion of their wagon trains, in his hands, which he secured. We did not follow up the chase beyond Fisher's Hill. The infantry commands moved up to Fisher's Creek and went into their camps while those in the Valley bivouaced for the night a little beyond Strasburg. The enemy's loss was immense. The whole country between Middletown and Strasburg was literally strewn with rebel corpses. At an early hour next morning the pursuit was continued by Powell's cavalry. He captured 14 pieces of cannon which the enemy had driven into the mountains. At Woodstock the column was halted and rested a short time, when it was turned towards Strasburg, picking up many prisoners by the way.

☞ Notwithstanding the Indian difficulties, the settlement of Colorado is proceeding rapidly, as is shown by the returns of the land officers in that territory. In the month of September 3,788 acres were taken up at the land office at Denver City, with land warrants. The land office for the district has been permanently removed to Denver City, from Winnebago City, Minn. 12,337 acres were taken up under the Homestead law during September.

☞ It is reported that the Danish Government, since the sad result of her war with Germany, being unable to hold its West India possessions, is anxious to the United States. They consist of the Islands of St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John. St. Thomas is one of the finest harbors in the West Indies, and would be a convenient coal depot for the navy. The people of the island are said to be in favor of annexation, and the proposition is not without its advocates in influential official circles. It is doubtful, however, whether Spain, England of France would permit the transfer without an effort to secure these possessions among themselves.

☞ B. F. Taylor says of Gen. Sheridan; "There is no waste timber about Sheridan—not much of him physically, but snugly put together. A square face, a warm black eye, a pleasant smile, a reach of under jaw, showing that 'when he will, he will, you may depend on it;' black hair trimmed around like a garden border, no Hyperion curl about him any more than there was about Cromwell's troopers, and altogether impressing you with the truth that there is about as much energy packed away in about the smallest space that you ever saw in your life.'

Brilliant Reconoissance.

WINCHESTER SHERIDAN'S ARMY, Oct. 24.—The enemy has still a very strong force in the Valley, and it is reliably reported to be organising. The rebels have also a strong force of cavalry in the Luray Valley. Under cover of the present stillness, movements are being made by the enemy of an eminently important character. At this time when the late battle of the 19th took place, the enemy had stationed three brigades of cavalry near Milford creek, in the Luray Valley. When the rebel movement was made, this force advanced to Bucklin's Ford, on the Shenandoah river, and Front Royal, to the movement, and by Powell's Division of cavalry, and checked. When the rebels met with defeats, they retired to Milford, and within the line of the fortifications there erected a commanding position.

For certain substantial reasons, a reconnoitering party, about 300 strong, was sent out on the 20th from Powell's Divi-

The expedition was commanded by Maj. Gibson, who so gallantly distinguished himself in the Averill action at Moorfield, in July in last. During the early hours of the morning of the 24th, Maj. Gibson moved his command across both branches of the Shenandoah river, and moving through Front Royal, passed onward tofore daylight he came upon the enemy's pickets and drove them in, capturing one or two. he then passed rabidly on towards Milford Creek. On the way up he met the enemy in line of battle, with two pieces of artillery, and though his force did not exceed 300, he deployed it in line of battle without a reserve and charged them. The enemy, perhaps remembring our other late astonishing cavalry operations, did nothing more than fire one volley and then broke. Maj. Gibson continued the pursuit, as rapidly as it was possible for him to move forward in the darkness. The enemy kept his artillery on the pike and after fireing one round limbered up and made off to the rear. Owing to Gibson's inferior force he could not flank the enemy and get their artillery. The enemy cut the artillery to the rear and kept the cavalry right and left of the road to cover its getting off.

In the general charge which Gibson first made he captured one battle-flag By continuing to press on, Gibson at length drove the enemy over the creek, and up the line of rebel fortifications, in which they sought refuge, and opened a rapid fire from carbines and two pieces of artillery foresaid. In front of this barrier Gibson halted, but to feel the enemy's position, take a few prisoners, ascertain the enemy's strength, and then retired, reaching a safe position in the direction of the Shenandoah by daylight. The enemy, finding that the bird had flown, set out at a trot after him, but did not succeed in overtaking him, as Gibson reached the Union lines in safety and without heavy loss. The affair is looked upon as quite a brilliant cavalry dash. The idea of 300 driving them to their fortifications and capturing one of their battle-flags besides nearly capturing their two pieces of artillery, is indeed amazing and interesting. In the course of the reconnoissance, and from prisoners, information was gained of high importance to the interests of the army. Yesterday, cannonading was heard, it appeared in the direction of Front Royal and was probably from another cavalry fight.

☞ The Richmond Enquirer states that the Confedracy employs 6,000 negroes and 4,000 whites in its nitre and mining bureau. Of these for a month past over 1,500 have been in the field. It adds, "The prompt resbonce which all departments and bureaus are making in the call for men has already changed the aspect of affairs below Richmond."

GRANT'S RAILROAD.—A correspondant of the Philadelphia Inquirer, in reference to Grant's railroad, says: Who but a parcel of Yankees would even of thought of building a railroad along the battle-line of army, with one termini at the outer chain of fortification. The Yankees who have settled around Richmond have done this thing. The railroad goes over the with a most sublime indifference to its ups and downs. If you are seated in one of the last cars of a long train, half the time the locomotive drawing you is out of sight over a hill; but the best of all is the covered way, where the road runs.

News from Rebel Papers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The rebel Southern papers contain caustic comments upon the proceedings of the extra session of the Alabama Legislature, and pronounce Stephen's plan of reconstruction impracticable. The Alabama Legislature passed an act severely phnishing illegal impressment.

The Little Rock Democrat of the 17th says the rebel Legislature of Arkansas met Sept. 22. Thirteen members of the Senate and 40 of the House were pres-of the House. Gov. Flanagan's message recommends the passage of law allowing soldiers to vote, and says elections must be full and fair, and none should be held where but a small part of the people can participate in them. He doubts whether a free election can be had in that portion land was elected Senator to the rebel Congress over Albert Pike to fill the vacancy caused by the death of C. Mitchell.

The Democrat regards the election of Garland (former Unionist, never a very strong rebel,) over Pike (of decided segering tendency for the old Union.

The Richmond Examiner has a long article commending Alex. H. Stephens' letter as impolitic and useless.

The Dispatch of the 26th says a meeting at Columbia, S. C., condemned the letter of Senator Boyce to the rebel President, as suggestive of dispair and desire for submition. The resolutions closed requesting Mr. Boyce to resign his seat in the rebel Congress.

The rebel Gen. Archer is dead.

The Montgomery Mail says the Mobile and Ohio Railroads is running regularly from Moplie to Corinth. The Memphis and Charleston Road is running 50 miles east of Corinth.

Affairs at the South.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—A gentleman, who for twelve months past has been attempting to get away from the South succeeded several days ago in reaching our lines, and is now in this city. He occupied a responsible positino under the Confederate Government, and had good opportunities for learning the real condition of affairs in that section. He represents the conscription as actively progressing and that persons between the ages of 16 and 55 are being called. Also the telegraph, express and railroad men. The rebel authorites are making efforts to get every man into the army. About 20,000 of the new series have been sent to reinforce Lee. Hood's army numbers about 30,000. There are a few troops besides these two armies, and they are scattered over the South. There are only forty as provost guard at Fredericksburg, Va. They appears to be a sufficiency of substantial food, and luxuries can, at any places, be purchased. This gentleman says thousands of soldiers would, if they could, escape from service, and in some sections, if any opportunity were offered, the Union feeling would emphatically manifest itself. He bought some gold before he left Ricemotd, paying $25 Confederate money for one coin. After Early's defeat in the Valley a dollar in gold could not be bought for less than $30 in paper. He says no one out of the Confederacy can have a correct idea of the general effects of the ravages of war both on agriculture and trade. Michael McClosky, formerly Postmaster of the House of Representatives, has recovered from the wounds he received in battle, and has been elected a member of the rebel Congress from the Memphis District.

From North Carolina.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—By the arrival of the mail via Fortress Monroe, we have North Carolina dates of the 27th. Yellow fever is reported to have abated materially. The reported death of Col. Heaton and son is incorrect; both have recovered.

The number of deaths from fever will not exceed 2,000, consisting mostly of citizens and refugees. The fever originated from the ship at the foot of Cravero street in Newbern, which was filled up last June by Capt. Bradley with manure and barrels of cotton meal.

The rebel papers appear to be unanimous in favor of arming the blacks. The editor of the Southern Confederate, writing to his paper from Richmond, says the pressure brought upon the authorities here favoring the arming of blacks has been too strong to resist. It is with gratitude I am able to state officially that arrangements are now being made to arm for the spring campaign 300,000 slaves, whose masters are to be compensated by the Confederate Government. The slaves thus armed are to have their freedom and 50 acres of land, each of which assures them permanent homes in the South.

From Forrest's Guerrillas.

THE ALL SAFE.—

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 31.—The Journal says a despatch, received at the Quartermaster at Nashville, from Clarksville, 28th, Lieut. Col. Bratt, at Fort Donelson, reports that a part of Forrest's command, with three pieces of artillery, sunk a steamer and barge loaded with army clothing at Fort Herman, on the Tennessee river, Saturday morning. The same dispatch mentions that Capt. Cutler, with 25 men, the same day was attacked and drove across the river by 60 of Col M.

wounding eight

It is rumored that 300 rebels were threatening an attack on Fire Bluff on the Tennessee River Saturday.

The Democrat learns that on General Meredith's return to Paducah, on Wednes-

Sherman, and from Columbus, stating that Forrest intended attacking Paducah and menacing Columbus. Scouts and deserters reported large numbers of rebels passing Dreston, Trenton, Lexington, Shady Grove and McLemmonville. At the latter place heavy supplies are being field. Forrest is known to have been at Jackson with several thousand men. Danger being imminent Wednesday night, the cavalry was safely withdrawn from Mayfield. The same night the business men were advised to pack up their stocks and place them aboard steamers which were detained for that purpose.

On the 27th, scouts reported a rebel force within 16 miles of the city since which time no intelligence of their movements have been received. Every business hose is closed, and the goods removed to a place of safety. Business of all kinds was suspended, and everything prepared to give Forrest a warm reception. There is no danger but that Gen. Meredith will be able to hold the place if attacked

Buford's head quarter's are at Shady Grove. He has 8 regiments, three battallions and a battery of Dahlgren guns. Orders were issued for a concentration of the forces on the same line, and prepare to march on Paducah. Forrest, Chalmers and Buford are all in command.

Thursday a dash was made on Johnsonville. Sixty head of cattle were captured yesterday.

The Trial of the St. Albans Raiders.

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—The Confederate managers of the case of the St. Albans raiders, in the event of a decision being given by the Canadian court to surrender up the raiders, intend appealing to the Judicial Committee of Privy Council in England.

It is reported that the Washington Government has notified England of their intention to increase their armament on the lakes for the purpose of protecting the frontier.

☞ Sandusky was thrown into a whirl of excitement on Thursday evening over the discovery that a gang of rebels from Canada was in that city circulating freely among its saloons. Up to a late hour on Thursday night 16 of the scoundrels had been arrested. The gang, it is supposed, numbers more than 30 men, and the police are hunting them up.

REAT IMPROVEMENT,

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly supplanting all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stitch, which is as well adapted to Manufacturing purposes as the Shoe Stitch is to Pegging Boots.

Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use, and cannot be disarranged by any ordinary accident, so as to cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a lifetime and keep in order.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using Weed's Patent Thread Controller. There is no other apparatus for the control of the "Slack Thread" equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

NEW ARRIVAL OF

Boots, Shoes and Leather

AT BIDWELL'S

CASH BOOT AND SHOE STORE.

May 19th, 1864.

U. S. 7-30 Loan

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum, principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not sooner than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect. They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

Parties depositing twenty-five dollars will receive from the Treasury one of these notes free of transportation charges, as soon after the receipt of the original Certificate of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued since date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five dollars at one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

It is a National Savings Bank, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which may be in the vicinity, and it cannot pay more than anything better, for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collateral for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent. per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than while per cent premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation.

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer as great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the patriotic sentiment of the people will not be wanting, and patriotism of the people.

officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the Second National Bank of Detroit, Michigan, and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Bankers and Bankers throughout the country who will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717.

Three Songs.

Gently bear him on thy bosom,
Gently, O great sea!
Tenderly, O rocking billows.—
He is all to me.

Softly, lightly blow, O breezes,
Breezes of the sea;
Speed him fairly, gales of ocean,
Blow him back to me.

Softly, mildly look down on him,
Stars above the sea;
Kindly watch, pure stars, above him,
Guide him back to me.

My beloved out night!
Death, point not thy cruel arrow,
Pass that dear head by.

God of war, and sea, and tempest,
He is all to me:
Keep him, God of stars and tempest,
Keep him safe for me.

Proudly bear him on thy bosom,
Proudly, O great Sea!
Proudly take thy noble treasure,
Bear him off from me.

Gaily blow him, gales of Ocean,
Gay, and proud, and free;
Speed him fairly, gales of ocean,
Speed him off from me.

Brightly shine, bright stars, upon him,
Stars above the sea;
Brightly gleam, pure skies, above him,
Smile on him for me.

War, lift up thy noble banner.
Plant thy flag on high;
Death, thou canst not choose to pass him,
Pass that proud head by.

God of war, great God of battles,
(He is all all to me;)
In the cause Thyself hast bled for,
Let him bleed for Thee.

Take then, War, my hero's life blood;
Death, strike low that head;
God, and stars, and heaven take him
To your holy dead.

Now on thy great heaving bosom
Once more bear him, Sea!
Tenderly, O rocking billows,
[illegible]
Stars, from heaven look down on him,
Watch him, stars, for me;
Till some morning, bright, not distant,
He'll awake with me.

The North Sea Pirate.

BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

The incidents of the following story I believe have never yet been printed in any connected form. Many years ago they were mentioned in some the English papers, but not in such a manner as to convey the whole truth to the people, though one portion of them was widely enough circulated.

For a long time, a daring pirate had infested the North Sea, or as it is otherwise termed, the German Ocean. His name was Gondebald Gower, a Welchman by birth, and naturally of a roving, adventurous spirit. But he had never shown any disposition for evil, until his father and two brothers were publicly hanged for assisting in hiding some contraband liquors. From the hour that he saw his beloved relatives murdered for so slight a cause, Gondebald became an avowed avenger. He swore that England should have cause to know that a Gower still lived. In the spring after his father and brothers were executed, he fitted out a vessel from some port on the coast of Cornwall, and made his way at once to the North Sea, where he cruised about, evading all pursuers, and intercepting many of the traders, to and from Denmark and the Baltic. At the end of a year, his name had become a terror to all traders, and many a merchant refused flatly to send his wares across that sea until the pirate was captured.

It was a brig in which Gower had originally sailed, but many men who had seen him said, that he now sailed in a barque, though others swore positively that he still retained the brig.

The fact was, he did still keep his brig, but he had a small mizzen-mast which he could step at will. His vessel was about three hundred tons burthen, an excellent sailer, and carried twelve brass guns—eighteen pounders. Gower knew that she was the smartest sailer on the coast when he bought her.

Another year passed away, and finally the pirate's depredations became so frequent and so grave in result, that it was determined by government not to rest until he was taken. He had even gone so far as to cut a richly laden barque out of the mouth of the Thames, which he carried off in safety, and having robbed her of everything valuable, he sent her back.

In the month of August, 1802, two sloops of war were fitted out at Scarborough, and their commanders had orders to cruise until the pirate was captured. They were the Lanark and the Simoon.

a man came on board the Lanark and inquired for Captain Forbush, who had command. He was shown into the cabin at the captain's request, and there introduced himself as Capt. George Severn. He said that the pirate Gower had robbed him of all he possessed, and he wished to be revenged.

will hardly capture the wretch, for he has as many different shapes for his vessels as there are different vessels afloat. But I know him—I know him by marks which I cannot mistake. Take me with you, and you shall secure him."

Captain Forbush conferred with his officers, and after hearing the applicant's plea once more, it was decided to admit him. He was a tall, handsomely-built man, with a frame very finely moulded and knit together, and with a very prepossessing appearance. He was not far from five-and-thirty years of age, and in addition to features as regular and faultless as could be, he possessed an eye which seemed to look through and through the object gazed upon.

It was on the twenty-seventh of August that the two men-of-war sailed. The Lanark was to cruise south of the latitude of Scarborough, and the Simoon north of that. Not only Capt. Forbush but the officers generally, were pleased with Severn's company. He was full of wit and anecdote, and also possessed of great knowledge and sound sense. He beguiled many a weary hour for them, and enlivened their social circle.

At length, on the tenth day out, a sail hove in sight to the southward. It was soon made out to be a brig, and the Lanark gave chase. This was about three o'clock in the afternoon.

the was brought near enough to see her hull.

"Is it the pirate?" asked Forbush, turning toward Severn.

The latter individual gazed through the glass long and steadily, and with great apparent anxiety, and finally he said, as he lowered the instrument:

"I do not think it is the pirate; but yet I may be mistaken. Those spars are not lofty enough for gower's vessel, nor are the sails heavy enough. But let us speak her—that is, if we can. Her running away is the only thing that I do not like."

It was decided to keep on the chase, for the corvette was gradually gaining. At seven o'clock the Lanark fired a gun, but the brig did not heave to. At dark, the chase was too far distant to be reached by the sloop's guns, and it was arranged that she should keep on a few miles further, and then heave to for the night. It was very annoying, the captain said, to have night shut in so soon. But Severn declared he did not believe that to be Gower's vessel.

"However," he added, "there is one thing I do believe, and that is, that I am very unwell. My head aches, and my stomach is badly off. I believe I must turn in, and in the morning we'll be after the brig again, if she is in sight."

So Severn went to his state-room, which was near the bulk-head of the gun room, and requested that he might not be disturbed. All remained quiet in his room until about eleven o'clock, and then he quietly rose and dressed himself. But he did not don his usual garb; he put on a pair of pants, or trowsers, which were made of oil-cloth, and fitted very close to his skin: the garb was whole and tight at the bottom, combining stockings and pants in one. And it came nigh being whole at the other end, too, for it came up to the arms and covered them. Next he drew on a curiously constructed jacket which buttoned up in front, but which hung very loosely about him. It was made of some sort of gummed silk, and very firm and stout. His next movement was to draw on a pair of common sailor's trowsers, and then he lighted a lamp and placed it within a lantern, which he could curiously conceal in his hat, there being a small cone-like addition upon the crown, with sufficient aperture for the escaping of the smoke, and other holes in the side for the entrance of air.

His next movement was to raise a plank from the floor of his room. Upon this, some one must have been at work very recently, for that plank was never known to be removed by those who knew most about the vessel. But it was up now, and next a plate of iron was removed beneath.

From this, Severn could look into the ship's magazine, and also from this point he could reach into the light room, where as if to assure himself that no one was about, and then he turned the cock. On the next instant, a rush of water was heard, and—the powder magazine was being filled! All our readers are probably aware that the magazines of all vessels of war are furnished with a pipe which connects with the water outside means of a nicely fitting stop-cock, which is in the adjoining room. This is for the purpose of flooding the magazine in case of fire.

Ere long, the magazine was full, and then Severn stopped the cock and arose, and having replaced the plank, he secured the lantern in his hat, and then noiselessly glided from his state-room. He made his way forward on the berth-deck, and then ascended to the forecastle. The ship had a top-gallant forecastle, and the strange man went under this upon the starboard side, where the officers' round-house was. The bridle-port was open, and without being observed, he glided out and dropped into the water, and with a few movements of his feet he was clear of the bows. He now stopped, and having found a small tube connected with his jacket, he applied it to his lips, and ere long the curious garment had become distended to more than Falstaffian proportions. The ship gradually moved away from him, for she was under headway enough to give her helm power over her, and then he struck out in a south easterly direction. He might exert himself or not, that inflated jacket was amply sufficient to keep him afloat.

As soon as he was well away on the ship's larboard quarter, he took his lantern from his hat and turned its only bright side to the south-west—that being war. The glass of the lantern was a powerful, clear lens, and its light was peculiar. He held it aloft as high as he could, not exerting himself much otherwise. In half an hour, the sound of oars broke upon his ear, and soon afterwards a boat was by his side.

"Safe, boys, safe!" he cried, as he reached the stern-sheets of the boat.

"Ah, Captain Gower, we've been very uneasy about ye. We was afeared you couldn't go right into the lion's mouth with safety."

"But I did, though, my brave boys, and I have him by the mane, too. So you have kept the sloop in sight since dark?"

"Yes, sir. A man was stationed aloft, and he could see her pinacle-light. We got our letter by old Mark, the inn-keeper, telling us which craft ye was in, and where she would cruise."

"And you saw my light plainly?"

"Just like a beacon, capt'n."

"All right. So now for the old brig, and in the morning the Lanark sloop-of-war is ours!"

* * * * *

With the first streak of dawn, Captain Forbush was upon his deck, and as soon as a slight mist had lifted which had settled upon the water since midnight, the brig was seen not more than a mile and a half distant upon the larboard quarter. The wind was now from the northward and westward, and the ship was close hauled upon the larboard tack. The captain ordered that the ship should be put about, and then he sent for "Captain Severn."

"Tell him to come up at once, for the strange brig is close under our weather quarter."

But in a few moments, the messenger returned and reported that Captain Severn was not in his state-room. So the boatswain was ordered to pass the word over the ship for Severn while the gunner cast loose his guns, and prepared for action.

"Ha," cried Windermear, the first lieutenant, "the fellow has shown his bloody flag! See—the black field, with death's head in the centre!

"What!" uttered the captain, in amazement. "Does the fellow mean to engage us? Light the matches, gunners! Mr. Windermear, call to quarters at once! Throw open the magazine and station the boys! By heavens our small arms should have been loaded before! But be quick! Engage us! Engage his majesty's sloop-of-war Lanark? My soul, he's crazy with his success. But I'll teach him a—"

"The magazine's all afloat, sir!" at this moment reported the gunner, pale as death, and trembling like an aspen.

"What! afloat? The mag—"

But the captain could not believe it. He rushed to the companion-way and leaped down. The tight door had been opened—it was a trap-door—and there all the powder was! As soon as Forbush could fairly comprehend the fatal truth, he staggered back on deck and ordered the guns not to be fired until he gave the word. The ship carried twenty guns, and they were all loaded, and the captain meant to use them to the best advantage.

The Simoon came down upon the Lanark and struck the ship's quarter-boat, and knocked the stern and bows out.

"Every gun is spiked, sir!" reported the gunner, paler than ever.

"A traitor!" gasped the captain, as soon as he could speak.

"Where is Severn?" uttered the lieutenant.

The captain started back at these words for the truth flashed upon him. He started to the nearest gun, and found that the spike could only be removed by drilling. But there was another thing to attend to now, for the pirate was close alongside, and the grape and canister began to be poured upon her deck. In a few minutes more the brig was near enough to use small arms, and the men, of war's men began to fall.

"Merciful heavens!" groaned Forbush; "we can't stand this!" Not a shot can we return, save from some half dozen pistols which may be loaded!"

"This is terrible!" responded Windermear.

And well he might say so, for the men were falling fast about him, and not a single shot could they return.

"Down with the flag! down with it!" gasped the captain, as a musket ball passed through his hat.

The flag was lowered, and in a few minutes the brig was alongside, and he whom they had known as George Severn, stepped on board.

"Captain Forbush, I did you a good morning," he very politely said, raising his hat as he spoke.

"Who—who art thou?" the captain whispered, while his eyes seemed starting from their sockets.

"Gondebald Gower, at your service," was the reply. "I told you I would bring you alongside of the North Sea Pirate."

"Then you are—the same man?"

"Yes, sir. But we must to business now. Your sword, if you please. Ah—thank you. Now muster your men."

The man-of-war's-men were mustered and secured, such as lived, while the dead—forty seven in number—were moved away for a decent burial service. Gower had been very careful to injure the ship as little as possible, so he found her now in very good condition. He proceeded at once to have all the valuable articles taken from his own vessel to his prize, and when this was done, he ordered all lights out and then removed the powder, stowing it for the present in the hold. There was a goodly quantity on board the brig, and as soon as he had got that out, he took such arms as he wanted, and then got the boat. Next he scuttled his old vessel, and then cast her off and let her go; and ere long she went down, never to rise again!

After this, Gower had the brig's boats brought alongside, and into these he ordered the captive captain to go and take his crew. There were ninety-five of the crew left, and the brig's four boats gave them ample room.

"Now," said Gower, "I shall give you three day's provisions."

"But it is a week's work, and more, too, to reach the coast," urged Forbush.

"Ah, but the coast of Holland is not so far. Texel is not over eighty miles from here, and you can reach that easily, and not work hard either. I have particular reasons for wishing you to return to England by the way of Holland."

Thus speaking the last prisoner was handed to the boat waited for him, and soon the ship had reached ahead, and left the boats huddled together in her wake, like so many sea-monsters who knew not what to do with themselves.

In two hours, every injury which had been done to the rigging and spars of the ship was repaired, and then she bore away to the northward, and in an hour from that time Gower caught the glimpse of the boats moving slowly to the southward and eastward.

For seven days Gondebald Gower kept but little. He was upon deck early and late, and much in the night. Several sails were passed, but he molested them not. On the morning of the eighth day, a sail was reported to the northward and westward, and soon afterwards it was made out to be a ship; and in three minutes more, it proved to be a sloop-of-war in the Lanark.

"and she is ours! Quarter-master, set the signals up and overhaul the signal book. Show the Lanark's pennant first, and then signalize that we wish to speak her. Be ready for a couple of broadsides, Catesby."

Gower had possession of the ship's signal book, and he knew the signals of the Lanark. So, of course, the Simoon was completely deceived, and immediately answered the signals; and as soon as the wish expressed to speak her, she came about and stood for the Lanark.

Gower had eighty-two able men, and he had no fear of harm from the approaching sloop. The Simoon came up to within three cables' lengths, and then hove to, while the Lanark kept on and passed under her stern. At the moment when the pirate was directly astern, the whole broadside was fired. But she slacked not her speed. Around she went, and luffing gradually up upon the lee side of her victim, she went handsomely about, and in four minutes more another broadside was poured in over her bows, raking the doomed ship fore and aft. The pirates guns had been well aimed and the havoc was dreadful. The simoon had lost her foremast, and much of her lower rigging, but this was not the worst, for a great number of her men had been killed. We may suppose that her officers were not only astonished, but absolutely powerless in view of this proceeding. A third broadside was fired ere the Simoon's crew could fairly think what to do, and then up went the black flag at the Lanark's peak. This solved the mystery, but the Simoon was altogether too far gone for resistance now, and her flag was hauled down.

In one hour from that time, the pirates had taken every valuable thing from the Simoon which was available, among which were over eight thousand pounds in money. The crew were put into the boats, being only some fifty miles from the Scottish coast, and then the Simoon was sunk. After this, Gower bore away to the southward, and he stopped not until he had reached the coast of Cornwall.

When it became known in London, and in the other maratime cities, that the North Sea Pirate had taken two British sloops-of-war, the amazement and terror was intense, and a large fleet was at once despatched in pursuit.

But British justice never undertook the outlaw. A few weeks afterwards, the leading merchants received printed notes, which simply read thus:

"You may send your ships in safety, for Gondebald Gower is avenged. England robbed me of a father and two brothers; and England can tell you how much she gained by the dastard, coward act. Cringe no more, for no more harm will come to your shipping from GONDEBALD GOWER."

And he was true to his word. A year afterwards some old Cornwall fishermen said that one night some months before, a sloop-of-war had been sunk off the coast, and that the men escaped in boats. And ten years afterwards an Englishman went home and swore that he had seen Gondebald Gower in America. But be that as it may, England never received any more harm from the North Sea Pirate.

HOW TO MAKE A PIANOFORTE PIECE.—Take a number of melodies, which have been previously well ground. Be careful, at commencing, to have plenty of milk and water, which you must boil up gradually until it begins to bubble and make a confused rumbling noise. Wait till it has subsided a little, and then put in your melodies one by one. Add a little seasoning, and when they are all done quite through, begin to thicken by degrees, and stir them well up together. When it begins to run over, it is time to turn it out. Serve up hot.

☞ One hour of solitude, passed in sincere and earnest prayer, or conflict with and conquest over a single passion or bosom sin, will teach us more of thought, will more effectually awaken the faculties and form the habit of reflection, than a year's study in the schools we have been.

Election Returns.

extent the party excitement and prejudices. The day was exceedingly unpropitious as it rained most of the time and the roads were quite muddy. The election was closely and earnestly contested, but in a commendable manner and uniform good spirit in this township. There was 749 votes cast of which the Republicans received 379, and the Democrats 368 for their electoral tickets. Nearly all voting the straight party ticket. The Republicans have elected all of their ticket in this county. Returns come in we are only permitted to give an estimate of how the State stands. From present indications, the Republicans elect the same number of Congressmen as they did in 1862. Of Senators, they have elected 20 out of 32. It is believed they have elected a larger number of members of the House than in 1862.

Below we give the latest news we have been able to gather:

INDIANA.

Election returns from all points heard from show large Union gains over the October elections. Lincoln's majority will be from 30,000 to 35,000.

NEW YORK.

The Times puts the Republican majority in this State at 8,000, the Tribune at 7,000, and the Herald at 5,000. The World says McClellan's majority is probably 200.

MARYLAND.

Baltimore city gives 12,000 majority for Lincoln; a gain of 4,300.

The State has undoubtedly gone for Lincoln by a considerable majority on the home vote, and elected Swann for Governor.

Col. Phelps is elected in the 3d Cong. Dist. The Republican majority in Maryland is about 60,000.

NEW JERSEY.

New Jersey gives McClellan about 5,000 majority.

CONNECTICUT.

Lincoln's majority in Connecticut, in all but 13 towns, is 2,394.

MAINE.

One hundred and eleven towns give Lincoln 26,736, McClellan 17,975, showing a Union gain of 734 over the September election. The Union majority in September was 15,813. The same proportion of gain throughout the rest of the State will give Lincoln about 18,000 majority.

ILLINOIS.

Returns from Illinois show Union gains as compared with 1860, and indicate to a certainty that Lincoln carries the State by 15,000 to 20,000 majority.

WISCONSIN.

The returns from Wisconsin are meagre and show a falling off in the Republican vote since last year. The State, however, gives Lincoln a majority of from 6,000 to 10,000 on the home vote.

MINNESOTA.

Minnesota will give the Union ticket about 3,000 majority, judging from the few returns received, which show about the same result as in 1860.

IOWA.

Telegraphic communication with Iowa is interrupted but all concede that the State has gone Republican by a large majority.

DELAWARE.

McClellan carries the State by 450 majority.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The Bulletin estimates the Republican majority at from 10,000 to 15,000 to be swelled to over 30,000 by the soldiers' vote.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The vote of 132 towns foots up—Lincoln 25,784, McClellan 23,687. This indicates a handsome Union majority on the home vote.

MICHIGAN.

Republicans claim the State by 15,000 to 20,000 majority. Detroit city gives about 400 Democratic majority. Wayne county about 1,650 Democratic majority. Lenawee county will give 1,200 Republican majority. Adrian City, Union majority; Tecumseh, 13; Hudson 248, Ogden 130, Franklin 118, Riga 3, Adrian 8, Dover 30, Madison 106, Blissfield 36, Raisin 50. Bowman leads his ticket.

OHIO.

Returns in all towns heard from show Republican gains over the October election. The State has probably gone 40,000 Republican majority.

RHODE ISLAND.

Returns from all the towns in the State but one, give Lincoln 5,011 majority, and the soldiers' vote will increase it.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Col. Paine is elected in the 3d Congressional district of West Virginia. Returns from nine counties show a large Union gain over the October election. It is believed that Lincoln has carried the State by a large majority.

KENTUCKY AND MISSOURI.

It is stated that both Kentucky and Missouri have gone for McClellan, though but little has been heard from the West, in consequence of the storm.

The News.

The Herald's dispatch from Sheridan's army, of the 6th, states that Gen. Sheridan has received information that the rebels intend immediately to assume the offensive. Gen. Ewell has superseded Gen. Early. Gen. Pitchugh Lee's division of cavalry was on Monday at Wardensville. Imboden was also reported there and the rebel force was over 5000 strong. Mosby has been reinforced by a regiment of Virginia cavalry, and on Monday was at Thurville, it is expected, to move on Winchester or on Gen. Sheridan's line of communication. Rebel movements have been communicated by a cavalry move this morning. To-day, Gen. Kelley's command successfully attacked a rebel force that was moving towards Moorfield. A general engagement is expected in a day or two. There is much indication idan at Cedar Creek. Early has gone to Richmond.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The capture of the pirate Florida causes rejoicing in mercantile circles.

The Herald's Fortress Monroe special says the Tallahassee was fired into by Wilmington, and five fast vessels are in pursuit of her.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—By the capture of the Florida the bond of the ship Southern Rights, and other vessels, chronometers and valuable papers were re-taken.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 9.—The Ohio river is rising rapidly—seven feet and six inches of water at the Falls.

CHATTANOOGA, Nov. 7—Military situation unchanged.

Friday, Nov. 11

It is positively asserted that General Sherman is again moving, and that by this time he is far on his way to Savannah. He has three entire corps with him, and has only 260 miles to march to reach that place. He took 30 days' rations with him. Thomas is left behind with two corps to take care of Hood. Our dispatch says look out for glorious news from Sherman's army within 30 days, for within that time it will have made the grand march from the mountains to the Atlantic seaboard. The rebels have nothing in Georgia that can oppose Sherman.

Hon. John P. Elton, one of the Presidential Electors at large, chosen on Tuesday, died at his residence in Waterbury, Conn., yesterday.

We have a rumor this morning that Robert J. Walker is to succeed Mr. Fessenden as Secretary of the Treasury and that he left New York for for Washington last Evening.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Nov.—The flag of truce asked for by the enemy was granted yesterday morning to bury the bodies of those killed in the attack Saturday night near our center. The enemy acknowledge a loss of 200 killed and wounded. Our men secured about forty muskets, besides other trophies belonging to the rebels, and there are equally as many more still on the ground between our lines.

The election yesterday throughout this army passed off quietly. Thirty-eight Pennsylvania regiments give McClellan 1,841; Lincoln, 4,649.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The Commercial's Washington special says there is no war news to-day. All is quiet with Grant's army.

Considerable speculation is indulged in respecting the reports of Gen. Sherman's movement, and many seem disposed to credit the story of his abandonment of Atlanta, and is marching toward Charleston or Savannah. Letters from officers in his army, recently received here, mysteriously promised something startling before long, and it is thought this is the event referred to.

The arrangements for the release by exchange of 10,000 of our troops prisoners in the South are complete, and but a few days will be required to execute them. The Union soldiers have been transported to a convenient point. They will be at their homes in time to eat their Thanksgiving dinners.

The Canadians are now being treated to a plot of their own. A conspiracy, in which the Fenian Brotherhood is involved, has been discovered at Toronto, and a number of arrests have been made. The Fenians, as is well know, are a league of Irishmen, whose principal object is to free the Green Isle from British rule.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The Herald's Shenandoah corresponded says the rebel army recently was but 10,000, and were very poorly equipped, and if Ewell, succeeding Early, is to take the offensive, he must be greatly reinforced.

QUEBEC, Nov. 10.—Prominent men from the Northern States are here urging the Canadian Government to energetic co-operation with the American authorities to preserve peace on the frontier. Efficient measures on the part of the Canadian Government have been taken.

MONTREAL, C. E., Nov. 9.—The examination of witnesses in the St. Albans raiders case proceeds slowly. It is said that no appeal can be made to the English courts, as an act of the English Parliament limits the writ to the United Kingdom.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

By the President of the United States of America.

It has pleased Almighty God to prolong our national life another year, defending us with His gracious care against multiplied designs from abroad, and conducting to us, in His mercy, many and signal victories over the enemy, who is of our own household. It has also pleased our Heavenly Father to favor as well our citizens in their homes as our soldiers in their camps, and our sailors on the rivers and seas, with unusual health. He has emancipation and, by immigration, while He has opened to us new sources of wealth, and has crowned the labor of our working men in every department of industry, with abundant reward. Moreover, He has been pleased to animate and inspire our minds and hearts with fortitude, courage and resolution sufficient for the great trial of civil war into which we have been brought by our adherence, as a nation, to the cause of freedom and humanity, and to afford to us reasonable hopes of an ultimate and happy deliverance from all our dangers and afflictions.

President of the United States, do hereby appoint and set apart the last Thursday in November next, as a day which I desire to be observed by all my fellow citizens, wherever they may then be, as a day of thank-giving and prayer to Almighty God, the beneficent Creator and Ruler of the Universe; and I do further recommend to my fellow citizens aforesaid, that on that occasion they do reverently humble themselves in the dust, and from thence offer up penitent and fervent prayers and supplications to the Great Disposer of Events for a return of the inestimable blessings of peace, union and harmony throughout the land which it has pleased him to assign as a dwelling place for ourselves and our posterity throughout all generations.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington, this 20th day of October, in the year of Our Lord, 1864, and of the Independence of the United States the eighty-ninth.

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stitch alike Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a lifetime and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind, Tuck, Quilt, Gather, Stitch and Draw the thread, Skip Stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the "Slack Thread" equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machine for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. U. S. 7-30 Loan

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that subscriptions will be received by Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum.—Principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect. They will be issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, and $5,000 dollars, and subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

are free of transportation charges on receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared

As the notes date for interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions will be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers anything better, for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent. per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation.

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer as great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Bankers and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

A Very Thrilling Narrative.

BY PAUL CREYTON

Deacon Appleby, of Derryville, was bitterly opposed to the practice of dancing, and when his son Isaac, and his adopted son Jack, humbly requested the privilege of driving his team around to the lake, to "Holly's," where there was to be a dance on the night of the ninth November, he not only refused to grant the petition, but promised them both a sweet taste of the cowhide, if they "stirred a step" to go to the abominable ball.

Jack was twenty; Issac was in his nineteenth year. They considered themselves old enough to think and act for themselves, and considerably too far advanced in life to submit to the indignity of being ordered around like a pair of boys. So Jack, who was always the leader in mischief, said to Joe, who was an excellent fellow to follow almost any bad example—

"Dogs take the deacon!"

"I'd just as lives hear ye say so as not," muttered Isaac, "I'd say the same of he wasn't my father!"

"I wonder if he thinks he is going to tie my legs with his rotted Presbyterian notions? I tell ye what!" said Jack.

"I'm mad enough to hear anything," growled Ike.

"I've been thinking we can go to the ball, without "stirring a step" to go around the lake, either. We wont take the deacon's horses, and we won't go afoot."

"How, then?" asked Ike, deeply interested.

"Why, you fool," answered Jack, triumphantly, "go across the lake to be sure!"

"Pshaw!"

"None o' yer pshawing! It's three miles around, and only a mile across. There's Captain Dipper's row-boat, down by the saw-mill—"

"But we don't know how to manage a boat—we can't row—,"

"I can, if you can't. Though the deacon—blast his pictur'—never'd let us go in the water, if he knew it. I've pulled an oar on the lake more than once!"

"Have ye?" cried Ike, brightening. Then by cracky, I'm agreed!"

The boys went to bed semarkably early that night, and the deacon's heart was rejoiced to see them so obedient, and so willing to give up going to the abominable ball!

But somehow the boys didn't exactly go to bed either. They had not quite abandoned the idea of the ball. Waiting only for the deacon's resounding snore to reverberate through the house, they pulled up their dickeys and pulled down their pantaloons, and in their Sunday go-to-meeting toggery, stole cautiously and silently out of the front door.

The night was pitch dark, and it was only by the most persevering industry of research, that the boys found their way through the deacon's orchard, and across Captain Dipper's meadow, to the lake shore.

Knowing that the boat was fastened to an elm tree, just below the saw mill, they had little difficulty in finding it, and after making good use of their fingers and jack-knives in freeing it from the confinement of a stubborn rope, they pushed out upon the lake, high in hope and courage.

As the sequel proved, our heroes were not deeply skilled in fresh water navigation. Jack took the oars, and Ike sat in the bow of the boat. The latter performed his part to perfection. The former did not do quite so well. He couldn't somehow "get the hang" of the oars. One would strike deep down into the water, and the other would skip over the surface with a jerk, and vice versa, in beautiful alternation. The boat would shoot this way, then that way—now aground, and now in a labyrinth of a raft of logs, until Ike, losing patience, said with bitter sarcasm:

"By cracky! I thought you said you could row!"

"So don't I?" replied Jack, considerably nettled. "Jest you 'tend to your business, and let mo alone."

"Well, what is my business?"

"Why, to see where I'm rowing to, and to tell me when I'm going wrong"

"By cracky! et that's my business, I tell you now, you're going cosmack into a saw-log! bump!

"Why the deuce didn't you tell me before? snarled Jack, as the boat struck against some solid substance with a frightful jar. Now keep your eyes open!"

"Do youssuppose I could keep 'em shut, when you are rowing?" retorted Ike. "I aint so careless of life, as that. But what car a feller see, when it's just like groping your way in a great black inkstand, or in a dyestub, with the kiver on? You can't see your hand aforh your face."

"Then how can you blame me for not seeing to rew well? There—I think we are clear. Now keep your eye on thot light, and tell me when I am going wrong"

The light to which Jack alluded, was from Holly's Lake House, on the opposite shore—the place of their destination.

"I can keep my eye on the light," said Ike, "but hang me ef I wouldn't have to talk faster'n a woman to tell you every time you're going wron. You make the boat go zig-zag, and that, that the light seems to be swinging back and forwards, like the pint of a pendulum. By cracky, Jack. How you do row!"

"Come and row yourself, and see how you like it!"

"Wal, you needn't be gittin' mad. I think you row at rate. I 'spect may get to Holly's about the middle of next January, ef you keep on. The only thing I'm afraid of is, the lake'll be apt to freeze over 'fore we git acrost it."

Ike's sarcasm was really undeserved. Jack was doing very well, all things considered. By dint of persevering practice he had acquired the art of dipping both oars at once, and giving them a steady pull at about the right distance beneath the surface. The "pendulum" of the light had ceased to vibrate. "Holly's was stationary right ahead.

For half an hour Jack pulled industriously at the oars, perspiring—though the night air was chilly—until his dickey wilted around his neck.

"Je-ru-sa-lem!" he muttered, stopping to puff; "this is hard work. How do we get along?"

"I swan to man!" swore the impatient Isaac, we don't get along at all! The light at Holly's is just as far off as 'twas at first."

"I allow—the boat don't seem to git on much. I thought we'd be there by this time. We must be as much as half way, though."

"Half—cracky!" sneered Ike.

Jack was a little touched. Conscious of doing his best, he thought Isaac was ungrateful. But considering it would be wisdom to keep his resentment bottled up, until they should be on dry land, he closed his teeth, recommenced rowing vigorously.

Black clouds still shrouded the earth in darkness. The bleak wind blew across the lake, and the sullen waves moaned, dashing against the boat. Ike, sitting in the bow, declared that he should freeze; and finding a narrow board in the bottom of the boat, he ushd it for a paddle.

The exercise may have been beneficial in promoting arterial circulation, but it did not aid in the progress of the boat; for at the end of another half hour it was found that the light at Holly's was apparently as far off as when our adventurers were struggling in the labyrinth of logs.

"I vow!" exclaimed Ike, resting on his paddle, "this don't pay. It'll be morning afore we git to Holly's, anyhow. The oysters'll be eat up, and the gals all gone hum."

"If you want to go back, put her through as soon as you please," retorted Jack. "I and the boat are going to Holly's, any how."

But at the end of half an hour even he did laugh; and so did all Derryville, when the joke was noised about, and Isaac and Jack have not to this day, heard the last of their 'kinder rowing around in the pond a little just for fun.'

"Now, without any joking, Ike, I think we had better turn about. If it takes us as long to get back, as it has to come so far it will be broad day before we get ashore! then father will play the old scratch with us."

Jack, who was really tired of rowing, and bereaved of all hope of arriving at the ball in any kind of season, said something about the mystery of the boat's dragging so, and with one excellent stroke of the right hand oar sent the boat around.

"We shall have to go by the light at Holly's," said Jack. "There ain't another to be seen on either shore. It'll be a miracle if we come out any where near the saw-mill."

'It's my opinion,' replied Ike, 'we will have day-light to steer up to the saw mill by.'

At that moment the boat thumped against some solid substance, and rebounded with a shock.

'Good mighty!' cried Jack, 'we're aground!'

'Aground!'

'Aground! wish we was!' said Ike.—'But I'm eternally peeled and roasted, if here aint some more of the infernal logs, and we're right into them.

The logs appeared to have been dropped down there, on purpose to offer obstructions to the progress of our adventurers. It took them full twenty minutes to get around them, for run which way they would, they were to sure to come upon them again in a mysterious manner. At length, however, to the infinite relief of both our heroes, they got the logs behind them, and with Holly's light directly over the stern, proceeded toward the saw mill.

But Jack, as he expressed it, 'was pooty considerable tuckered' with persevering industry of rowing. He kept on as long as possible, when, confessing himself give out, he asked Ike to take the oars. Ike was quite ready for the enterprise.—Fear of the deacon's wrath prompted him to undertake anything likely to facilitate their progress homeward.

Wel, Ike made bad work in the early stage of his practice; but aided by Jack's assistance—for had not Jack had experience? he soon conquered the difficulty, and for half an hour rowed lustily toward the saw-mill. Then Jack spelled him, then he spelled Jack, and in this way they were making tolerable progress when to their infinite dismay, they discovered indications of daylight in the east.

'What will father say,' complained Ike. 'If you hadn't said you could row the boat to Holly's in half an hour—'

'Don't say anything more about that, exclaimed Jack. 'If we've got to take that licking, why, I shall have to take my share, and I'll come in for't first.—But I—I say, Ike, isn't there something in the water behind us?'

Daylight was now so far advanced that the shore was dimly visible all around, and certain objects in the water behind them, were to be seen.

'Do'no; guess it's some of them logs,' replied Ike.

And ten minutes after he exclaimed.—'By crackey, either we don't move, or them logs are following us.'

'I wish you'd keep your nonsense to yourself, and if the boat don't move, it's your own fault. You can see, we're most to the shore.'

'Yes, but if them logs aint following us I'm a crooked cucumber! They've been just so far from us, ever since you spoke about them first.'

'That's a pretty story! What 'ud be the object of a company of logs, to be a following us?'

Jack proposed this argument in a brave tone but at the same time he had his doubts. A few minutes later, when fast the daylight increased he muttered—

'Them logs do kinder seem to be followin' us! I shouldn't wonder—if—

'Hy holy!' interrupted Ike, 'there's father and Captain Dipper up by the saw mill! They are looking at us! we've been caught now!

'Blast the luck! exclaimed Jack.—'Those cussed logs!'

At that moment the deacon, coming down to the water, recognized them, and in a voice of thunder demanded what they were doing.

The boys were dumb.

'Didn't I tell you not to go to that abominable dance?' cried the exasperated deacon.

'We haven't been there,' answered Isaac humbly.

'You haven't been there? Where you lie to me sir. Tell me where you have been, and what you've been doing.'

'We haven't been doing nothing—only been kinder rowing around the pond here a little, that's all!

Kinder rowing around the pond! remarked the deacon. 'What have you been doing that for?

'Oh! just for fun,'

The deacon was too wrathful to express himself, but Captain Dipper, approaching said to the boys—

'If you've been rowing for fun, I should think you would have cast off the line from that raft Jones and I towed up from the Graves' yesterday. You must like towing rafts better'n I do, if you call that fun!

Well the boys were overcome! The fear of the deacon's anger, was by no means to be compared with their utter and complete confusion and dismay, in discovering the mystery of 'them logs kinder following them round.'

But Jack, who was a good humored fellow, had to laugh, and standing up in the boat, he said—

'Then, Deacon Appleby! don't lick us for we've jist about had punishment enough for our offense! We've been rowing all night, and haven't been to the ball, either! Just think on't, and thank them pesky logs!'

The deacon did not gainsay a word, and he did laugh; and so did all Derryville, when the joke was noised about, and Isaac and Jack have not to this day, heard the last of their 'kinder rowing around in the pond a little just for fun.'

Baron Steuben.

If the annexed anecdote is old, we'll venture to say that a new generation has arisen since it was published, and therefore, considering it just as good as new, we give it to our readers.

After General Arnold treacherously deserted his post at West Point, the baron never failed to manifest his indignation and abhorence of his name and character, ann while inspecting Colonel Sheldon's regiment of light horse, the name of Arnold struck his ear. The soldier was ordered to the front; he was a fine looking fellow; his horse and equipments in excellent order. 'Change your name brother soldier; you are too respectable to bear the name of a traitor.' 'What name shall I take, general?' 'Take any other name; mine is at your service.' Most cheerfully was the offer accepted and his name was entered on the roll as Steuben. He or his children now enjoy land given to him in the town of Steuben, by the baron.

This brave soldier met him after the war. 'I am well settled, general,' said he, 'and have a wife and son; I have called my son after you sir.' 'I thank you my friend; what name have you given the boy?' 'I called him Baron; what else could I call him?'

TRIAL BY JURY.—Inquiry into facts by means of juries was frequent in England long before trial by jury was used for judicial purposes. There are traces of it in the four reigns immediately succeeding the Conquest, but it was not till a century later that this institution became common in the thirteenth century. Magna Charta, in 1215, confirmed and established the privilege of trial by jury in an especial manner.

Origin of Catharine I.

According to Weber, Catherine's mother was a serf in Esthonia, and gave birth to her without going through the previous church ceremony. The mother's owner was a Lieutenant Colonel Rosen, a half-pay Swedish officer, and he is generally supposed to have been the father of the future Empress. In her third year Catherine lost both father and mother, and the village sexton took charge of her. Gluck, Dean of Marienburg, taxpassion on her and received her into his family as a sort of companion to his daughters. According to Villebois, however, Catherine was the daughter of a Polish serf, of the name of Skavronski, who fled from his country, and settled in Dorpat. When Catherine was eighteen years of age she was married to a smart, curly-headed Swedish dragon, probably in August, 1702. A week later, the young husband was sent off with his troops, as the Russians were advancing to besiege Marienburg. The garrison capitulated, and Gluck, with his whole family, proceeded to the tent of Scheremetoff, the Russian General, to ask for mercy. The general noticed Catherine, and asked who she was. And on being told that she was a foundling and just married to a Swedish dragoon, he replied:

"That is of no consequence; she is mine and shall remain with me."

Of her husband nothing more is known except that he probably fell in a skirmish in 1705. Catherine appears to have yielded to her fate, and some months after, Menchikoff, coming into camp, saw her, and asked Scheremetoff to hand her over to him. To this the subordinate consented; and Catherine was no lower by the change, for Menchikoff was a younger man, and took such a fancy to her that in a very few days it was almost impossible to distinguish whether he was master or slave.

A little while after the Czar dined with Menschikoff, saw Catherine, heard her story, and—we will pass over honest Weber's details. After the Czar's departure she bitterly reproached Mrnschikoff for his subserviency; but Peter soon returned and made up matters with her. Three days later he said to Menschikoff:

"I shall keep Catherine—she pleases me; you must give her up to me," and the favorite most politely complied.

A Moderate Petition.

A gentleman who had been long attached to Cardinal Mazarin, and much esteemed by that great minister, but little assisted in his finances by court favor, one day told Mazarin of his many promises, and his dilatory performance. The cardinal, who had a great regard for the man, and was unwilling to lose his friendship, took his hand, and leading him into his library, explained to him the many demands made upon a person in his station as a minister, and which it would be politic to satisfy previously to other requests, as they were founded on services done to the State. Mazarin's companion, not very confident in the minister's veracity, replied:

"My lord, all the favor I expect at your hands is this: that whenever we meet in public, you will do me the honor to tap me on the shoulder in the most unreserved manner." This was at once acceded to, and in two or three years the friend of the cardinal became a wealthy man, on the credit of the minister's attention to him. Mazarin used to laugh, together with his confidant, at the folly of the world, in granting their favor to persons of such slight security.

A Never Failing Supply.

A fond mother writes:

"I said to little Johnnie, who was wasting potatoes, a few days ago, that he must not do so any more. He was sitting on the ground, beside a large heap, and chopping them into atoms with his little hatchet. He looked up, very gravely, into my face, as I spoke of the wicked waste, when they cost so much; and answered very coolly:

"Nevertheless, Donnie will do on, chopping potatoes."

This from a three-year old, was irresistibly comic, especially as it was accompanied by a look of perfect composure and tranquility.

The Presidential Election.

Whatever may be the feelings, or passions, with which individuals may view the Presidential election just closed, there is one view of it of which every American citizen may justly be proud, and which cannot fail to give it importance and significance over the entire world.

For many months the rebel papers of the South, and the rebel sympathizing papers of Europe, had prophesied that the attempt at a Presidential election in this country, in the midst of civil war, would [illegible] military control, or a fearful one, resulting only in bloodshed and anarchy.

But to the disappointment of rebels, and the confusion of the foes of freedom everywhere, it has been one of the freest, fairest, and most peaceful elections ever held on this continent, thus evincing to the entire world, and for all future time, that intelligent freemen are capable of governing themselves, even under the most trying circumstances and in the mist of the most fiery ordeal to which any government can be possibly subjected.

This is effectually taken away from despots and tyrants their last great plea for depriving a people of the free right to govern themselves, on the ground of their inability to govern and protect themselves in the hour of vicissitude and donger.

It is true we have not so understood ourselves, nor did the government so understand either the intelligence or patriotism of the freemen of the North, still it required the actual experiment to demonstrate this great fact of humanity unmistakably to the world.

We believe, and confidently hope also, that the significant results of this election will tell with crushing weight upon the leaders of this unholy rebellion, and thus hasten it to a more speedy close. It must now be sufficiently evident to every one, that there is very lit le hope of persuading these leaders to desist from this fratricidal strife, in any other way than by demonstrating to them the utter hopelessness of success by its longer continuance.

Inasmuch, therefore, as the voice of the people has both sustained and fixed the policy of the government, it now becomes all who truly desire to see an early peace, whatever their views may have heretofore been, to unite in a hearty support of the government in all its attempts to bring about that result, rather than by a factious opposition to it, to give encouragement to those in oper. rebellion against it, to continue and protract the unhappy contest.

☞ Mosby lost valuable assistance a few days ago, in the person of a deserter from the 5th New York cavalry, known as the "big Yankee." This fellow figured conspicuously in the capture of Gen. Stoughton, at Fairfax Court House, over a year ago. Indeed, it was principally through his aid that this dash of Mosby's succeeded. A few days ago Mosby had some important messages to send to a distant point, and the errand was considered a very dangerous one. "The Big Yankee" proposed to undertake the job, and Mosby con idering him very valuable, and not desiring to lose him, endeavored to persuade him not to go; but he persisted in going, and Mosby finally consented. On his way he encountered a a small squad of Union cavalry, who halted him and demanded his surrender. He refused saying there was no surrender in him. At the same time he commenced firing into the squad which had halted him. Our men returned the compliment, which resulted in his death.

Burglary by Boys.

On Monday night last, the 7th inst., a daring burglary was committed at the store of C. B. Ackley on Maumee street, in Adrian. The burglary was affected by raising the cellar grates in front of the store, and by this means gaining access to the cellar and thence to the store above. The thieves succeeded in taking goods to the amount of about $300, consisting of watches, chains, whips and other articles. Marshal Whitmore on Tuesday arrested a boy named Charles Coon, aged about thirteen years, whom he had seen on the street and sent home late on Monday night. The boy Coon, though young in years, is an old offender, and has frequently been arrested for stealing. Another boy named Wheeler, is concerned with him in the robbery, and the boys assert that there is still another boy in the affair. The goods were found secreted partly in the barn belonging to Mrs. Coon, and part in some lumber outside.

A fight occurred at the Spottswood House, Richmond, on Sunday, between a member of the rebel Congress from Georgia and one from Virginia, the latter maintaining that negroes should be armed, the former that they should not. Wednesday, Nov. 16.

Gen. Sherman is said to be a long way on the road to Charleston or Savannah. The latter is 293 miles from Atlanta, and the former 308. It is not fully known which of these two places he will visit, but evidently one of them will be captured on his march to diverent p s of the Bonfederacy. He has a force of 50,000 or 60,000 men, splendidly equipped, and with every appliance of war. All public buildings, depots, and manufactories, etc., in Atlanta, are rendered worthless, and the railroads north and south of city, and all surrounding defensive works are to be destroyed. There is to be no turning back and nothing left behind of value to the enemy.

At the meeting of the City Council of Toronto, C. W., on Monday night, it transpired that information had been received of an intended demonstration on Canada by the members of the Fenian Brotherhood from the United States. The Mayor said the matter had been handed over to the Government.

The resignation of Gen. McClellan has finally been accepted, and the position thus made vacant has been filled by the appointment of Gen. Phil. Sheridan, the hero of the Shenandoah Valley.

The capture of the pirate Florida in the harbor of Bahia, and the probable future of the United States with Brazil, continue to excite much discussion in the Eastern States and England. A Lond n paper, not very friendly usually to this country, has the magnanimity to say that the matter rests entirely with the Brazilian Government, and is not a question that England can touch, even with the longest possible diplomatic pole.

Thursday, Nov. 16.

The United States gunboat Rattler, on the Mississippi River, has been sold to the rebels by her commander. It is said he received $200,000 (Confederate money, probably,) on delivery, and the balance is to be paid in cotton. The commander of the Rattler was arrested, but escaped, when he declared he would immediately command a privateer, and make war on the Union troops.

It appears the Talahassee managed to escape in the chase the other day of the four Union steamer engaged in the pursuit of her on the 2d inst. The Montgomery Lillian took the lead, the former following her up from 10 o'clock in the morning until dark. The pursuit was unflagging and most exciting. So near had they got to her, that but a short time would have elapsed before she would have been their prey, when night set in, and she escaped in the darkness.

A New York paper publishes an extract from a letter dated Atlanta the 10th which says the army on that day was under orders to prepare for a 60 days' campaign. It is not known what is to be the programme, but it is generally conjectured a large force is soon to start for Savannah, via Augusta and Milledgeville.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Gen. Butler had an interview with the President today. It is already reported that he has been assigned to command an important expedition, and that he will not return to the Army of the James. His speech in New York is warmly commended.

Thanksgiving Dinner.

The committee, consisting of leading merchants and citizens of New York, appointed to carry out the proposition to furnish our gallant soldiers and sailors a Thanksgiving dinner, appeal to the people of the North to join them in the effort. They ask for so-called poultry and other proper meat, as well as mince pies, sauces and fruits. But if any one is so situated as not to be able to cook the poultry or meat, it will be received uncooked. What is sent should be wrapped in white paper, boxed, and addred to "George W. Blunt, Gittey's Buildings, Trinity Place, New York." If uncooked, it should be so marked outside, and a list of contents should accompany the box. Nothing should be sent cooked prior to the 14th. Uncooked poultry or meat should reach New York on or before November 18th. Contributions in money should be sent to Theo. Roxwell, Treasurer, No. 94. Maiden Lane. The Express Companies have generously offered to transmit all these contributions free of charge.

Pearson walked up and knocked at the door, which was opened by Darby's wife. On the door being opened, he saw two men sitting at the table playing cards. He immediately called to them to surrender, to which they answered "never," and before they had time to draw their revolvers, he shot both of them dead.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

By the President of the United States of America.

It has pleased Almighty God to prolong our national life another year, defending us, with His guardian care, against unfriendly designs from abroad, and vouchsafed to us, in His mercy, many and signal victories over the enemy, who is of our own household. It has also pleased our Heavenly Father to favor as well our citizens in their homes as our soldiers in their camps, and our sailors on the rivers and seas, with unusual health. He has largely augmented our free population by emancipation and by immigration, while He has opened to us new sources of wealth, and has crowned the labor of our working men in every department of industry, with abundant reward. Moreover, He has been pleased to animate and inspire our minds and hearts with fortitude, courage and resolution sufficient for the great trial of civil war into which we have been brought by our adherence, as a nation, to the cause of freedom and humanity, and to afford to us reasonable [illegible] ance from all our dangers and [illegible]

Now, therefore, I, Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, do hereby appoint and set apart the last Thursday in November next, as a day which I desire to be observed by all my fellow citizens, wherever they may then be, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to Almighty God, the beneficent Creator and Ruler of the Universe; and I do further recommend to my fellow citizens aforesaid, that on that occasion they do reverently humble themselves in the dust, and from thence offer up penitent and fervent prayers and supplications to the Great Disposer of Events for a return of the inestimable blessings of peace, union and harmony throughout the land which it has pleased him to assign as a dwelling place for ourselves and our posterity throughout all generations.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington, this 20th day of October, in the year of Our Lord, 1964, and of the Independence of the United States the eighty-ninth.

By the President:

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

WM. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

Burglary at Palmyra.

On Tuesday night last a most daring burglary was committed at the house of Mr. Rollin Robinson, who resides at Palmyra, in this county. The burglar entered through a pantry window, upsetting a barrel of cider as he came in. He [illegible] opened a bureau drawer, and took from thence a watch, chain and cameo breast pin, belonging to Mrs. Robinson, the whole valued in the neighborhood of $150. The drawer was within two feet of Mr. Robinson's head, yet so slyly did the burglar do his work that not a sound disturbed the sleeper. The thief also "went through" Mr. Robinson's pantaloons, taking therefrom a knife, but entirely ignoring the key to a safe which was in the pocket. The safe at the time contained some seven hundred dollars, besides some valuable papers. No clue has been obtained to the perpetrator of this robbery, although suspicion is attached to a man formerly in the employ of Mr. Robinson, who enlisted in the army but afterwards deserted, who has been in Detroit a few days previous to the robbery, and who had been heard to threaten Mr. Robinson.—Watchtower.

FIRE IN THE STATE PRISON.—We learn from the Jackson Patriot that a fire broke out Thursday morning last in the shop of Withington, Cooley & Co., at the State Prison. The fire quickly communicated to the trip-hammer shop adjoining and the engine house, which were destroyed with theis contents. The Patriot has heard the loss estimated as high as fifteen thousand dollars. The fire is supposed to have been caused by the spontaneous combustion of a heap of coal adjoining the dry house.

☞ When the tea was thrown overboard in Boston harbor, September 10th 1776, Lot Cheever, one of the party got some of the tea in his shoes, which has been carefully prepared until the present time, and was recently presented to a Fair given in Boston.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healing tonic, genuine stimulant and unequaled morning appetizer. Prepared in the old Bourbon. Being now used to the exclusion of all other Bitters in more than fifty United States Army Hospitals, and millions of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been especially accepted from camp use by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ They are made of ingredients well known, and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with mild but effectual aperient properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirit, Sallow Complexion.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

FOR

Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced many who have tried them and be convinced of their efficacy.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

☞ If your druggist or tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.

☞ Remember the name, and take no other.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ The composition of Dr. Swain's Bitters, having been made public through the columns of Medical Journals, and having been adopted as a standard remedy by the Medical Profession, are by the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, EXEMPT FROM STAMP DUTY.

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 1864, amendatory of the bye-laws on fire limits.

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs. Slayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the bye-laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street, provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high on the west wall of said wood ware house to be built of brick, sustained upon iron columns with the entire structure covered with a roof, flat and of fire proof gravel, with cornice of brick along brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village be extended and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence northward sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials noted in the foregoing preamble;

Her grief stricken parents procured the services of the Chicago detectives to ascertain her whereabouts, but before she could be rescued the misguided girl fled to Joliet. She was followed to that place by an officer, but he was unable to find her.

☞ The following articles were sent from the Soldier's Aid Rooms of Tecumseh, Nov. 4th, 1864: Two packages of dried apples, 3 packages of currants, 24 pocket handkerchiefs, 6 pair of drawers, roll of bandages, 6 hospital shirts, 1 woolen blanket, 2 quilts, 8 pads for wounds, 3 jugs of catsup, keg of pickled tomatoes. The Soldier's Aid Society meets at Mrs. Murray's every Tuesday afternoon. Will the ladies please bear this in mind and go, one and all. Winter is coming on, so do not let the Soldiers suffer through your neglect. Do all you can in sending supplies for their benefit.

Married,

Nov. 10th, 1864, at the residence of Mr. E. Tindall, in Tecumseh, by Rev. S. E Wisnard, Mr. Wm. K. Powers and Miss Caroline E. Graves, ('Dora,') all of this village.

The husband and wife took the cars for Chicago and Milwaukie followed by the kind wishes of many friends. The form of the marriage ceremony was peculiar. It is usually sufficient that the bride promise affection and obedience to her husband, but in this case 'Dora' was required to be "subject to the Powers that be." All right. It could not be otherwise under the circumstances. Loyalty cannot even be kept out of marriage ceremonies when recognition is made of the Powers.

Union Livery Stable

"Union now, and Union ever,"
Shall be every freeman's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong;
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages.
Put on your sixes's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
and drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and hait,
With hay, or straw, or oats or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and trade at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Hayden's and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superseding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon as [illegible]

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it cannot pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent. per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation.

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to leaders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 3d, 1864, amendatory of the bye-laws on fire limits.

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs Slayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises affected, asking such an amendment of the bye-laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street; provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high also the west wall of said wood ware house to be built of brick, sustained upon iron columns, with the entire structure covered with one roof, flat and of fire proof gravel cement, cornice of brick along brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

Autumn Leaves.

Autumn leaves falling,
Many and bright;
Softly departing
In glory and light.

Gleaming so golden

Still in thy farewell
With beauty endured.

Sunbeams, ah! never
They glimmer'd so gay,
In thy sweet youth time,
As in thy decay.

Nature looks lovely,
Peaceful and blest;

And a soft incense
Seems to rise still,
Upward from valley,
Upward from hill.

Incense that lifts us,
In heart, to the throne
Of the wise Giver
For all mercies shown.

Scraps from Harper.

The two following are from the camp of the Fortieth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers, stationed near Memphis, Tennessee:

"Old Governor H., of G., L. County, Wisconsin, has already figured in your pages. Many are the laughable stories told of him. I remember seeing him once in a state of mind usually called wrath. The circumstances were as follows:

The Governor, returning home from a tour to the northern part of the State, put up for the night at hotel in the flourishing and beautiful village of Princeton, situated on the Fox River. The next morning, after arriving at home, he discovered that he had left his trunk at the hotel, twenty miles away. He just then saw one of his neighbors going to Princeton, and in his most pomous style requested him "to call at the hotel and see if [illegible] ing to him." "Yes, with pleasure," replied the kind and obliging neighbor. When ready to return he found his wagon heavily loaded; the trunk proved to be a large and well filled travelling trunk, quite heavy, and it was quite certain, on the drinciple of antecedent probabilities, that he would never get a cent for his trouble; so, seeing that it was safe in the hotel, he drove home. As he approached the residence of the governor, the latter went out and opened the gate, expecting the trunk would be taken in and left at the door. The farmer told him he was not coming in.

"But," says the governor, "did you not get my trunk?"

"No; you didn't ask me to get it."

"Did not? What would you call it I asked you?" thundered the exasperated governor.

"Why, you asked me to look and see if it was there. I did so, and you will find it safe there any day by just driving over to Princeton. Good day, governor, good-day!"

After we had flanked Johnson's army from Dallas, it was, contrary to the usual custom, the fortune of the First Brigade—Sheridan's old Division—to be left behind the army a few days, as a guard for an ambulance train. One day two of our men—one of them Jack Tyrrell, Commissary of our Brigade—went out to take a bath in a small bayou, which was observed by some of Ferguson's cavalry in the vicinity, who detached two men to bring them in. Being without arms they were surprised, and started off, in the very face of the pickets, who detached two men to bring them in. Being without arms they were surprised, and started off, in the very face of the pickets, who dared not fire for fear of injuring the prisoners. Each rebel started in a different direction with his charge. After going a short distance Tyrrell dodged to one side, exposing his captor to our pickets, who gave him a volley, but missed. The Johnny returned the shot; when Tyrrell sprang and caught him and dragged him from his horse. Here a short struggle ensued, in which the "Chivalry" had to give in, and minus his gun and sabre, was marched to the picket lines by his escort, who guided him by walking behind him with one hand in each side of his whiskers.

H—, had a large, ugly, yellow, big-headed, half-starved dog, which no sam't of food at home would half fill up, and it became necessary that something should be done to feed him. Accordingly H. with this dog close at his heels, went to market, marched up to a butcher's stall, and taking up a nice large beef steak held it up just in the dog's reach, and apparently examining it asked the price of such a steak as that.' The dog, wondering at his master's unusual generosity, [illegible] part of the performance, grabbed the steak and ran. H., of course, looked after him in perfect astonishment, while the infuriated butcher yelled, "Who ish dat dog? Mishter, I wish yen you looks at my meat you no holds it up so dogsh can shteal it!" H. felt very sorry, and didn't own 'dat dog' till he got out of the angry butcher's sight.

In passing the quarters of a colonel of a hundred days' regiment we saw a sentry pacing his 'beat' in front of said quarters; he was a noble looking fellow, well-clothed, tall and intelligent looking man. We remarked to a companion that a regiment of such soldiers would be of some service to the Government at the expiration of three hundred days, if properly drilled in the meantime; and just as we had finished the remark the sentry leaves his beat, goes to the opening of the tent, and calls out:

"John, give me a chew of tobacco!"

Whereat there appears at the entrance of the tent a person with eagles on his shoulders, and gave the sentry the required chew.

Our regiment (Twenty-fifth Indiana) having re-enlisted, after enjoying their veteran furlough at home, were ordered to Decatur, Alabama, where we were joined by the detachment of boys who did not reenlist, and who are distinguished from the veterans by the name of 'Rounders.' Soon after one of the men was brought before the colonel for some misdemeanor. The colonel, who, by the way, is noted for his ready means of disposing of such offenders, asked him if he was a Rounder. The offender answered in the negative. "Then," said the colonel, "I will make you one. Just walk round that stump about two hours."

☞ We never supposed that Moore described a literal fact when he said:

"The minstrel boy to the war has gone,
With his wild harp slung behind him," until the other day, when we saw a soldier in ward C, lying on his back with his leg amputated one week before, who held his guitar and sung loud and sweetly. The nurse told us that he would call for it, bright and early before breakfast, and he told us that he had kept his guitar with him slung behind him on his horse—being a cavalryman—even in battle. He had been in fifteen battles, and means to go in more when he gets a new leg. When he was riding slow, he said he could play as well as not, and added he, "it helps the soldiers to feel well, to get a little music now and then." Need we say that he is a German?—[Armory Square Hospital Gazette.

A RECEIPT FOR STEWED PEACHES.—Should the fruit be not perfectly ripe, throw it into boiling water and keep it just simmering, until the skin can be easily stripped off. Have ready half a pound of fine sugar boiled to a light syrup, with three quarters of a pint of water; throw in the peaches, let them stew softly until quite tender, and turn them often that they may be equally done; after they are dished, add a little strained lemmon juice to the syrup, and reduce it by a few minutes' quick boiling. The fruit is sometimes pared, divided, and stoned, then gently stewed until it is tender.

TURNIPS STEWED IN BUTTER.—This is an excellent way of dressing the vegetable when it is mild and finely grained; but its flavor otherwise is too strong to be agreeable. After they have been washed, wiped dry, and pared, slice the turnips nearly half an inch thick, and divide them into dice. Just dissolve an ounce of butter for each half-pound of the turnips, put them in as flat as they can be, and stew them very gently indeed, from three-quarters of an hour to a whole hour. Season with salt and white pepper when they are half done. When thus prepared, they may be dished over fried or nicely broiled mutton cutlets, or served themselves.

NEARLY LOST.—A Scotch country minister had been invited, with his wife to dine and spend the night at the house of one of his lairds. Their host was very proud of one of the large beds that had just come into fashion, and in the morning asked the lady how she had slept in it. 'O, very well my; but indeed I thought I had lost the minister a the-ith-er.'

Suicide by Starvation.

A very curious example of suicide by means of starvation occurred some years ago in Corsica. During the elections, the Sieur V. rushed into the electoral college armed with a dagger, which he plunged into the breast of a man who had done him some injury. The man fell dead at his feet. The assassination was committed in the full light of day, and in the presence of an assembled multitude.

V. was tried, found guilty, and condemned to death. His high spirit and resolute character were well known, and it was suspected that he would seek, by a perishing on the scaffold. He was therefore vigilently watched, and every precaution taken to deprive him of the means to putting an end to his existence.

He resolved to starve himself to death during the interval which elapsed between the sentence of the Court of Assizes and the reply which the Court of Cassation would make to the appeal he had addressed to it.

He had succeeded in concealing from the observation of his jailors a portion of the food with which they supplied him, so as to make it be believed that he took his meals regularly. After three day's abstinence, the pangs of hunger became insupportable. It then suddenly occurred to him that he might the more speedily accomplish the object he had in view by eating with avidity. He thought that the state of exhaustion to which he was reduced would unfit him to bear the sudden excess, and that it would inevitably occasion the death he so ardently desired. He accordingly sat down to the food which he had laid aside, and ate voraciously, choosing in preference the heaviest things. The consequence was that he was seized with a violent fit of indigestion, from which, contrary to his expectation, the prison-doctor speedily cured him.

He then resumed his fatal design. He [illegible] before. The torture was almost beyond his strength. His thirst, too, was intolerable. It overcame his resolution. He extended his hand towards the jug of water which had been placed in his cell. He drank with avidity, and, to use his own expression, was restored to life.

To avoid yielding again to a similar temptation, he daily took the precaution of overturning the jug of water which was brought to him. Lest he should be induced to raise it to his mouth, he threw it down with his foot, not venturing to touch it with his hand. In this manner he passed 18 days.

Every day, at different intervals, he noted down in his album a minute account of his sensations. He counted the beatings of his pulse, and marked their number from hour to hour, measuring with the most scrupulous attention the gradual wasting of his strength. In several parts of his melancholy memento, he declares that he felt it harder to bear the agonies of thirst than those of hunger. He confesses that he was frequently on the point of yielding to the desire of drinking. He nevertheless resisted.

He was surprised to find his sight become more and more clear, strong and accurate; it appeared to him like the development of a new sense. The nearer he approached his latter moments, the more his power of vision seemed to increase. On this subject he thus expresses himself: "It appears as though I could see through the thickest walls." His sense of hearing likewise attained the most exquisite sensibility. His hearing and smelling improved in a similar degree. His album contains many curious statements on these subjects.

The Sieur V. had devoted some attention to annatomy and physiology; and he attributes the increased acuteness of his senses to the way in which the intestinal irritation acted on the nervous system.

His ideas, he says, were numerous and clear, and very different from anything he had ever experienced in moments of excitement or intoxication. They were directed to local investigation, whether he applied them to an analysis of material objects, or to philosophic contemplation. He also felt himself inspired with a singular aptitude for mathematical calculation, a study for which he had previously felt very little inclination. In short, he declares that he never derived so much gratification from his intellectual condition, as throughout the whole duration of his physical torture.

He made notes in his album to the last moments of his existence. He had scarcely strength to hold the pencil with which he traced the following words: "My pulse has nearly ceased to beat—but my brain retains a degree of vigor which, in my sad condition, is the greatest solace that Providence could bestow on me. It is impossible that I can live out this day. My jailors watch me, and fancy they have adopted every precaution. They little think that I have outwitted them. Death annuls the sentence which has been pronounced on me. In another hour, perhaps, they will find nothing but a cold corpse.

V. expired as he foretold. His album has been carefully preserved. It is a record replete with interest to medical men.

A Signal Mistake.

It was about ten o'clock; the officers of the watch talking very jollily, and very improperly, with the marine officer; the lookout man on the gangway, bobbing his head like a fisherman's cost; the guardian on the quarter, under the lee of the hammock-netting; and the careful watch on the bow, sitting down on the forecastle; when, whiz came a shot across the bows, which was followed by another, which went through the foresail.

"Hallo! what the devil do you call this?" said the marine officer, "is it a three-decker or a gunboat?"

"Beat to quarters," roared the officer of the watch; the drummer being snug in his hammock.

"Pipe the hammock up," said the first lieutenant, who had jumped up the hatchway like a lamp-lighter.

Smack, came another shot over the stern.

"Where is the signal man with the lantern?" said the captain. "Run, youngster, and tell the purser to have the fighting lights ready; up with the fire screens, carpenters; clear away these guns here."

"Watch and idlers, shorten sail!" said the first lieutenant. "Watch, below, bring the hammocks up!"

The British blood was up; confusion, from want of proper discipline, prevailed; the topgallant sails were handed (that is furled,) the ship brought to the wind, and the next shot was a wide one of the mark.

"Send the marines aft with their muskets," said Bathurst, who was a fighter, a real good one at that; and if he stammered in his speech, he never wavered in his resolution when his enemy was near; and a braver man never trod a quarter-deck.

"Where—where—is thh signal man, (as it 'tis en)? Why, you scoundrel, you (as it 'twas en), don't you hoist the s-s-signal when you're t-t-told? (as it 'tis en.)"

Independently of poor Bathurst's natural infirmity, he could not help say, 'tis en—'twas en," at the end of every two or three words; and he was always called "old 'tis and 'twas en," as long as I can remember him. This was the effect of hurry in expression, and was laughable to the highest degree, in serious discourse.

Up went the lanterns; but, as Dr. Johnson says, "Whatever is done in a hurry, is naturally done badly;" so we found; for we got dangling a parcel of lights, no more like the signal than an illuminated star at Vauxhall. Up went some lanterns from the stranger; but, as she was end on, we could neither make out her signal or if she was a ship, or drig, or xebeck. She looked large in the haze of the night; and I am willing to admit that I bobbed my head like wag-jaw women, carried about by the Italian boys, whenever she fired. She was now getting too close to be pleasant; we were, after a fashion, clear for quarters.

Each ship had mistaken the signal; and, of course, we believed her an enemy, and they paid us the same compliment. The night was confoundedly dark and I kept tumbling over handspikes and crowbars, and breaking my shins and toes over the loose shots.

The captain was standing aball, trumpet in hand, as cool as a cucumber. He desired the marines to treat our adversary with a few small shot.

This rather astonished our opponent who little dreamed he had got hold of a frigate; and, as we fired one or two of our main-deck guns, she yawed a little, and we discovered she was a brig.

"I've got you s-s-snug enough, my b-boy!" said the captain. "Avast firing on the main deck; why, we shall damage her."

"Shall I just fire the thirty-two pounder, your honor?" said an Irish captain of a quarter-deck gun. "Had luck to me, if I don't make them kiluk on board!"

"Silence! fore and aft," roared the first lieutenant.

"Ho! the brig ahoy!" hollowed the captain, disguising the words as much as possible. "What brig is that?"

"What ship is that?" replied a gruff voice.

"This is his Majesty's ship, the Salsette."

"This is his Majesty's ship, the Monkey."

"The devil it is!" said the [illegible] 'Heave-to, sir, and come on board directly,' said the captain, in a total officer-like manner, "and haul that signal down!"

I just heard the answer—

"Why, you have got the wrong signal up, sir!"

"The devil we have," said old Bathurst; and forthwith pulled some papers out of his pocket, asked the day of the month, looked for some memoranda, and then shuffling the private signals away, muttered—

"C-c-course the s-s-signals! I have b-b-bothered my b-b-brain so confoundedly! But I never could understand this business!"

The Last of the Stuarts.

Among the prominent members of the Roman society was the last of the Stuarts, Cardinal York, with whom I became somewhat of a favorite," says Lord Cloncurry, "probably by addressing him as 'majesty,' and thus going a step further than the Duke of Sussex, who was on familiar terms with him, and always applied to him the style of "Royal Highness."

"The cardinal was in the receipt of an income of £8,000 or £9,000 a year, of which he received £4,000 from his royal rival George III, and the remainder from ecclesiastical benefits. This revenue was then in Italy equivalent at least to £20,000, and it enabled his eminence to assume somewhat of royal state. He was waited upon with all suitable ceremony, and his equipages were numerous and splendid, and freely placed at the disposal of his guests. He was in the habit of receiving visitors very hospitably at his villa at Frascati, where I was often a guest, and was frequently amused by a reproduction of the scenes between Sancho Panza and his physician, during the reign of the 'squire in Barataria.' His eminence was an invalid, and under a strict regimen; but he still retained his his taste for savory meats.

"Among the cardinal's most favorite attendent was a miserable cur dog, which, probably having been cast off by his master, as being neither useful nor ornamental, one day attached himself to his eminence at the gate of St. Peter's—an occurrence to which he constantly referred, as a proof of his true royal blood, the cur being, as he supposed, a King Charles spaniel, and therefore endowed with an instinctive hereditary acquaintance with the house of Stuart.

Upon the occasion of my visit to Frascati, I presented the cardinal with a telescope, which he seemed to fancy, and received from him in return the large medal struck in honor of his accession to his unsubstantial throne.

BAKED HASTY PUDDING.—Take four a pint of new milk sufficient to mix into a thin batter two ounces of flour, put the remainder, with a small pinch of salt, into a clean saucepan, and when it boils quickly, stir the flour briskly into it; keep it stirred over a gentle fire for ten minutes, pour it out, and when it has become a little cool, mix with it two ounces of fresh butter, three of pounded sugar, the grated rind of a small lemon, four large or five small eggs, and half a glass of brandy, or as much orange-flower water. To these half a dozen bitter almonds, pounded to a paste, are sometimes added. Bake the pudding half an hour in a gentle oven.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 1, 1864.

The Situation.

There is of course but little use of attempting to predict the future, and whenever we attempt to do so are very apt in our enthusiasm to outrun the possibilities of military success; but it is conceded on all hands, that never at any time since the war began have the prospects of a speedy and ultimate triumph over this causeless and unhallowed rebellion seemed brighter than at this very moment.

From Sherman we hear but little; but what we are permitted to hear through rebel sources is all that could be desired, and the fact that the rebels seek to suppress what news they have, is not certainly an indication that they have anything to publish in their own favor from

The fact is, they are evidently without the means of serious resistance in that quarter, while Sherman is rapidly destroying their whole system of Rail Road communication, cutting the Confederacy into detached sections, unable to reach or relieve each other, destroying their military resources and supplies, and spreading consternation and ruin along his path.

We hope also that in his course he will be able to reach and release, our inhumanly starved and dying prisoners, while on his resistless way to the Atlantic coast—and should not be surprised to learn that before this he has already done so.

In seeking to disturb the army left with Gen. Thomas, Hood has already placed himself where he is compelled to either fight or retreat, and very possibly both. The temporary evacuation of Huntsville, Decatur &c., for the purpose of concentrating the army in front of Hood, is only a military strategy, and is much more a sign of conscious strength, than weakness on the part of Gen. Thomas. Even the loss of a battle by Gen Thomas, who would in that case fall back upon Nashville, would be no compension to the rebels, for the march of Sherman through the heart of Georgia, and the destruction of Rail Road communication and military supplies; but we do not believe that even this poor compensation is in store for them.

The open dissentions too of the rebel Congress and rebel leaders, are beginning to assume most dangerous proportions, and point signigcantly to a speedy dissolution of this compact of Treason, tyranny and inhumanity.

And while this is so, with the leaders of the rebellion, it is a noticeable fact, that now the disturbing elements of a Presidential election being out of the way, there never was a time since the commencement of the war, when a more general and cordial unanimity in support of the government existed at the North than at this very moment.

Do not all these things, then, carefully considered, really and significantly indicate on the part of the loyal people of the North a continued, a speedy, and an ultimate success over one of the most infamous, and most criminal, as well as most barbarous rebellions the world has ever seen.

☞ A dress parade of bounty-jumper, took place in Indianapolis a few days since. Over 100 of them were lashed two and two to a long rope, with a herculean African leading the column, and ringing a bell. Each jumper carried a large playcard on his back, as an advertisement of his profession. A line of friendly bayonets, on each side, kept off the curious crowd, and the soul-stirring notes of the "Rogue's March" kept time to their tramping feet.

☞ On Monday the 21st ult., while Dr. M. Whitten, of Colewater, was vulcanizing a sett of India rubber teeth, the vulcanizer exploded, tearing the whole apparatus to pieces, some of the parts passing up through the ceiling and lodging in the timbers above; others passed into and demolished the gas metre. Dr. M. Whitten was standing but a few feet from the vulcanizer at the time of the explosion, but fortunately escaped injury.

☞ The Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, which was opened at Philadelphia on Sunday last, is the largest church in the United States, and there are few modern churches in Europe which surpass it in size and magnificence. It is an exact model of St. Charles' Church on the Roman Corso, lacking only that vesture of age which heightens the beauty of architectural effect. It is said to be able to contain 5,000 people.

The News

Saturday Nov. 26.

There is no longer any doubt of Sherman's destination, or of his success. Late extracts from Georgia papers give us information that he is by this time in quiet possession of Macon, and is probably meditating an attack on Milledgeville, the capital of the State. The rebel Gen. Wheeler attacked Sherman's advance, but was driven back through Griffin and beyond. Matters in the State, from all accounts, are getting quite lively, and it will not be long before the most cheering news will reach us. One dispatch informs us that instead of Sherman going to the capital he is making for Augusta. This may be so, as he may choose to make this his base rather than an interior point, where he can determine at leisure whether he will march on Charleston or Savannah. The former is 137 miles from Augusta, and the latter 132 miles.

It is rumored that Secretary Fessenden will recommend to Congress at its next session an increase of taxes. It is also said it has been suggested to the Secretary to put a new currency loan on the market, paying interest of ten per cent. He is, however, averse to paying more than 7-30ths.

It is regarded as highly probable that burg so as to enable him to shorten his lines.

Monday, Nov 28.

Sherman's movements in Georgia continue to attract the attention of all the Southern journals. Some of them state that Sherman did not intend to capture Macon, his move in that direction being only a feint to cover up his real intention. They admit he is in the heart of the State, and it evidently annoys them not a little that he has gained so decided advantages where he can break up their communications with the East or West at will. The Legislature in session at Milledgeville adjourned, and the members have skedaddled, some to their homes, and others are studying how they will get there. So far, the situation, under the glorious Sherman, is favorable.

The Union prisoners lately exchanged at Savannah, are described as but little better than living skeletons, and in terrible condition as regards health. The details are horrible and almost too sickening to read. Who can doubt the awful retribution that awaits the barbarous rebels of the South?

Hood's forces are stated to be in the vicinity of Columbia, Decatur, Pulaski and Huntsville, Tennessee, which places our troops have recently evacuated. On the 24th inst, some severe skirmishing occurred, resulting in a loss to the Unionists of 44 killed and wounded. The rebel loss is estimated at 264. Among the killed was one Colonel. Large bodies of troops are being massed in Hood's front. Some heavy fighting may be expected in that direction within a few days. Telegraphic communication from the above places with Nashville has been interrupted since Friday, which gives rise to numerous rumors that a battle is raging.

President Lincoln was made the recipient of a fine present on Saturday by a California hunter. It consisted of a chair made with elk horns, four large antlers forming the back, which are set on the feet of the animal.

Tuesday, Nov. 29.

The incendiaries continue to be arrested in New York, two more having been overhauled yesterday morning, and the police are on the alert ferreting out all those concerned in the matter. Gen Dix's order is having a good effect, and southerners are flocking to his headquarters and registering their names.

Gen. Butler's dispatch boat was burned on Sunday morning in James river. At the time the General himself, and Gen. Schenck and Admiral Porter were on board. No lives were lost, but ten horses belonging to Gen. Butler and staff were burned to death. Shortly before the accident the Greyhound had received from the steamer Cossack the army mail for Gen. Butler's department, which left Washington on yesterday morning, and it is supposed to be lost.

It is stated this morning upon undoubted authority that there are no fears of a diplomatic rupture between this country and Brazil, as Gen. Webb, our Minister Resident in that country, took steps, immediately upon the seizure of the pirate, to allay any ill feelings on the part of the Brazilian Government, and render an amicable adjustment of the difficulty certain.

Wednesday, Nov. 30.

The latest news from Sherman is that brought to Washington yesterday by the ex-Gen. Roger A. Pryor, recently serving in the rebel army as a private. This noted rebel was captured near Petersburg last Sunday by our pickets. He admitted that Sherman had captured Macon and Milledgeville, and that there was little, if any doubt, from the rapid progress he was making, that he had captured Augusta, and would encounter nothing serious to impede his march to the seaboard.

Senator Sherman is in Washington, and, it is said, will be Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Thirty-ninth Congress. He openly avows his hostility to to the issue of any more currency.

The rebels under Gen. Payne captured New Creek, West Virginia, a small Union post, on the Baltimore and Ohio road, on Monday.

The indications are that the Secretary of the Treasury will recommend a continuance of the direct loans and increased taxation, especially on manufactures.

From Southern Papers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The Augusta Constitutionalist of the 22d advises the people to cut down trees and impede Sherman's march. If possible burn everything that man or beast can eat, and drive the stock into the swamps. It says troops have already arrived from Virginia, and more are on the way, and says delays are dangerous to Sherman.

The Savannah News of the same date gives similar advice. Their papers insist that his movement is a retreat to a point of communication.

The Herald publishes Gov. Brown's proclamation in full, calling out the Georgia militia. It is lengthy and a peremptory call. It also gives Gen. Meigs' order impressing all citizens of Augusta and vicinity. All the bar-rooms were closed company of citizens was organized. All the printers and editors in Augusta had been organized into a company called the Whitter's cavalry was ordered to rendezvous at Macon. Members of the Georgia Legislature, passing through, were arrested, and efforts made to put them in the ranks. They, however, managed to get off.

The Richmond Whig of the 20th has an article on the worthlessness of Richmond to either army. It says there never was greater anxiety than the Yankee belief that the capture of Richmond would ruin the Confederacy. The moral effect in its fall would for awhile certainly be great, but there would be ceuntervailing advantages that would more than outweigh it. It would relieve Gen, Lee's army, who then, having no capital to defend, could maneuvre as it pleased. [The Tribune thinks this article preliminary to the evacuation of the rebel capital.]

The Sentinel has a long article in which it praises the personal and soldierly qualities of Crant and Sherman.

The Bristol, Tenn., Register, in its account of the fight between the Union forces and Breckinridge, at Strawberry Plains, East Tennessee, on the 18th, says the Yankee negro soldiers suffered severely. Three hundred were reported killed. It adds that Breckinridge and Vaughan again have the Yankees surrounded at Strawberry Plains. The same sheet gives an account of the defeat of Gen. Gillam by Breckinridge's forces, near Morristown, East Tennessee. Vaugan and Drake's cavalry have pursued the Yankees and routed them. They captured all their transportation and artillery, consisting of 70 wagons, 6 Parrott guns, ammunition enough for a campaign, and 18 stand of colors.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

WOOLSTON COMFORT.

The Allegan Journal says that on the 23d ult. there was the greatest snow storm that has occurred in that county for 23 years. All the roads leading into Allegan, as well as the streets of the village, were completely blockaded, and travelling by vehicles or on foot was attended with great difficulty.

On Saturday evening last, some fiend in human form fired into a train on the M. S. R. R., near Hudson. The ball passed through one window, then taking a diagonal course whizzed uncomfortably near the ears of several passengers, passed out through an opposite window. Some pieces of glass were scattered promiscuously through the car, cutting the faces of several persons. A negro residing near the place, whose cow was recently run over and killed by a train, is suspected of firing the shot.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tonic, gentle stimulant and unequalled morning appetizer. Prepared in ripe old Bourbon. Being now used to the exclusion of all other Bitters in more than fifty United States Army Hospitals, and millions of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been especially exempted from stamp tax by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

They are made of ingredients well known and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with sufficient strengthening properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirit, Sallow Complexion,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
FOR
Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, so that them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

If your druggist or tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—Remember the name, and take no other,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

The composition of Dr. Swain's Bitters, having been made public through the columns of Medical Journals, and having been adopted as a standard remedy by the Medical Profession, are by the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, EXEMPT FROM STAMP DUTY.

THE SCANDINAVIAN KONGENER

The great Blood Purifier and Pills, for the cure of Scrofula and all Blood Diseases.

DR. ROBACK'S
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from all parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled
for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache, Costiveness, Colic Pains, Cholera Morbus, Indigestion, Pain in the Bowels, Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy
For Diseases of the BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATER ON CALCEOUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEEKNESS
Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse;

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair, and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths per cent. per annum.—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1 000, and 5000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deduction or commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On an average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in force.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loan, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK of Detroit, Mich., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Bankers and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh, Oct. 31, 1864, amendatory to the bye laws as fire limits.

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs Slayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the bye laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and ninety feet of the north line of Chicago street: provided the two story part of said ware house when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side of the of twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high, also the west wall of said ware house to be built of brick, such part of said ware house with the entire structure covered with tin roof, flat and of fire proof gravel cement, cornices of brick also, brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and east of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land from and after the first day of March next be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

OLD SCHOOL BOOKS.

There are a great many articles written about old friends, old lovers, old letters—in fact, I believe all ancient articles have been honored by a notice excepting old school books. I do not remember of ever seeing them and yet how prominent a place they occupy in many of our heart libraries, for many a pleasant memory is encased beneath those torn and soiled covers.

Before me lies a pile of these old school books; I take an almost worn-out reader; at the first note of memory's bells I am transplanted back again upon the threshold of childhood. I open it, and there are these words—"I love you." The chirography is certainly not artistic, but the picture of memory which it lays before me certainly is; it is that of a sweet childish face, soft brown eyes, and hair of a golden hue, and a little chubby hand grasping a pencil and writing these words,—"I love you;" and by many an act and word since then have I been made to feel that these were no idle words. She is a young lady now, and is styled Miss Lucy. I remember that she had a Miss to her name when quite young, but there was an affix which did not give much importance to the name. I presume Miss Lucy sounds much pleasanter to her ears than "Mischief" did. Ah! Lulu, does it seem possible that we are the two merry, careless children that played together so long and merrily in our "hill-crowned" city, making houses and cakes of the pure clean sand, or, when our more civilized fit came over us, playing "going a visiting" in the parlor in the little cottage? These scenes come over me with distinctness, and I almost sigh to think that they are gone, and now we have to play something more real—not on the hill-side, nor in the cottage 'neath the hill, but in the great drama of "Life." These words of love are written underneath the story of Mary and the Lamb—which we all remember so well; this also in itself is a mine of remembrance. The creations of Tennyson and Longfellow, dear as they are to me, have never made my heart-strings vibrate with such sweet emotions as those same little simple verses.

Here is a Geography, and underneath my name is a circle and the well-known rhyme—"Round is the ring," etc. There is no mistaking these long, short, crooked and twisted letters; no one but Johnny D. could make such letters. No young lady ever felt more pleasure in receiving her first love-letter, than did I on reaching this avowal of Johnny's, and no name and image but Johnny's was enshrined in my heart, until one day little May B. came to school, and ere night, with her blue eyes and flaxen curls, had captivated Johnny's fickle heart; and that night, going home, she told me "If I would never tell as long as I lived and breathed, she would show me something;" and opening her spelling book she showed me what Johnny had written: "If you lov me as I lov you no knif kan cut our luv in 2." Oh, how I cried over his fickleness; and next day, with what a proud toss of the head I rejected the apple and peanuts which he offered, and he only resisted it by giving them to May.

I know not in what land gay Johny rests his head, but I do know that blue-eyed May was soon deserted for a black-eyed Jennie.

Here is an old Grammar; how this bared the young heart. The verb "love," what a mixed up thing it seemed; I thought it not half so nice as the way Johnny and I conjugated it. Why did none of our teachers tell us that we should never be done with grammar until we are done with time? Very few hearts but what conjugate the verb love, and we all have a part in the tenses; the present, the past, and the future,—and the moods, they are the heart's language: Youth and happiness utter the "will and shall be;" old age and misery sound the plaintive note of the "might, could and should have been."

Here is a History. On the fly leaf written some very touching lines, by pugnosed, freckled-faced, Fred Brown:

"Graceful girl, charming beauty,
Go to school and do your duty;
Study Latin, study Greek—
And grease your shoes make 'em squeak."

Then follows, from blue-eyed Bessie—"May angels guide and bless you. Dear Bessie, may you hover near and watch over me, for the "Good Shepherd has called you, and you silver chord of life is loosed. Ah, may you, darling Bessie, ever guide and bless me.

The one that sat next, in the German class, and whispered the answers softly, so that no dreaded "black-mark" should stand against my name, he fell at Fort Donnelson; but his memory is sacred to us: "Tell them," he said, "I died for a noble cause, therefore do not mourn for me." We do not mourn thee, but we have raised an altar in our hearts to thy memory, and we pour upon it the sweet incense of remembrance.

There was one we called the book-worm; every now and then comes news from him across the waters; he is way up on fame's ladder, but he has never forgotten those who began the ascent with him, but stopped on the way. Have you found, dear H., that Fame can send its rays into the heart as well as gild the name?

Here is a rude sketch, done in chalk, of Miss Prim, by Charlie G. She would not feel flattered in the least, could she it. Dear, blessed Charlie, what a dear plague, pestilence, and comfort you were! Was there ever any one to be punished—Charlie was the one; was there any mischief going on—Charlie was at the bottom of it; was there any wild expedition over marshes, through undergrowth, after nuts that never grew—then Charlie planned the expedition; was there ever a slighted scholar, Charlie was his firm friend; was there any little girls who had no little lovers or big brothers to take them home on sleds when the snow was deep—Charlie's new and beautiful sled, "Sparrow," was always at their service. He would sink nearly to his waist gathering Pond Lillies for the teacher, and the very day of presentation would have the whole school laughing at his mimicry of her. You have amounted to something, although I remember the teachers all predicted that such a rogue would never amount to anything. I have no doubt that many of those teachers weep over your sketches of schoolife, and school-mates and teachers; certainly the tribute paid to them could not fail to reach their hearts.

Here is an English Literature,—no here is a letter from my teacher, written when I left school. Nearly a year has those dear eyes been closed and the sod laid upon that stilled heart. But now those eyes are looking into mine with the same earnest look, and he speaks to me in this letter. I was so eager to be out in the great world, when I received it, to heed much of its advice. I know I pronounced it a dear good letter, just such a one as would be expected from such a good soul; but I placed it in here as I closed my book with a bang, declaring that never again would I be tempted to look into one. I little thought then that with them I was shutting out my greatest happiness. My heart gave one great bound of freedom. Now, thought I, no more study, no more imprisonment in school rooms, but, instead, one long dream of happiness. He says:

"MY DEAR PUPIL:

"To-day you leave us; no longer will it be my privilege, with the other teachers, to assist you along knowledge-rugged path; no longer will it be my right to counsel and advise you; but I feel I must say a few words to you before I bid you good-bye.

"I know how eager you are to leave this little corner just outside the corporation of the world, as you call it. The world viewed through fancy's telescope, from your stand-point, looks very bright and flattering. You are now to take your place upon this stage; and now, my dear pupil, let me urge upon you the importance of acting your part well. Do not, I entreat of you, live the surface life, fluttering like a butterfly in the sunshine of pleasure, and then when the trials and realities come, fold your wings and cease to exist. Live the true life—the deep undercurrent. Dive down deep, and search for its treasure. Bring up the diamonds and the pearls, and have your heart jeweled with them." * * *

My dear teacher, how deep your words sink into my heart. To-day I feel deeply that I have rejected your counsel. Yes, I feel that I have been living the surface life; but I found that it is an unsatisfactory, unprofitable life, and the pleasure that danced on the waves and flashed in the sunshine of fancy, proved to be naught but bubbles, that burst as I grasped them, leaving me nothing.

Almost upon the threshold of the New Year. I mean to begin to live the true life. Would that I could have your counsel and assistance. But you have pointed me to the Great Teacher, telling me that true knowledge cometh from above. Striving for His assistance, and having thy memory for my guidging star I intend to work out the plan of life which you have marked out for me.

I thought this hour had been passed looking at old school-books, but, after all, I have only been looking at a few "heart-jewels from memory's casket.

"MONTON."

Hat and Feather Mania.

Is there any sale for bonnets? There cannot be much, for at least five-sixths of the adorables appear in the street arrayed in hat and plume. The worst of the prevailing fashion is that it does not suit everybody. If it improves youth and beauty it also renders the aged and unlovely disagreeably conspicuous. Sterne said that if it should rain mitres, they would all be misfits for him, and certainly a large number of the female heads one encounters in our streets were not made for the saucy hats with which they are surmounted. Faded dowagers should eschew beavers trimmed with singlets of parrots, macaws, flamingoes, scarlet, ibises, high-holders, and game-chickens. Very short fat ladies, if we may be allowed to say so, don't look 'killing' with little conicle concerns, topped off with rooster's tails, stuck on the crowns of their heads. They remind one of dumpy candles being put out by insufficient extinguishers. We might also hint, in a friendly way, if any one would insure our ears, that when ladies of a certain age wear their "back hair" in scoop nets, it is important to have it harmonize with the front ringlets to a shade. We fear some of the wigmakers are very unprincipled. When they sell half suits of hair, why don't they match therpatterns?"

There is one light objection to flaring hats, to which our delicacy almost forbids us to call attention. It is this: they throng the sidewalks after nightfall. However, as Dr. Watts thought it meet and proper that psalms and hymns should be set to profane tunes, perhaps the fact that the fallen sisterhood wear the jauntiest hats in town is no reason why Virtue should not sport the same styles. Lucretia is still Lucretia, though she may don the plumes of Lais. The only difficulty is that the similarity occasionally leads to unpleasant mistakes.

Women of the Sandwich Islands.

A lady writing from Honolulu to the Bulletinf this discourses upon the native women and their very free and easy manners:

"The women are erect, wide in their shoulders, and carry their heads like queens. Many of them are truly handsome, wearing their hair falling over their shoulders in curls, and surmounted with little straw hats, garlanded with wreaths of lovely native flowers. They clothe themselves modestly and prettily, wearing the dress to cover neck and arms, and falling loosely from the shoulders to the top of the feet, which are often bare. Not being civilized like us, they have not been enlightened into compressing their ribs with iron and whalebone corsets, nor to disturb and torture their feet with overtight shoes, nor to put bonnets upon their heads running up into turrets of silk and artificial flowers, and leaving the ears at the mercy of the bitter wind, nor to make up forty-five yards of steel wire into cages and fasten themselves within them, nor to carry an entry half yard of dress stuff bravely after them over the pavement through thick and thin. Yes, these women have the advantage of us, for are we not forced by the exigencies of custom when we come with our long garments upon any impurities of the pathway, to shut our eyes and clench our teeth and rush blindly over them, whereas, these Kanaka women, at the sight of a spot of water, lift their light garments gingerly and pass over, clean and unsullied from contact. Can this be barbarism?"

☞ Tom Clarke of St. John's desired a Fellow of the same college to lend him Bishop Burnet's History of the Reformation; the other told him he could not spare it out of his chamber, but if he pleased he might come there and read it all day long, some time after the same gentleman sends to Tom to borrow his bellows; Tom sent him word that he could not possibly spare them out of his chamber, but he might come there and use them all day long if he wished.

☞ When we hear that a friend has detected a fault in us, we are always disposed to do him the same favor.

☞ What is worse than raining pitch-forks? Hailing omnibuses.

For the Herald.

Raising Rutabages.

This branch of farming I consider as very important to the healthful rearing of cattle and sheep, as a vegetable substance for feeding in the winter season. And to inform those who may not thoroughly understand the cultivation of the same in this respect, and also how those owning small farms can make larger profits, I will make a few statements of facts which fell under my observation. We have raised four successive crops as follows from 100 square rods of ground. The first year we realized only 200 bushels being injured when small by the fly.—The second year, we met with better success raising 375 bushels or 3 3-4 bushels to the rod. The third year a yield of only 250 bushels. While the fourth crop came up to 420 or 4 1-5 bushels to the rod. We gave it the heaviest manuring this year which was thirteen loads to the 100 square rods. This last crop was raised at an expense of $21,50 or 5 cents per bushel. We have always drilled them in and invariably upon the same piece of land,—and prepared it similar as for tobacco.

Thomas B. Taylor, who has had large experience in this respect states that 600 bushels can easily be averaged to the acre, and that from five to six bushels of these after they are well cut up are sufficient to feed 100 sheep daily, without grain and with less than the usual quantity of hay.

They are doubtless the best possible feed for sheep, especially in close winters. They are also good for cattle with the exception of cows giving milk; many think carrots preferable for these, and that they give the butter better flavor and color, which is very desirable for market in the winter. From a cow 3 years old and well fed upon carrots I averaged, the winter season through, from six to seven pounds of butter per week, but I have heard those who have had greater experience than myself say they could produce from ten to eleven pounds per week from older and better cows.—From the above facts an inference can be drawn as to what might be done from farming upon a small scale, or otherwise enabling the farmer to keep more stock in proportion to the number of acres, and here let me give a word of advice to the sterner sex, and that is if they would till a less number of acres and till it well I should not think it all a fable about the wilderness and desert being made to "blossom like the rose," but the undrained swails and willow marshes and cesspools that one sees in a days drive is rather provoking to this statement; and this waste of land mostly upon soil owned by wealthy land holders.

As an instance of a small farm well tilled, let me cite you to the neat appearance of Ethan Allen's farm of 22 acres which attracts the attention of the passer. It is situate two miles west of Tecumseh. It has, probably, one of the best hedges of Osage Orange in the State; showing that this kind of fencing can be made successful. He has now upon the ground one of the best pieces of wheat that has fallen under my observation. He raises the staples—mostly corn, wheat and potatoes; and he keeps the land free from brambles and elders. And I will venture to state that very few farmers produce more bushels to the number of acres.

MRS. K. REMINGTON.

Fun at Home.

Don't be afraid of a little fun at home, good people? Don't shut up your house lest the sun should fade your carpets, and your hearts, lest a hearty laugh shakes down some of the musty old cobwebs there! If you want to ruin our sons, just let them think that all mirth and social enjoyment must be left on the threshold without when they come at night.—When once a home is only regarded as a place to eat drink and sleep in, the work is begun that ends in gambling houses and reckless degredation. Young people must have fun and relaxation somewhere; if they do not find it at their own hearthstone, it will be sought at other and perhaps less profitable places. Therefore let the fire burn brightly at night and make the homestead delightful with all those little arts that so perfectly understand.—Don't repress the buoyant spirits of your children; half an hour of merriment round the lamp and fire light of a home does not the remembrance of many a care and annoyance during the day, and the best safeguard they can take with them into the world is the unseen influence of a bright little domestic sanctuary.

Beautiful Sentiment.

Clasp thy hands meekly over the still breast—they've no more work to do, close the weary eyes—they've no more tears to shed, part the damp locks—there is no more pain to bear. Closed alike to love's kind voice, and calumny's stinging whisper.

O, if in that stilled heart you have ruthlessly planted a thorn; if from that pleading eye you have carelessly turned away; if your loving glance and kindly word, and clasping hand have come—all to late—then God forgive you! No frown gathers on that marble brow as you—no scorn curls the chiseled lip—no flush of wounded feelings mounts to the blue veined temples.

God forgive you! for your feet too must shrink appalled from death's cold river—your faltering tongue asks: "can this be death?" Your fading eye lingers lovingly on the sunny earth, your clammy hands feel its last feeble flutter.

O, rapacious gravel yet another victim for thy voiceless keeping! What! no words of greeting from the household sleepers? No warm welcome from a sister's loving lips? no throb of pleasure from the dear maternal bosom? Silent all?

O if these broken limbs were never gathered up! If beyond death's swelling flood there were no eternal shore! If for the struggling bark there were no port of peace. If athwart that lowering cloud sprang no bright bow of promise.

A Small Family.

Last winter a contraband came into the Federal lines in North Carolina, and was marched up to the officer of the day to give an account of himself, whereupon the following colloquy took place:

'What's your name?'

'My name's Sam.'

'Sam what?'

'No, sah; not Sam Watt. I'se jest Sam.'

'I hasn't got no oder name, sah. I'se Sam—dat's all.'

'What's your master's name?'

'I'se got no massa now; massa runned away—yah, yah, I'se a free nigger now.'

'Well! what is your father and mothers name?'

'I'se got none, sah—neber had none.—I'se jist Sam—ain't nobody else'

'Haven't you any brothers and sisters?'

'No, sah, neber had any. No brudder, no sister, no fader, no mudder, no massa—nothing but Sam. When you see Sam you see all dere is of us.'

Items for Housekeepers.

Do everything at the proper time.—Keep everything in its place. Always mend clothes before washing them.

Alum or vinegar is good to set colors red, green or yellow.

Sal soda will bleach; one spoonful is enough for a kettle of clothes.

Save your suds for the garden and plants, or to harden yards when sandy.

A hot shovel held over varnished furniture will take out spots.

A bit of glue, dissolved in skim milk and water will restore rusty old crape.

Ribbons of any kind should be washed in cold suds, and not rinsed.

If flat irons are rough, rub them well with fine salt, and it will make them smooth.

If you are buying a carpet for durability, you must choose small figures.

A bit of soap rubbed on the hinges of doors will prevent them from creaking.

Scorch snuff put in the holes where crickets run out will destroy them.

Wood ashes and common salt wet with water, will stop the cracks of the stove and prevent the smoke from escaping.

Green should be the prevailing color for bed hangings and window drapery.

'Why, yes sir,' said the other, scratching his head, 'guess I've had a hand in 'em.'

☞ A coxcomb, teasing Dr. Parr with an account of his petty ailments, complained that he could not go out without catching cold in his head. "No wonder," returned the doctor, "you always go out without anything in it."

True Economy.

There is not a family of the middle and poorer classes who do not feel the necessity of retrenchment in order to counterbalance the high and rapidly advancing prices of articles of consumption. They see the disproportion between their [illegible] expenses is daily becoming greater, and the question of how to preserve the equilibrium between income and outlay is a most fruitful topic of family discussion. This, however, is not so difficult as at first appears, and depends more upon a curtailment of that which is useless or injurious than of that which is beneficial and necessary. In the first place, the fact is notorious that as a people we live too high and dress too well. There is not a nation in the world that is so extravagant in these respects as our own; and herein lies the secret of that other truism, that no nation equals us in physical infirmities. We live on the luxuries rather than the necessaries of life; we seek to please the palate rather than to furnish nature with her actual requirements, and our dietetic system invariably depends upon taste. The result is, that we are a nation of dyspeptics, that our sanitary condition is inferior to that of any European nation; and that we are, as shown by statistics, a comparatively short-lived people. Retrenchment regarding what we eat, therefore, may conflict with our long-acquired habits of indulgence, but is calculated to more than render an equivalent in bodily vigor and health. As a rule, the luxuries that we consume cost more than the strictly necessaries of life; that is, our table luxuries—fruits, butter, coffee, pastries, deserts, etc., are more expensive than our bread, potatoes and meat. Here, then, we see an excellent field for retrenchment. These luxuries, or a great many of them, can be wholly dispensed with, and the result will be not only a marvelous diminution of the family expenses, but will actually prove highly beneficial to health—will decrease the doctor's bills, and will prove a capital antidote for dyspepsia. In the matter of clothing there is also an excellent field for retrenchment. Our extravagance in this respect, perhaps, surpasses that with regard to food, and is a habit, or rather an evil, whose rapid growth positively requires retrenchment. Only a few years ago, within the memory of the present generation, our commonsense fathers and mothers wore fabrics of their own manufacture; now, on the contrary, a man who presumes to wear aught else than foreign broadcloth or cassimeres, or a woman who does not appear as a traveling advertisement for a French millinery shop, is hardly regarded as within the bounds of respectability. Such extravagance is not only absurd, but it is positively wrong. But this superfluous expense in dress is not confined to the wealthier classes. In proportion to their means, the poorer population exhibit the same weakness. All alike seem to be straining to reach the summit of absurdity in fashion, and while only the opulent attain it, the less fortunate reach as near to it as the circumstances will allow. Retrenchment in this respect is needed, not only that the family expenses may be reduced, but that as a community, we may check the growing tendency of our people in the way of excessive extravagance in dress. A man is quite as comfortable in a suit that costs fifty dollars as he would be in one costing a hundred dollars. The same principle will hold good in every item of male and female attire; and one half the money that is now expended upon dress might just as well be used for other and better purposes. In short, retrenchment does not require privation of anything needful. It merely implies a curtailment of that which is unnecessary and useless in matters of food and clothing.

We make no apology for presenting to our readers the above suggestive hints from a New York city paper, for we do not believe that anything that we could say would be as likely to render them so essential a service.

It is never acceptable to talk to the public of economy, when fashion so impetuously demands extravagance; nor do we do so with any hope of securing this, as opposed to fashion, but rather with the hope of changing or overruling fashion in this respect.

And in order to do this, it must not be left to those who, from circumstances, are absolutely compelled to do so, to initiate the movement, but it should be from principle, and out of a sincere regard to the public good, be fairly commenced and sustained by those whose circumstances are well known to be above any personal necessity for doing so. To follow such a lead will then be left to be no degradation to any one.

Such a movement would be alike a patriotic and philanthropic one, and would more truly relieve and benefit the community at large, than thousands of dollars more ostentatiously bestowed.

—The New York Times of the 28th publishes a list of 3,000 names of soldiers who have died in the rebel prison at Andersonville. In very many instances this will be the first tidings received to clear up the doubt which has for months hung around the fate of these brave men.

The News.

Monday, Nov. 5.

The News from Sherman this morning is very gratifying. He is reported to be near Savannah, and the rebels trembling in their shoes." This news is believed to be correct, as rebel papers admit he captured Millen on the 29th ult. The latter place is 79 miles from Savannah, and allowing him 15 miles march per day, which he has accomplished since he left Atlanta, it would bring him near that city. Millen is a station of considerable importance, more so latterly than ever before, from the fact that it has been made the depot of Union prisoners. The rebel papers express apprehension that Sherman has freed them.

The situation remains about the same in the vicinity of Nashville. Skirmishing all about the city is continually occurring, [illegible] have been gained to either party. The rebels are strongly intrenching some three miles from the city.

Admiral Dahlgreen and Gen. Foster, in the vicinity of Port Royal, S. C., are reported to be in communication with Gen. Sherman. They have been organizing a joint force to co-operate with Sherman, while other expeditions are moving on other strategic points.

The President's Message will be kept open till the latest moment in order to give the latest facts in relation to the progress of the war.

Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Gen. Webb, our Minister to Brazil, has anticipated, it would seem, the course of our Government in regard to the capture of the Florida at Bahia. He wrote a letter to the Brazilian Minister of Affairs, on the 14th ult. He closes his communication as follows: "The Government of the United States will not withhold from Brazil one iota of that reparation which, under the same circumstances and her present embarrassed position, she would be obliged to concede to England. Neither the undersigned nor the United States Government are directly or indirectly responsible for this occurrence. It was not ordered or authorized either by the Government of the United States or by the undersigned."

The news from Sherman received yesterday leaves no room to doubt that he has successfully reached his destination on the sea coast. Rebel papers of a late date, however, claim that he is some distance beyond Millen, recruiting, as they claim, his jaded forces. Our troops are probably nearer some of their vital points than they would like to own.

[illegible] dent's Message sometime during the day, as he informed the committees appointed to wait upon him yesterday, by both Houses of Congress, that he would transmit it to Congress at 10 o'clock this morning. It will be telegraphed, and as soon as put into type, published.

Wednesday, Nov. 8.

Papers recently received from Brazil contain copies of an order issued by the Government that all ports of the country will be shut against the Wachusetts for violation of the neutrality law of Bahia.

Burley, the Lake Erie pirate, was before the recorder's Court of Toronto again yesterday. Evidence was offered showing him to be in the Confederate service, which defense, it is said, will be strongly urged by his counsel. The case was adjourned until to-day.

Chief Justice Chase will take his seat upon the Bench of the Supreme Court to-day. The Court was in session yesterday, but a quotum not being present, adjouned, and the members made the annual formal call upon the President.

Secretary Fessenden's report presented to Congress day before yesterday, seems somewhat to have disappointed public expectation, as we are told by a New York paper, for it is regarded as favoring a further issue of currency, with a consequent stimulus to speculation in stocks, in the precious mettials, and in the necessaries of life. This conviction produced a spasmodic activity at the Stock Exchange yesterday morning, with a rise in the price of gold, of produce, and of nearly all descriptions of fancy stocks.

Senator Grimes, of Iowa, has been put at the head of the Senate Naval Committee, and Senator Sherman at the head of the Finance Committee, in the United States Senate.

—A jubilee was held in Cooper Institute, New York, on Monday evening, by 2,000 colored people to celebrate the emancipation in Maryland, and the re-election of Mr. Lincoln. Addresses were made by several well-known negroes, and one female mulatto.

—The Springfield (Mass.) Republican says there is a baby in that city who has six grandmothers, whose united ages are 437 years. The great great grandmother is 99, three great grandmothers 84, 77, 73, and the two grandmothers are 55 and 49. That baby ought to get a good bringing up.

—Gen. Grant was cornered in Philadelphia and made a speech. His remarks, of which we are able to give a verbatim report, were not addressed to the crowd around him, however, but to one of his staff officers. He said: "John, give me a cigar."

From Southern Papers.

The Augusta Constitutionalist, of the 26th ult., speaking of the preparations to oppose Sherman, says the whereabouts of this village burner and common pilloger will be sought. Troops are still coming in, and the Georgia militia will, with veteran troops already here, present a tangible body to oppose the further progress of the Yankee leader. We snap our fingers in the face of the great raider. He will make no powder in Augusta.

The Savannah News publishes Gen. Hardee's first order on assuming command at Savannah. He orders the Provost Marshal to stop all soldiers and citizens arriving in or going from the city, and report them for duty.

Richmond papers of a recent date report a portion of Sheridan's army moving to join Grant.

The Governor of Virginia, in his message, says no convention of States can be called to settle the question of peace. The States can not call a convention for that purpose. Neither can the President or Congress. The powers to make treaties, that of peace included, is delegated by the State, through the Constitution, to the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate. So long as the Legislature of each State are bound by it, they cannot, by separate or conjoint action, make treaties, or assemble in convention and make treatises."

In regard to arming negroes, Governor Watts, of Alabamma, says the idea of using negroes in the army except for teamsters, cooks, etc., is utterly indefensible in principle and policy. To permit the Confederate government to acquire property in their aid to emancipate such of them as shall perform faithful service, would be an act as unconstitutional as it would be destructive to the interests of the State. So far as Alabama is concerned, she will help no such purpose. Our State Constitution declares no slaves shall be emancipated by any act done to take effect in this State or any other country.

In the rebel Congress on the 25th a discussion took place on the bill proposing to authorize holding of courts martial for trial and punishment of direlect officers. The discussion was quite short. The prevalence of drunkenness in the army was referred to again. It is asserted that apple brandy caused the reverses in the Shenandoah. Mr. Orr said justice has not fallen on a single officer for derelection of duty since the war began, while the private soldier has been held to a strict account. Not a single officer has been [illegible] formance of duty.

A Raleigh paper has an article on the peace question, and says Georgia and North Carolina demand immediate efforts for peace by negotiation. It asserts the rebel authorities are anxious to prevent negotiations, and fears a complete usurpation of power. It closes thus: Unless the wisdom of Congress and of the State Legislatures shall devise some plan by which the war may be stopped and peace restored, it does not require a spirit of prophecy to see that we are a ruined people.

Sherman.

The Richmond Examiner of the 30th ult. says: "There is no very important news beyond the confirmation of the report that the enemy had sent off in the direction of the sea coast a small body of cavalry. The day before yesterday they struck the railroad between Augusta and Savannah at Waynesboro, thirty-six miles from Augusta, and it was said by some that they plundered a passenger train yesterday. We are informed the expedition had been interrupted, part of the raiders captured and the rest of them driven back on Sherman's main body. The object of this movement is easily seen. This party were on their way to Beaufort to carry the intelligence of Sherman's position to his Government and communicate his way and plans"

The Sentinel says: "The people of the region through which Sherman proposes to pass will fling themselves upon him with a courage that shall do them honor. There is a capital difference between his situation and that of Hood. He is in an enemy's country, while Hood is among friends. No sacrifice of property, no activity of operations must be counted now or considered. Tear down bridges, block the roads, remove or destroy supplies, cut off forages, fight at every pass. If Sherman should be able to accomplish such a journey as he proposes, foraging as he goes, it will be a proof that he was not becomingly resisted."

BREVITY THE SOUL OF WIT.—The commandant of Libby prison issued a stringent order that Union prisoners must limit their letters to six lines. The following is a specimen:

"MY DEAR WIFE:—Yours received; no hope of exchange—send corn starch—want socks—no money—rheumatism in left shoulder—pickles very good—send sausages—God bless you and the baby—Hail Columbia!

Your devoted husband."

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

At a meeting of the Physicians of the village of Tecumseh, at the House of Dr. M. A. Patterson, on the 6th inst., Dec. 1864, the following Resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That by the death of Dr. Wm. Baldwin we have lost a valuable citizen, a sincere and unassuming Christian, and an able and devoted Physician, who for twenty-seven years, during which he practiced his profession in our village and vicinity, was ever ready to attend to the calls of suffering humanity.

Resolved, That we tender to his afflicted widow and children our heart-felt sympathy under this sad bereavement, and as a token of respect to the memory of our deceased friend, we will wear the customary badge of mourning on the left arm for thirty days.

On motion of Dr. Catlin,

Resolved, That Drs. Patterson and Hamilton be appointed a Committee to present the Resolutions of this meeting to the family of the deceased and to the Herald for publication.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tonic, gentle stimulant and unequalled morning appetizer. Prepared in ripe old Bourbon. Being now under the exclusion of all other Bitters in more than fifty United States Army Hospitals, and millions of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been especially exempted from stamp tax by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

They are made of ingredients well known and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with efficient strengthening properties to correct a bilious derangement of the system, and make a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Dyspepsia, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affects, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirit, Pale Complexion,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

Headache, Costiveness, hundred diseases, arising from a Derangement of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these agreeable Bitters once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who stand in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effect tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give the publicity, so that thousands who have used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give this trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

☞ If your druggist tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—

☞ Remember the title, and take no other,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ The composition of Swain's Bitters, having been made public through the columns of Medical Journals, and having been adopted as a standard remedy by the Medical Profession, are by the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, EXEMPT FROM STAMP DUTY.

DR. ROBACK'S

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more,

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

DR. ROBACK'S

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St. Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

TICHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superseding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a lock or Shuttle Stitch alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to perate with irregularity.

The Feed is prfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a foil machine to operate with uncertainty, an require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They sill sew over gathers and seams without reaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the oly machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the Slack Thread' qual to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cen more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Mchine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Hat Less Makers, &c in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Sample of Work will be sent on receipt of letterstamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum,—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars; and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better for its own assets are either, in Government securities or in notes or bonds payabl] in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation.

But aside from all the advantages you have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order. When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National Banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 31, 1864, amendatory of the fire laws on fire limits.

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs Slayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the fire laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street; provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high also the west wall of said wood ware house to be built of brick, sustained upon iron columns, with the entire structure covered with one roof, flat and of fire proof gravel cement, cornice of brick along brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet, may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

Diary for 1865 at G. T. KETCHAM'S

Not Married Yet.

Not married yet! ah, let me think—
How horrid is the thought;
That eighteen summers have escaped,
And still I am not caught;
And still—and still—'tis like to be,
For maiden soon, after soon.

No matter, I'll live on in hopes,
At least another moon!

No offer yet! ah, what a thought,
For maiden past eighteen,
With a face and form as faultless too
As any ever seen;
Ah, wherefore do they keep me back,
Ah, why this long delay?
No man need ask this maid but once,
To name the wedding day.

Shopping with a Country Cousin.

"Come, Belle," said a cousin of mine, who was making a short visit in town, "I want you to go a shopping with me; I have a light silk dress to buy for myself and Lydy and Sally; and I want you to show me the best stores."

I consented, for I well remembered the kindness and hospitality with which I had been treated by my relatives, during a few weeks at their spacious farm house, and sincerely wished to make some return. It was a warm day in June, and we started from the vicinity of Belcher Street to proceed to Stewart's, where I supposed that my cousin Jane could not fail of being suited. As we entered she whispered to me,

"Now, coz, I am not going to be cheated by any of these Yorkers; I know their tricks, I guess, and they'll find me as sharp as they are."

We proceeded through long rows of stools occupied by ladies, and we reached the furtherest extremity and procured a vacant place, at the counter where the silks are displayed. She asked to see some silks.

What kind and color, was asked

"Oh, I don't know," Jane replied. "You see," she said, turning to me, "mother wants us to dress alike; she sew dressed just alike—but Lyddy wants a crow color, and Sally likes a grass green, so I don't know what to do."

The courteous youth proceed to unfold and hold to our view piece by piece, of every shade and quality. Jane looked on with unwearied patience, but fixed on none. At length she perceived a piece of rich figured satin, which a lady near us was holding to the light. She suddenly seized one end and exclaimed,

"La! that's pretty, now I like that."

The fashionably dressed lady quietly resigned her hold, whilst she surveyed my cousin Jane with a look, which seemed to ask, "What curious specimen of zoology have we here." But Jane perceived her not, and asked the price.

"One dollar and three quarters a yark."

"Gracious me, for that narrow stuff!" she exclaimed, "I guess you'll take less—I'll give 75 cents."

"No, indeed, madam," he replied, "we have but one price for our goods."

But cousin Jane would not be convinced until after an hour's haggling—when throwing down the satin, she declared it too dear for her, and all the cheaper ones looked so ill after she tossed them aside. We left the shop and proceed through several others, where pretty much the same scene was acted over, until she was persuaded by one more eloquent than the others, to decide on a slazy silk, neither the color nor quality she desired. I endeavored to interfere, but was out-talked by the volable shopman, and we finally departed.

It was a warm day and cousin Jane was none of the sylph-like sort, she leaned heavily on my arm, complaining of weariness, and how the hard pavements hurt her feet. Every time we crossed the street I was obliged to rescue her at the risk of my own life, from the carriages and carts. She never looked to the right or left, but if I called to her, or pulled her by the arm, to warn her of any danger, she stopped, frightened and bewildered, stared at the prancing horses, who looked as if they could hardly avoid her. How she escaped, is more than I can tell. It must have been owing to the dexterity of the drivers. Tired and heated, we were half way home, when Jane said to me,

"Now, cousin, I want to buy mother's silk shawl, and the gloves for the girls."

"Why?" I answered, "did you not tell me that when we were looking for the dress? We must go all the way back again to procure them."

"La! I did not know," said Jane, "I thought one place was as good as another."

"But the principal shops," I replied, "are all down town."

"Well, dear me, I'm sorry enough, for I'm tired out—my feet are worn out with these horrid pavements. New York is such a dreadful, tiresome place, I wish I only were well out of it."

There was nothing to be done but retrace our steps, so back we went through all the shops, until the shawl and gloves were purchased. I prevailed on Jane to get into an omnibus, to return home, as we were both excessively weary. But I soon repented this movement, for poor Jane was the victim of the greatest terror. Every time we jolted, she screamed and was sure were breaking down or overturning. In short, she afforded much amusement to all within and many without by her shrieks and causeless terror. At length, when the vehicle was filled with passengers, the driver whipped his horses into a quick trot. Her agony was too grea to bear, she was sure he was racing, and we should soon be dashed to pieces. In vain I endeavored to pacify her—she knew, she said such things were every day occurrences in New York, They were used to having their brains dashed out, or limbs broken, but for her part she was not. Out she would go—so I pulled the check string, and we proceeded once more homewards. Our house was in sight, that haven of rest and refreshment, I quickened my steps, when Jane said,

"Where is Liberty Street, cousin, is it near here?"

"No," I replied, "it is some distance."

"Oh, I'm very sorry," said she, "for I have got a call to make there."

"Impossible," I exclaimed, "it is in the lower part of the city. If you had told me when we were in Maiden Lane, we might have gone there, as it is the next street."

"Well, how was I to know," she observed, "where Liberty Street was—go I must, for mother desired me not to come home without going to see my Street."

"Dear Jane," said I "you cannot, indeed you are too weary to attempt it."

"Oh, I must," she answered, "there is no help for it; this is my last day, and mother wouldn't like it a bit if I did not."

"Dear cousin," said I, clinging to the iron railings, "indeed I cannot accompany you, I am worn out."

"Well, Belle," said Jane, "you know I cannot find the way without you. I'm sure I'm tired enough too, and it's no farther than we went that day we walked along Horse Tail Creek to Lake Winnepasquod,"

I was silenced, for I well remembered the unwearied patience with which my cousins had explored the beautiful country in their vicinity in search of the picturesque, for which they had no taste, merely to please me. I cast one longing look at the house door, then we retraced our weary way in a broiling summer's sun, once more down Broadway. In vain I entreated Jane to allow me to employ a hack; the very name drove her frantic. She knew, she said, too well, these hack drivers, she had heard enough of them. They had as lieve dash a body to pieces as not. One thing I insisted on. I demanded Jane's list in order to plan out our proceedings so as to take as few steps as possible. It was well I did, for I found several commissions still to execute and places to stop at, which would have kept us all day, if I had not taken the precaution of consulting her list.

To those who have perused my narrative thus far, let me warn them, never to go a shopping with a country friend, without first knowing all the places they wish to visit, and plan out their movements accordingly.

A MOTHER.—Alas, how little do we appreciate a mother's tendeeness while living. How heedless are we in youth of all her anxieties and kindnesses! But when she is dead and gone; when the cares and coldness of the world comes withering to our hearts, when we experience how hard it is to find true sympathy; how few will befriend us in misfortune; then it is that we think of the mother we have lost.

☞ Common revenge is a momentary triumph, the satisfaction of which dies at once, and is succeeded by remorse; whereas forgiveness, which is the noblest of all revenges, entails a perpetual pleasure. It was well said by a wise Roman emperor, that he wished to put an end to all his enemies by converting them into friends.

Boy Love.

One of the queerest things to think of in after life, is boy love. No sooner does a boy acquire a tolerable stature than he begins to imagine himself a man, and to ape mannish ways. He casts side glances at all the tall girls he may meet, carries a cane, holds his head erect, and struts a little in his walk. Presently, and very soon, he falls in love—yes, falls is the proper word, because it best indicates his happy, delirious self-abasement. He lives now in a fairy region, somewhat collateral to the world, and yet blended somehow inextricably with it. He perfumes his hair with fragrant oils, scatters essences over his handkerchief, and despairingly shaves and anoints for a beard. He quotes poetry in which 'love' and 'dove' and 'heart' and 'dart' peculiarly predominate; and he plunges deeper in the delicious labyrinth, fancies himself filled with the divine afflatus, and suddenly breaks into a scarlet rash—rhyme. He feeds upon the locks of his beloved; is raised to the seventh heaven if she speaks a pleasant word; is betrayed into the most astonishing ecstacies by a smile; and is plunged into the gloomiest regions of misanthropy by a frown. He belives himself the most devoted lover in the world. There never was such another. There never will be. He is the one great idolater! He dotes upon a flower she has cast away. He cherishes her glove—a little worn in the fingers—next to his heart. Happy! happy! foolish boy love! with its joys, and its hopes, and its fears; its sorrows, its jealousies, and its delights; its raptures and its tortures; its ecstatic fervors and terrible heart-burnings; its solemn ludicrousness, and its intensely prosaic termination.

Courting in Right Style.

"Git out, you nasty puppy—let me alone or I'll tell your ma!" cried out Sally to her lover Jake, who sat about ten feet from her, pulling dirt from the chinks in the side walk.

"I aren't teasin' on you, Sal," said Jake.

"Well, perhaps you don't mean to nuther, do yer?"

"No, I don't."

"'Cause you're ton tarnal scary, you long-legged, lantern-jawed, slab-sided, pigeon-toed, gangled kneed owl you—you hain't got a tarnal bit of sense; get along home with you."

"Now, Sal, I love you, and you can't help it, and if you don't let me stay and court you, my daddy will sue your'n for that cow he sold him t'other day. By jingo, he said he'd do it."

"Well, look here, Jake—if you want to court me, you'd better do it as a white man does that thing—not set off there as if you thought I was pizen."

"How on airth is that, Sal?"

"Why, side right up here, and hug and kiss me, as if you really liked some bone and sinner of man about you. Do you s'pose a woman's only made to look at, you fool you? No, they are made for 'practical results,' as Kossuth says—to hug and kiss and such like."

"Well," said Jake, drawing a long breath, "if I must I must, for I do love Sal—" and so Jake commenced sliding up to her, like a maple poker going to haulk. Laying his arm gently upon Sal's shoulder, we thought we heard Sal say—

"That's the way to do it, old hoss—that's acting like a wh'te man orter."

"Oh, Jerusalem a-n-d pancakes" exclaimed Jake; "if this ain't better than any apple sass ever marm made, darned sight! Crack-e-e! buckwheat cakes, slap-jacks and 'lasses aint no where long side of you, Sal! Oh, how I love you." Here their lips came together, and the report that followed was like pulling a horse's hoof out of the mire. We left them.

To Remove Pain.

Dr. Hall says neuralgia of the severest kind is soon removed by painting the parts two or three times a day with a mixture, composed of half an ounce of tincture of iodine, and half a drachm of the sulphate of morphene. One of the most powerful liniments for the relief of severe pain is made of equal quantities of spirits of hartshorn, sweet oil and chloroform; dip into this a piece of cotton cloth doubled, about the size of a silver dollar, lay it on the spot, hold a handkerchief over it, so as to confine the fumes, and the pain immediately disappears. Do not let it remain on over a minute. It must be well shaken before using; keep the bottle closely stopped.

Comments on the Herald of December 8th.

The Herald of December 8th is before me, and I grasp it with eagerness and devour its contents with avidity,—because it affords an index to the character and feelings of those who surround me.

Giving short glances at the first two columns, I pass to "Old School Books," whose author has touched a chord in memory's fountain vibrative to her own. Yes, Morton, thou canst be both joyous and sadly imaginative,—leading us jaunts over the flowery hills of poesy, far, far back to the place where the thoughtful Wadsworth mustered, and the jolly Chaucer drew his quaint old pictures, until, in imagination, we can almost catch the scent of the Hawthorn blossoms where the immortal Burns clasped his Highland Mary to his bosom—or where we wandered, hand in hand, beside the music-loving streamlet with brown-eyed Ben, or gentle Allie, who has long since folded her wings upon the shores of the summer land. Reminding me, too, of the old schoolhouse, covered with hieroglyphics fresh from the artist's hand, and connected vividly with the song—

"Oh, don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt,
Sweet Alice whose hair was so brown;
Who wept with delight when you gave her a smile,
Or trembled with fear at your frown?

In the old church-yard in the valley, Ben Bolt,
In a corner obscure and alone,
They have finished a slab of granite so gray,
And sweet Alice lies under the stone."

To-day I am almost transported back to childhood,—gathering the wild roses in a soiled pinafore; reaching forth my hand in wild glee to catch the dancing butterfly as it hovers upon the bank of the lake, or listening anon to the mariner's song of a "Life on the Ocean Wave," or awed into admiration at the war of elements as—piled high in air, the waves dash far inland.

I, too, have sometimes sighed to think those days should be so fleeting; and have also lived a portion of the "surface life," and found it unsatisfying and inadequate to meet the necessities and aspirations of the human soul, and have often turned me back to read an old crumpled letter from the pen of some dear, silent slumberer, whose experience would fain lead him to counsel me how to shun the rocks and shoals that are often so prominent among the scenes in the great "Drama of life." I remember, too, the story commencing with the words, "Mary had a little lamb;" and no lines falling from the pen of the most distinguished author can claim a right superior to those in memory's chalice. And conjugating the verb love, from Brown or Kirkham, or going hand in hand with bright-eyed Charley, was one and the same to me, and has, with its moods and tenses, followed me up the rugged paths of life. I have paused on the "will and shall," and leave the "might, would and should have been" to the future.

The old school house has disappeared; the teacher is at rest under the willow; Gentle Alice smiles down from above the clouds, and the Lucys and the Chaleys are scattered far and wide. Some have crossed the great father of waters and have climbed high upon the rounds of the "ladder of fame," and some, alas! have lost their truth. One or two of the old school books are before me, and the drawings which adorn them are only fit for display in Barnum's Museum. God bless you, M., for the picture you have drawn.

In the fifth column there is an article entitled the Hat and Feather Mania. The author certainly has a very just sense of propriety, and asks—"Is there any side for bonnets?" I cannot find it in my heart to purchase until some fair Parisian belle condescends to change the style so as to make it decend a little earthward. In the same column a comparison is drawn between the civilized and the uncivilized woman, and the contrast is certainly striking. The former is artificial in the highest degree, and withal very assuming; while the latter is natural, graceful as the fawn, beautiful as the wild rose, and full of health and vigor. The writer of that article must have possessed a large bump of comparison combined with good sense. I trust that she will not be the one to introduce these arts of civilization among the innocent natives of the Sandwich Islands.

In the sixth column some seal lover of children has drawn a picture for parents many a dear little one has also, during the past year, laid such thoughts with their evening petitions to the Good Shepherd—asking that while they repeated the lines,

"Now I lay me down to sleep," they were sighing over the stern rebukes they had received during the day. God bless these dear household treasures—and may they never forsake their innocent sports for the vicious games of more mature years.

At the top of the 7th column there is really "Beautiful Sentiment." The aching head is pillowed in death's embrace; the feverish heart throb is forever stilled; "the weary is at rest," and victory over enemity attained—the cold still sleeper will never rebuke for past injuries, unless it should be by the sad calm which has stole gently o'er the marble features. Rest and peace to all who enter the life boat for the farther shore. The "bow of promise" is hung over all.

In the first column on the second page is "True Economy." Oh, how I have taxed my poor weak brain over this same subject. I have thought, too, of the extravagances and absurdities to which we as a nation were fast running into. And I candidly believe were it not for the influx of vitality from other nations, we should soon dwindle into insignificance or nothingness. Every honest lover of his country should read that article; it is really we thy of contemplation.

MAS. K. REMINGTON.

A Fable.

A poor little mouse, being half-starved, ventured one day to steal from behind the wainscot while the family were at dinner, and, trembling all the while, picked up a few crumbs which were scattered on the ground. She was observed, however. Everybody was immediately alarmed; some called for the cat; others took up whatever was at hand, and endeavored to crush her to pieces, and the poor terrified animal was driven round the room in an agony of terror. At length, however, she was fortunate enough to gain her hole, where she sat panting with fatigue. When the family were again seated a lap-dog and a monkey came into the room. The former jumped into the lap of his mistress, fawned upon the lap of every one of the children, and made his court so effectually, that he was rewarded with some of the best morsels of the entertainment. The monkey, on the other hand, forced himself into notice by his grimaces. He played a thousand little mischievous tricks, and was regaled, at the appearance of the dessert, with plenty of nuts and apples. The unfortunate little mouse, who saw from her hiding-place everything that passed, sighed in anguish of heart, and said to herself: "Alas! how ignorant was I to imagine that poverty and distress were sufficient recommendations to the charity of the opulent. I now find that whoever is not master of fawning and buffoonery, is but ill qualified for a dependent, and will not be suffered even to pick up the crumbs that fall from the table."

Paid for Fighting.

When the rebellion first broke out, a man of dissolute character enlisted as a nine months' volunteer. He was mustered in, and received his one month's pay in advance. Probably never having had so much money in his possession at one time, he became elated, and in order to manifest his delight, he invested a good portion of his funds in bad whiskey. The result was a scree of the severest kind; a free fight of the most extensive and promiscuous nature, and a pair of bunged eyes of the deepest blue. In this plight, he presented himself before his wife to take leave of her, as his regiment had received orders to march in two hours from thence.

"Why, Peter!" exclaimed she, surveying him with extreme surprise, "How came you in such a plight? Have you been fighting?"

"Of course I have, old woman," replied he, straightening himself up with military dignity. "Aint I listed for fighting? Aint I paid for fighting? and blast me, if I am going to back out of the bargain."

☞ The Western market, the papers say, is well supplied with coal for the winter, at prices much below those of last year. In Cincinnati, it sells for $6, 50 and $7 per 25 bushels. The larger portion of the western coasters have laid in their winter's supply.

☞ Honesty is the best policy.

Merry Christmas

Thousands of youthful eyes, already beaming with expectant joy, remind us that "Christmas is coming!" and there is every indication that Santa Claus on this occasion will hold high carnival. A proper shrewd and knowing, as well as a sprightly old chap, is he! He makes no more bones of peering into strong vaults and sifting bank accounts than he does of whisking adown a chimney, and as the old fellow is wisely liberal according to circumstances, there is every indication that during his forthcoming visit he will make things fly, and get up a perfect furor among the young folks. And as we all are but children of a larger growth, especially on Christmas, the interest of the occasion will not be confined to the juveniles. The custom of making presents on Christmas is one of the good old usages that ought never to die out, consecrated, as it is, to the warmest and noblest impulses of the human heart. Long after the giver is turned to dust, may friendships memento be prized and cherished as a 'joy forever.'

The News.

Rebel accounts of Gen. Foster's attempt to gain a foothold on the Charleston and Savannah Railroad do not agree with those we receive from there. It now turns out that instead of Gen. Foster being driven back, the rebels suffered a severe defeat for their rashness in charging on our lines, from which they received a withering fire; soon after they retreated.

It is said most thorough preparations have been made to have all the vessels in Admiral's Porter's great fleet as invulnerable as possible. The vessels selected to shell Fort Fisher at long range can throw 100 nine inch shells at each broad side. The decks have been covered with sand bags so that plunging shells will not sink them. Chain cables have been lashed on the sides to protect the boilers and machinery. The expedition will probably be heard from within a day or two.

The Presidents proclamation for 300,000 more men is published this week.—If the quotas of the several sub districts shall not have been filled previous to the 15th day of February, 1895, a draft is to take place.

Hon. William L. Dayton, our Minister to France, whose death is announced, was born in Somerset county, New Jersey, February 17th, 1807. He graduated at Princeton College in 1825, studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1830 In 1837 he was elected to the State Senate of New Jersey, and the following year was appointed one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the State. He resigned this office in 1841 and resumed the practice of law; but in 1942 was again called into public life by being appointed by the Governor to fill the vacancy in the United States Senate caused by the death of Hon. S. L. Southard. In March, 1845, he was elected by the Legislature to a full term of six years in the Senate. Politically he was a Free Soil Whig, and was an intimate and influential adviser of President Taylor. He voted for the admission of California as a free State and voted against the fugitive slave bill. Failing to be re-elected to another term in the Senate he again engaged in his profession, until in 1856 he received the nomination for the Vice Presidency of the United States on the Fremont ticket. Being defeated he became Attorney General of the State of New Jersey until appointed Minister to France in 1861 by President Lincoln.

Gen Dix has ordered the raising of a new cavalry regiment in New England, designed for frontier service. One battalion of 400 men is to be recruited in Massachusetts.

NEW YORK, Dec 20.—The Richmond Whig, in a long article on Sherman's march admits that he reached the coast without material loss, and thinks that the rebels might have made it worse for him. It says that the fall of Fort McAllister does not secure the fall of Savannah, and even if that city is captured it is of no account, and would amount to as much in the conquest of the South as the capture of Chicago to the conquest of the North.

The Richmond Examiner makes a review of Sherman's and Hood's campaigns, and claims the results are greatly for the advantage of the Confederacy. It says even if Savannah falls it will be nothing compared to the advantages of Hood's position in Central Tennessee. It thinks the destruction of the Virginia salt works by Burbridge, more injurious to the rebellion than the fall of Savannah.

Western Rural.

It should not be forgotten that we now have a first class Agricultural and Family journal, the Western Rural, published in our own State, which, for many reasons, should receive the subscriptions of our people instead of any Eastern journal of the class. Though only started on the 1st of September last, it has met the most flattering success, and we are pleased to say improves with every issue. Some novel features, to be introduced on the 1st of January, will render it a desirable visitor to every Michigan household.—One of these is a series of War Portraits and sketches which is to include not only portraits of the distinguished leaders of the armies, but more particularly, those of our own "brave Michigan boys" who have honored themselves by deeds of gallantry. The publisher, we understand, is making arrangements to give portraits of some of the honored dead, as well as the gallant living, in whom our own readers are especially interested. The series will be invaluable for preservation.

A novel feature in Market Reports is also to be introduced, which will be particularly valuable to farmers, as it will give the prices paid for the leading articles of produce at the principal market points in the State. Subscriptions at the lowest club rates, $2,00, are being received by B. J. Bidwell of this place, and at nearly every Post office in the State. Clubs should be raised in every school district. Specimens, bills, etc., will be sent free. Address H. N. F. LEWIS, Detroit.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—The New York Times special dated Nashville the 19th says Thomas is pursuing the enemy to Duck River. We have nearly all Hood's artillery. All the rivers are high and the bridges in front of Hood are destroyed.—We have 9,000 prisoners, including 3,000 wounded at Franklin and four Major Generals.

Hood had 65 guns, 54 of which we now have. The enemy's killed and wounded is about the same as ours, and will not reach 3,500. Forrest gave Murfreesboro another trial on the 15th and was repulsed by Rousseau and Milroy.

The rebel Gen. Johnston says their loss at the battles of Franklin was 5,000 while our was 1,000. Stoneman has whipped Breckenridge in East Tennessee near the Virginia line, killing, wounding, and capturing a large number, and taking most of his artillery.

Gen. Ed. McCook is after Lyon in Kentucky, and he cannot escape. Murfreesboro, Bridgeport, Stevenson, Chattanooga and Knoxville are all right.

HILTON HEAD, Dec. 14.—When Gen. Sherman arrived in front of Savannah after having marched 300 miles, his troops meanwhile living on the very best provisions, he had with him a drove of 1,200 cattle, though he started from Atlanta with only 200. He also gathered up on the way over 7,000 able-bodied negroes, and so many horses, mules, and wagons as to embarrass him. His army during a considerable portion of the march extended over a sweep of country 60 miles in breadth, as much as 4 miles at times intervening between the right wing of one column and left of the other, but communication was at all times kept between the two. His whole loss of men from the time of leaving Atlanta to his arrival in front of Savannah from wounds, sickness, capture, straggling and all other causes was only 1,000. The average daily march was about twelve miles.—When the city of Savannah was invested by Sherman, it was unprotected for a seige and it was believed it could not hold out more than a few days. Gen. Slocum holds all the approaches on the North side of the city including all the railroad's leading out of the town, and General Howard's army connects with his right and swings around the Ogeechee river at Fort McAllister.

—A man named Thos. McCormick died very suddenly at the Union Hotel in Bay City on Monday morning last.—He had been intoxicated for a few days previous to his death, and arising about 4 o'clock in the morning he discovered a bottle containing a mixture of nitric acid and mercury which belonged to a roommate, and supposing it was whiskey, drank it. He died two hours after drinking the poison.

—The Newburyport, Mass., Herald is responsible for the statement that two cases of spontaneous combustion have occurred in the same town in that vicinity within 30 years, both of them women given to constant indulgence in liquor.—One of them was found still alive, enveloped in flames, which proceeded from her mouth and nostrils; and the other was burned to a mass of greasy ashes, while the walls of the rooms and the furniture were covered with a thick coat of lamp-black, the whole house being pervaded with a stench that was intolerable.

☞ The Western market, the papers say, is well supplied with coal for the winter, at prices much below those of last year. In Cincinnati, it sells for $6,50 and $7 per 25 bushels. The larger portion of the well-to-do citizens have mined their winter's supply.

The Battle at Nashville.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 19.

The Gazette publishes a vivid description of the battle on the 16th. The day opened cloudy with indications of rain. There was a dense fog at an early hour, but this soon cleared away, and at 8 o'clock we were able to determine the enemy's position. During the night of the 15th Hood withdrew both his wings from the river, and contracted his lines everywhere, and was holding a strong position along the Granny White Hills, his center protected by two lines of entrenchments. Our own troops were disposed in the following order: Wilson's cavalry on the extreme right, Schofield's 22d corps, consisting of Couch's and Cox's Divisions, at first held in reserve, but before the main battle opened, had taken position on the left of the cavalry, thus forming the right of our line; A. J. Smith's 16th corps, consisting of the Divisions of McArthur, Garrard and Moore, came next on the left of Schofield. On the left of Smith the magnificent 4th corps, T. J. Wood, concisting of the divisions of Kimball, Elliott and Sam. Beatty, was formed in close order of battle, and partially wassed; Steadman, with Croft's Division and two brigades of colored troops, held the extreme left. Our plan of battle was a continuation of that on the 15th, In pressing the advantage gained on the enemy's left at about half past 8 o'clock, our batteries opened from a hundred pieces simultaneously along the entire line. The rebel artillery replied feebly, Schofield marching down the Granny White Pike, carefully concealing his strength, placed his corps directly upon the enemy's left flank. Steadman at the same worked his way forward. The enemy in the meantime strengthened his advance line. This determined Wood to carry this line without delay. In splendid order Kimball's 1st division moved forward to charge, firing a volley. After the volley, as they rushed toward the rebel works, a withering fire of musketry and canistor made them waver more than once, but still they pressed on till within half pistol shot, when the enemy's fire became so deadly that our men in order to return it more effectually came to a halt. They remained longer perhaps than any troops ever did before in such position. They stood and fired fast and furiously at the enemy, but they could not remain there and live. A few gave way and fled in disorder. The whole line staggered, and had the rebels done nothing more than to keep up their deadly fire, we should have been driven back, but they made a movement to shift their artillery, which our men received as an indication that they were about to abandon their line and retire. Raising a loud shout, the division with fixed bayonets rushed impetuously forward, and swarming over their works, captured such rebels as had not fled. They had time to get away two guns, but the rest fell into our hands. As soon as the preliminary success was achieved, Gen. Thomas, who was seen during the day in the very front line of battle, ordered a charge along the entire line. Schofield moved upon the left flank of the enemy, and before his veterans the rebels gave way like frost works. The assailed flank crumbled to pieces as Schofield advanced, and was rolled back upon that portion of the line which just now was attacked by A. J. Smith's troops, with a weight and energy nothing could withstand. McMillan's Brigade, foremost in the battle, as on the previous day, rushed right up into the very teeth of three powerful rebel batteries, and carried at the point of the bayonet the sallent point of the enemy's works. In a few moments their works everywhere were carried, their forces everywhere routed, their soldiers captured by thousands, and every piece of their artillery in our hands. Such as escaped death or capture fled toward the Franklin Pike, and took refuge behind Gen. S. D. Lee's corps, which held the gap in the hills. Wood and Steadman on the left had now united, and proposed to assault the rebel right, which was still unbroken. Under cover of a tremendous fire from our guns, Col. Post's Brigade moved forward. Straight's Brigade, of Sam Beatty's Division, formed on his right in support. Immediately on Post's left, Thomson's Colored Brigade was next. On the left the enemy reserved their fire until Post's Brigade commenced to climb the hill, when a perfect fire of shot, shell and canister tore through their ranks. In the face of this fire our men steadily advanced. The colored troops vied with the white in the persistent energy with which they forced their way up the hill. Thomson's men, in endeavoring to pass around to the left, met terrible flank fire, which confused their ranks. The troops on the right, torn in pieces by a terrible fire, paused an instant, and at this juncture the brave Col. Post was mortally wounded. In a moment all order was lost, and our men, whose conduct immortalized them, rushed back in a confused and bleeding state to the line from where they started. Wood soon reinforced his broken battalions and issued orders for a renewal of the assault while Post's veterans again assailed the hill directly, and Thompson's Africans moved on the rebel right. Generals Elliott's and Kimball's Divisions were hurled like a thunder bolt against the rebel left. Wood himself accompanied by all his staff followed and directed the charge. The rebel fire blazed forth anew, but our soldiers without hesitation or pause carried the entire works, with all their guns and drove the rebels in dismay from the hill. This was the last stand the rebels made, and their whole army was now fleeing in rout and panic. Had not night intervened, their army would have been destroyed. The appearance of the battle field was horrible in the extreme. Rain was falling rapidly, and the ground thickly covered with dead and dying. Camp equipage, torn and trodden in the mud, was mingled with the shattered artillery wheels and fragments of the exploded caissons.

The correspondent says: I pushed forward to the Southern slope of the hill. It was almost dark. The rain was pouring steadily down, and standing there amidst the dead and dying, I caught the last glimpse of our lines of battle and heard the last triumphant shouts of our soldiers, as even through the darkness they pushed after the flying foe. The results of the battle were 6,000 prisoners, 30 guns and 17,000 small arms.

A Proclamation by the President.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.

Whereas, By the act of July 4th, 1864, entitled an act further to regulate and provide for enrolling and calling out the national forces, and for other purposes, it is provided that the President of the United States may, at his discretion any time hereafter, call for any number of men as volunteers of the respective terms of one, two and three years for the military service, and that in case the quota or any part thereof of any town, township, ward of a city, precinct, or election district of a county, not so subdivided, shall not be filled within the space of 50 days after such call, then the President shall immediately thereafter order a draft for one year to fill such quota, or any part thereof which may be unfilled; and

Whereas, By the credits allowed in accordance with the act of Congress in a call for 500,000 men, made July 18th, 1864, the number of men to be obtained under the call was reduced to 280,000; and,

Whereas, The operations of the enemy in certain States have rendered it impracticable to procure from them the full quotas of troops under the said call; and,

Whereas, From the foregoing causes but 250,000 men have been put into the Army, Navy and Marine Corps under said call of July 18th, 1864, leaving a deficiency on that call of 250,000, now, therefore,

I, Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States of America, in order to supply the aforesaid deficiency and to provide for casualties in the military and naval service of the United States, do issue this my call for 300,000 volunteers to serve for one, two or three years. The quotas of the States, districts and subdistricts under this call will be assigned by the War Department through the bureau of the Provost Marshal General of the United States, and in case the quota, or any part thereof, of any town, township, ward of a city, precinct or election district, or of a county not so subdivided, shall not be filled before the 15th day of February, 1865, then a draft shall be made to fill such quota, or any part thereof, under this call, which may be unfilled on said 15th day of February, 1865.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the city of Washington, this 19th day of December, in the year of our Lord, 1864, and of the Independence of the United States the eighty-ninth.

The soldiers from the sea coast towns have fish sent on to them at their own expense, and report that all their fellow soldiers would be rejoiced to have mackeral placed on their rations. —A wealthy widower in Wayne county, Ohio, aged, 81 years, courted a widow of 41, and agreed to make her blest in Wedlock, and then wickedly married another woman. Second childhood was sued for breach of promise, and a jury gave buxom widow a judgment for $2,000. A good exchange of the person for the purse.

—The newly invented paddle wheel for steamboats has been tried with great success in New York. It was placed upon a boat whose speed was known to hour but with the improved paddle wheel the boat made sixteen miles an hour, with less coal than was required to run at the old speed.

—Maximilian's first edict to his subjects since his recent tour has been published. It foretells the policy he intends to pursue in order to harmonize the old republican sentiment of the country with the new imperial order of things. He seems to be perfectly satisfied with the state of the country, and with the prospect that his reign will prove auspicious to the people.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

WOOLSTON COMFORT.

The Sabbath School children of the Methodist, Episcopal, Baptist, Universalist, and Presbyterian societies are to be treated to entertainments at their respective churches in the shape of Christmas Trees. For some days past the ladies have been busily engaged in making preparations, and we feel sure that most of our people will be willing to spend a penny to give the children a merry time—and if the little ones are not made merry, it will not be because no efforts have been made to please them.

☞ A child tickled to death. Despairing of a mother. Great excitement! The facts as ascertained by the evidence on the trial, were these: A lady, the mother of several children called at J. D. Robbins and purchased some of his Christmas Toys, took them home and gave them to her children, it set them to laughing, and one little boy that would have been a soldier, was tickled to death. Robbins has got piles of nice things for the holidays.

☞ The people of Tecumseh were thrown into the wildest consternation the other day, from a report that a large body of rebel raiders from Canada were marching up Main Street and would shortly sack and burn the town. Measures for defence were at once adopted, and a messenger deployed with a flag of truce to know whereof and wherefore our usually quiet and peaceful village should be subjected to such innovations. When great was their relief and joy to be informed that the said great crowd were none but truly honest and loyal citizens, and so far from having any hostile intentions were only on their way to A. J. Hoag's picture gallery, over the Post Office. The public need not be under any alarm, if, during the coming holidays, the crowd should be unusually large, as great inducements will attract the people from all directions in unprecedented numbers.

BROTHER.—Buy some of Moore's Statuary or marble-dust Figures for a present for Sis.

SISTER.—Purchase at Moore's a scarf, neck-tie, Gloves, or something for Tab.

LOVER.—Look at Moor's twenty dollar Belmoral Skirts, and if you wish to do the 'clean thing' for your 'beloved Julia Ann,' you can be pleased by getting them to buy one for her. She will wrap you up in her—heart of hearts,—if you will only invest that Greenback.

And as we touch the subject of Babies our heart is so full, that we can only pen the fact that Moore has a vast variety of Carriages which will please Baby more than anything else you can buy for the money.

☞ Don't forget to call at Moore's to get your Furs, Hosiery, Gloves, Ribbons, Flowers, Feathers, Hoop Skirts, Corsets, Corset Braces, &c.

☞ We shall not issue a regular paper next week in order that our printers may have a Holiday.

To our subscribers, a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.—Who will bring the printer a turkey.

☞ The Hillsdale Standard and Hudson Gazette have raised their price to $2,50—the Detroit Commercial Advertiser to $3,00.

☞ Read the article on our First page, entitled "Comments on the Herald of Nov. 8th," from the pen of Mrs. O. Remington.

☞ Go to Ward & Strickland's to get your Furs at 5 per cent. above cost. You will also find new trimmings and new goods of all kinds arriving.

☞ Those of our subscribers, who are intending to pay their subscriptions in wood, potatoes, butter, eggs, lard, &c. should bring it along now.

☞ Santa Claus has come, and you will find him at the Drug Store of Dr. P. N. Curtis, where he will be sure to suit you. Gen. Chas. E. Case, Master of Ceremonies.

☞ The Furnace men of Tecumseh, Coldwater, Bronson, Union City, Jonesville, Hillsdale, Hudson, and Adrian, met at Hillsdale, on the 8th, and adopted a new schedule of prices.

☞ Since A. Hoog has marked his goods down instead of up, he has had some tremendous raids on his establishment, and he still continues to give good bargains, as he may be seen any day at a call until the whole entire stock is cleaned out. Call early and secure good bargains.

☞ If you want a Nice Book for a Christmas or a New Year's Present, P. N. Curtis has a splendid assortment. If you want to make a present of some Nice Perfumery, you can get a supply of P. N. Curtis.

Married.

In Tecumseh, December 15th, 1864, by Rev. E. N. Nichols, Mr. Albert A. Kennedy and Miss Mary E Waller, both of Raisin.

In Corry, Pa., on the 15th, by Rev. G. W. Staples, Mr. A. B. Ward, of this village, and Mrs. Jennie VanNamee, of the former place.

The Sabbath School children of the Methodist, Episcopal, Baptist, Universalist, and Presbyterian societies are to be treated to entertainments at their respective churches in the shape of Christmas Trees. For some days past the ladies have been busily engaged in making preparations, and we feel sure that most of our people will be willing to spend a penny to give the children a merry time—and if the little ones are not made merry, it will not be because no efforts have been made to please them.

☞ A child tickled to death. Despairing of a mother. Great excitement! The facts as ascertained by the evidence on the trial, were these: A lady, the mother of several children called at J. D. Robbins and purchased some of his Christmas Toys, took them home and gave them to her children, it set them to laughing, and one little boy that would have been a soldier, was tickled to death. Robbins has got piles of nice things for the holidays.

☞ The people of Tecumseh were thrown into the wildest consternation the other day, from a report that a large body of rebel raiders from Canada were marching up Main Street and would shortly sack and burn the town. Measures for defence were at once adopted, and a messenger deployed with a flag of truce to know whereof and wherefore our usually quiet and peaceful village should be subjected to such innovations. When great was their relief and joy to be informed that the said great crowd were none but truly honest and loyal citizens, and so far from having any hostile intentions were only on their way to A. J. Hoag's picture gallery, over the Post Office. The public need not be under any alarm, if, during the coming holidays, the crowd should be unusually large, as great inducements will attract the people from all directions in unprecedented numbers.

THE SCANDINAVIAN Remedies

"Be not as thy fathers, stubborn and rebellious; for the stock wrestles heaven it over."

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

Discovering they possessed remarkable and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of these eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT.
TIGHT STITCH
SEWING MACHINES
WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT
Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.
They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:
They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.
They make a lock or Shuttle Stitch alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.
They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.
The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.
The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and does not cut the fabric.
They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.
They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.
They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.
They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.
They are the only machine using Weed's Patent Thread Controller. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.
Every Machine is Warranted
Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.
Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.
We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.
All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths per cent. per annum,—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed you no securities offer so great inducements to leaders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 31, 1864, amendatory of the bye laws on fire limits.

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs Slayton & Tindall and seven other resident owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the bye laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street; provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high also the west wall of said wood ware house to be built of brick, sustained upon iron columns, with the entire structure covered with one roof, tin and of fire proof gravel cement, cornice of brick along brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

The Happy New Year.

BY H. A. BLOOD.

They wish me a "Happy New Year;"
But I am old and gray,
And I cannot really say
I have had a happy day
Since I came to twenty year.

They wish me a "Happy New Year;"
But if they could tear apart
The covering of my heart,
They would find the wide wound of a dart
That has rankled there many a year.

They wish me a "Happy New Year;"
But, alas! they little know
That every step I go
Is into the valley of woe,
And has been for many a year.

They wish me a "Happy New Year;"
But I am grown so old
And the world has grown so cold,
That only beneath the mould
Shall I find my "Happy New Year."

NEW YEAR'S AT SEA.

The good old fashion of having a lusty new year's dinner, a new year's cake as big as the washtub, and a merry dance at night, was never more cheerfully or heartily observed to the letter than at the Yankee homestead of Farmer Walton. Early in the morning every soul in the great square house was turned out of the bed with the noise of a conch-shell, which the jolly farmer used to blow tremendously at the door of every member of his large family; and very especial loudness at the doors of each visitor and remote relation who had come down from Boston to have a merry meeting around the hospitable board on new-year's.

The farmer had four boys grown, and three buxom, rosy, mischievous, wicked-eyed lasses, that burned half the hearts of the beaux around for seven miles to cinder, so that they were unquestionably more dangerous incendiaries than the rich burners in Old England, and Scotland; only there is not a statute making the burning up of a lad's heart a capital offense.

The new year's of 18— was particularly famous at Farmer Walton's, inasmuch as his daughter was to be married in the evening to a young sea-captain, a handsome sailor, who owned and commanded as pretty a square rigged brig as ever sailed out of Newburyport harbor. At the dinner, when the toast, "sweethearts and wives," was proposed by the old farmer, in bumpers of excellent home made cider, the youngest son, Bill, as fine looking a chap for a boy as his sisters were for girls, with a black eye, raven curly locks, a rosy cheek and merry smile, this Bill suggested that all the pretty girls that were neither sweethearts nor wives should be included. This amendment being approved by the rest of the sons, and applauded by half a dozen pretty cousins from sixteen to eighteen, as well as by the sisters, was unanimously carried and drunk with great applause. After silence had been restored, Bill, who was a forward lad, and a general favorite with the old folks, and a famous kisser of the girls, proposed as follows:

"Where shall we be this time next year?"

"That is not exactly a ship shape toast, Bill," said the sailor-captain; "but I can answer for you, that if you sail to California under the mark next month, as you propose doing, you will be likely to pass your next new year's at sea."

"If I do, I will have a new year's dinner and one old horn pipe, just for home's sake."

"Where'll you get the turkey?" exclaimed the old lady.

"And the mince pies?" cried the elder sister.

"And the apple dumplings?" continued the younger one.

"And the cider?" demanded the old farmer.

"And the girls to dance with?" cried the cousins.

"And the black fiddler?" asked the oldest brother.

At this six-gun battery Bill stood amazed; but when the firing was over he confidently answered, "wait till next new year's comes and see if I don't have a new-year's dinner at sea, as good as you'll get ashore. And as for hornpipes, there's plenty o' sailors; and there's no dancers of hornpipes that'll equal them. As for fiddler, I can fiddle myself as well as old black Josiah, the barber."

"But what'll you do for the kissing, Bill" whispered slyly a roguish cousin of sixteen, whom he kissed twenty times in every set,—a variation in the dance, which, being a voluntary introduction of his own, he found exceedingly agreeable.

This question staggered our hero not a little, then he looked so blank that the girls laughed at him; but he said that he would make each of them look in his little looking glass, and he would then remember how they looked ever after.

This set the girls to laughing and clapping their hands in token of their approbation, and Bill felt relieved to see the cloud passed from their fair faces. Upon this there was a great shouting and laughing, and the old house rang with merriment as merry as a marriage bell. Bill was the life of the party, and he was voted by all the girls the prettiest and most agreeable young fellow they had seen for a long time. Bill was not long in discovering that he was a great favorite, and he was not long in making up his mind that he would be even with the old farmer for his long neglect of him, and show the girls that he was not the boy they had taken him for, by being married himself before the old farmer was married at all. This he felt would be the best revenge he could take upon the old man, and he was not long in deciding that he would be married himself on the morrow morning if he could find a girl willing to have him. This he was determined to find out at once, for he was a lad of spirit, and was not accustomed to be balked in his fancies when he was set upon a thing. He was a favorite with his sisters, and they were his confidants, and they had long before this been in the secret of his love for the pretty Lucy Walton, the only daughter of a neighboring farmer, whose farm lay upon the banks of the river opposite the village where the Walton family lived. This Lucy was a favorite with the family of her lover, and was a favorite with the whole village, and was the belle of the village and the country round for many miles around. She was a fair, delicate, gentle creature, with a form and face that might well be the models for painters and sculptors to work from in their attempts to embody their ideas of the beautiful. She was a fair, delicate blonde Rail Road Casualties.

In the Annual Report of the New York Central Railroad Company for the year 1864, just published, there are some facts which we look upon as of great importance to the travelling public. We call attention to them, for the benefit of such of our citizens as have frequent occasion to travel by Rail; partly, to allay the fears of the timid, who are in the habit of greatly magnifying the dangers necessarily incident to Railroad travelling; and partly, as a wholesome caution to that heedless class of travellers, to whom the regulations of Railroad companies are only a dead letter.

In this Report, are given the circumstances connected with all casualties involving injury to persons, with names, dates, and places. During the year, more than three and a half millions of persons have been carried over the road. During the same period, seventy persons have been killed, only four of whom, however, were passengers. Of these four, two fell from the cars, and a third met his death by attempting to jump aboard while the train was in motion. The fourth was killed by the explosion of a locomotive. Now, every body knows it to be a standing rule, on all our lines of railroad, that passengers shall remain in their seats while the train is in motion; that they shall not stand on the platforms of the cars, nor jump on or off while they are in motion. This Report shows that, out of more than three and a half millions of passengers, there was only one killed who observed these rules of the company.

In addition to the seventy persons killed during the year, there were fifty-three who were injured more or less severely.

But only twenty-eight of these were passengers, and a considerable portion of this latter number, were guilty of a positive disregard of the regulations of the Company, as the direct cause of their injury. Of the seventy persons killed, forty-eight were either walking, standing, or lying upon the track; six were in the act of jumping on or off the cars while the train was in motion; five fell from the cars; five were at work on the track—one struck a bridge—one struck a telegraph wire—three were killed by the explosion of locomotives.

Of those who were merely injured, the causes were similar to the foregoing.

People may learn from this exhibit, that travelling by Railroad is as safe as by any other mode of conveyance, if passengers will only wait for the train to come to a dead stand before attempting to get on or off, and then remain quietly in their seats, as the rules of the company require. At least, such is the fact so far as the New York Central is concerned. And although that is confessedly one of the best managed roads in the country, we are not aware that it stands any higher in that respect, than the Railroads in our own State.

Died—In the village of Tecumseh, Mich., on the morning of Dec. 5th, 1864, Wm. Balawin, M. D.

The deceased was born Feb. 24, 1799, in Old Windsor, Hartford Co., Conn. He was the eldest son in a family of four children. At the age of thirteen years he lost his father, who was violently thrown from a wagon and killed while on his way to Hartford.

By this unexpected and afflictive providence the son was early thrown upon his resources. Securing such preparation as his circumstances would permit, he attended the Medical College of New Haven, from which he was graduated at the age of 22. Immediately after his graduation he turned his steps to the "Great West." Spending about a year in the Western Reserve, in Ohio, he returned East, and married Miss Delia Alden, in Suffield, Hartford Co., Conn., Oct. 16th, 1822. After his marriage he returned to Strongsville, and remained there, giving his time and energies to his profession, until the summer of 1836. During his residence in the State he was Secretary of the Cuyahoga Co. Medical Convention. From Strongsville he removed to this place (Tecumseh), with his family. He arrived in this village on the 4th of July, 1836. Here he remained until his family had grown up and were well settled in life, until he had completed his own life work, and was called away to rest.

For twenty-eight years Dr. Baldwin engaged actively and successfully in the duties of his profession, in this village and the surrounding country. Add to this the fourteen or fifteen years spent in the practice of medicine in the State of Ohio, and it will be seen that his time of active labor covered forty-two or three years.

As a citizen Dr. Baldwin held a high position in the esteem and confidence of the people. Accurate and punctual in all his business arrangements, he was ever prepared to meet the obligations of a citizen. His heart was deeply interested in the struggle of our country. His last act as a citizen was performed for his country, by casting his ballot on the 8th of November with the people, and for liberty.

As a physician he possessed some rare qualifications. He was laborious, careful and sympathizing. He never neglected a patient. At all hours of the night, in all seasons, and through all weathers, he wrought faithfully in his profession, obedient to the call of suffering, from whomsoever it came. He continued to visit the sick even when his own sufferings were such that it was with difficulty he could sit up.

As a Christian Dr. Baldwin was very distrustful of himself,—indeed this was a [illegible] he sustained. He shrank from putting himself forward as a leader; was never known to address a public audience on any subject, either political, moral, or religious. Yet his opinions on these subjects were decided, and he sought to live out his convictions. He was liberal in the support of the gospel, and rejoiced in the prosperity of Zion. He united with the Presbyterian Church in this place, by letter from the Congregational Church of Strongsville, Ohio, in April, 1841. Since that time his walk before the people has been according to his profession.

But it was in the family that his consistent deportment was seen and felt, even more forcibly than in his public life. As a husband and father, and a Christian in his home, his influence was most happy.

The altar of prayer was the place to which he called his children. He kept the fire burning on that altar, ministering there as the religious teacher in his own family, as long as bodily strength enabled him to kneel.

In the hour of indescribable suffering he rested all upon the Redeemer.

The last week of his life was one of such suffering as few are call to pass through. Until his extreme agony disturbed the balance of his mind he was found looking away to the cross, and in the more lucid moments in the in the interval of suffering his faith gave expression to his hopes beyond.

The hour came at length, and he was taken. Thus passed from our sight, but not from our hearts, one who has endeared himself to many by ministering relief to their sufferings.

Thus has passed away another of those [illegible] their children, may build. As their places become vacant in the house of God, in the social circle, and at the domestic board, we hear the voice of God speaking to us—"Your fathers, where are they?" And the answer comes—

"All along the mighty ages,
All adown the solemn Time,
They have taken up their homeward
March, to that serener clime.
They are going—only going
Out of pain, and into bliss,
Out of sad and sinful weakness,
Into perfect holiness"—While we are "Only waiting till the shadows
Are a little longer grown;
Only waiting till the glimmer
Of the day's last beam is flown;
Till the night of earth is faded
From the heart once full of day.
Then, from out the gathered darkness,
Holy deathless stars shall rise,
By whose light our souls shall gladly
Tread their pathway to the skies."

☞ In his recent speech at Rochdale, Mr. Richard Cobden said that if a map of the United States were laid before the members and professors of Oxford University, and they were asked to designate the position of Chicago, he did not believe that one of them could come within a thousand miles, or more, of it.

☞ A gentleman in Scotland has preserved an old number of the Greenock Advertiser, containing the following announcement: "Notice to Correspondents.—T. C. The lines commencing 'On Linden when the sun was low,' are not up to our standard. Poetry is evidently not T. C.'s forte.

☞ Capt. James R. Sennhtt, commanding the tug Monitor, on Black River, was accidentally shot in Cleveland, Ohio, on Saturday last by a recruiting Sergeant, with whom he quarreled. He kied shortly after being shot,

☞ A Nevada paper says, that a "zephyr" came into Virginia City, took up a 2,200 pound car off the railroad track and carried it over house-tops and everything and dumped it down half a mile off. A Nevada zephyr is a gale elsewhere.

☞ A Boston inventor is about to introduce a new style of time-piece, which, besides improvements, contain a dial embracing the whole 24 hours of the day, arranged and numbered in regular succession.

☞ The number of deaths in Chicago during 1864 was about 4,900.

The News.

NEW YORK, Jan 4. The following is the concluding paragraph of a long editorial in the Richmond Sentinel, Jeff. Davis organ:

If France and England will enter into a treaty with these Confederate states, recognizing our nationality, and guaranteeing our independence, upon the abolition of slavery in all these states, rather than to continue the war we should be prepared to urge the measure on our readers. We believe such a proposition would be favorably received and acted on by those nations, and it ought to be made to them.

The Richmond Sentinel contains a very important editorial, believed to be from the pen of Jeff. Davis. Secretary Seward is reported to have sent it to all the foreign ministers as showing the complete exhaustion of the rebellion, and consequently the rebels are no longer entitled to consideration as belligerents. It says our late reverses have done much towards preparing our people for extreme sacrifices. The question is simply whether we shall give for our own use, or whether the Yankees shall take for theirs It would be more glorious to devote our means to success then lose them as spoils to the enemy. Our situation, stripped of our property, but masters of our government, would be infinitely better than if despoiled by the enemy and wearing their bonds. Subjugation is a horror that embraces all other horrors. Troublesome times are upon us. Great exigencies surround us. We need all our strength and wisdom. Let there be a calm investigation of our wants; then let all obstacles to the employment of all our resources be removed. So long as we have a man or a dollar, let the call for them be honored; it would be adding disgrace to our misery if we were overcome without exhausting every resource of defense.—If the government determines that it needs our lands, houses, negroes, horses, money or ourselves, it must have them. If faith condemns to a master, let it not be to a Yankee. Of all the people on earth, we have most reason to loathe and dread them. Any terms with any other party would be preferable to subjugation by them. If statesmanship cannot save us, let us palliate our misery by saving us from the Yankees Our people would prefer a favorable alliance with European nations.

Quebec advices say there is no trouble in Canada over the enforcement of the draft for militia men to serve on the frontier.

The French refused to serve, and drafting officers were driven out of several counties.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The rebels made a dash on our pickets between Forts Howard and Wadsworth, in front of Petersburg, on Saturday morning about daylight, and captured 35 men, together with their blankets, knapsacks, etc. It was a surprise, and succeeded well.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The Post states the quota of New York City under the 300,000 call of the Government, has been fixed at 4,430 men, and this number is reduced by more than 1,000 recruits obtained since the time at which this assignment was made. The deficiency is not far from 3,000 men.

FORTRESS MONROE, Dec. 31.—The storm still prevails with unabated severity. There are no arrivals from the South or from off Wilmington, North Carolina, to report. Snow has been falling here all day. The mail steamer brings no news from the front. All quiet.

☞ The Richmond Examiner of the 30th speaking of the capture of Savannah, says all the rice on the plantations in the vicinity of the city fell into the hands of the Yankees. The amount is estimated at 50,000 bushels. The Confederate government removed most of its stores.

DIED

In the township of Franklin, on Friday morning, Dec. 16th, Dea. James B. Wells, aged 66 years.

Deacon Wells settled in Franklin in 1835, then an almost unbroken wilderness, and as the result of his great energy, energy and unfiring industry, may be seen one of the largest and best farms in our State, so well arranged and improved and so well stocked with choice blooded animals as to meet the admiration of all visitors and passers-by. Deacon Wells will be long missed by his large family, large circle of relatives and his extended acquaintances, by the poor of his neighborhood and the charitable institutions of our country, but by none more than the church of Clinton, of which he had long been an office bearer and one of its most humble, devoted and active members.—His funeral was attended at the church in Clinton on Sunday, Dec. 18th, by his numerous relatives and friends who do

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improged my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

The most popular Monthly in the world.—New York Observer.

We must refer indeed to eulogy to the high tone and varied excellence of Harper's Magazine—a journal of a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American people; and the popularity it has acquired is merited. Each number contains fully 144 pages of reading mater, appropriately illustrated with good wood cuts; and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature.—Trubner's Guide to American Literature, London.

The volumes bound constitute of themselves a library of miscellaneous reading such as cannot be found in the same compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston Courier.

DR. ROBACK'S

BLOOD PURIFIER

AND

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache, Costiveness, Colic Pains, Cholera Morbus, Indigestion, Pain in the Bowels, Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of three eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Christmas Presentation

On Christmas Eve., the Rev. H. L. Hayward, pastor of the Universalist Society was the recipient of a magnificent Christmas gift in the shape of a wallet containing the snug little sum of $1,50 in greenbacks. It was placed upon the Christmas Tree, which had been erected for the benefit and amusement of the Sabbath School, and was presented to him among the other gifts,—he receiving no intimation whatever of its contents. His surprise can easily be imagined, when afterwards, upon opening the wallet he found it well lined with "legal tender." The amount was raised by subscription, nearly one quarter of which was donated by generous friends outside of the Society. Mrs. Hayward also in addition to many other useful and fanciful articles, received from "Santa Claus" a beautiful $20 muff. On Christmas day Rev. Mr. H, in a few appropriate remarks, took occasion to publicly thank the donors for their very agreeable and substantial surprise of the previous evening, assuring them that their bountiful liberality should never be forgotten, that the donation should be sacredly appropriated toward liquidating the small debt with which his homestead is still incumbered, and trusting that a kind Providence might permit him to have a home in Tecumseh for many years to come among the dear friends whom he had known only to honor and respect, and Christ he had learned to love so well.

Died,

In General Hospital, Arkansas, on the 29th of Sept. 1864, of Chronic Diarrhoea and Inflammation of the Brain, Halsey Ranson Hendershot, aged 22 years. He was converted to God under the labors of Rev. E. R. Hascall, of Tecumseh. Being impressed with the importance of going forth in defence of his country, notwithstanding the dreaded evils of camp life, he enlisted in the 3d Mich. Cavalry, where his noble conduct soon obtained the esteem of his fellow soldiers, whose loss they deeply feel. He had obtained a furlough to return home, but was attacked with the above named disease, which soon ended his pilgrimage on earth.—About an hour before his death he requested the nurse, M. E. White, to write to his relatives, saying in the meantime, "I have got to die, and am willing to go; tell them I hope to meet them in heaven, where there is no war.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tonic, gentle stimulant and delightful morning appetizer. Prepared in the old Bourbon. Being now used in the exclusive all other Bitters in more than fifty United States Army Hospitals, and millions of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been especially exempted from stamp tax by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the whole profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ They are made of ingredients well known, and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with sufficient stimulating and purgative properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirits, Sallow Complexion,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

FOR

Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, so that thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

☞ If your druggist or tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—

☞ Remember the name, and take no other,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ The composition of Dr. Swain's Bitters, having been made public through the columns of Medical Journals, and having been adopted as a standard remedy by the Medical Profession, are by the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, EXEMPT FROM STAMP DUTY.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they pissessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Blotches, Blisters,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Kidneys,	Dropsy,
Fits, for Fulness, Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache, Costiveness,
Colic Pains, Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion, Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceeding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail maching to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton, and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum, principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges, soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, of state companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 3d, 1864, amendatory of the bye laws on fire limits.

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs Slayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the bye laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street; provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high also the west wall of said wood ware house to be built of brick, sustained upon iron columns, with the entire structure covered with one roof, flat and of fire proof gravel cement, cornice of brick along brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

Not Married Yet.

Not married yet! ah, let me think—
How horrid is the thought,
That eighteen summers have elapsed,
And still I am not caught;
And still—and still—'tis like to be,
If things don't alter soon,
No matter, I'll live on in hopes,
At least another moon!

No offer yet! ah, what a thought,
For maiden past eighteen,
With a face and form as faultless too
As any ever seen;
Ah, wherefore do they keep me back,
Ah, whw this long delay?
No man need ask this maid but once,
To name the wedding day.

HAPPINESS,

OR

The Merchant of Balsora.

Among the merchants of Balsora, Abou Ben Ahem was distinguished by his wealth and honesty. No man was more upright in his payments; he was honored and respected; his warehouses were filled with rich goods; and the profits he derived from his occupation were immense. For the most costly silks and embroidery, application was made to Ben Ahem; and the Sultan and the nobles bestowed on him their favors. And the merchant was supposed to be happy. But when, on some sudden flood of prosperity, he was told that he ought to be the happiest of men, he shrugged up his shoulders, and answered with a sigh.

Abou was an upright man; he was punctual in his payments, because his purse was always full, and he had no occasion to bid his creditors call again. Punctual himself, he expected every body with whom he had dealings to be as punctual in their payments to him. He was a devout man; he went to mosque as frequently as the pious inhabitants of Balsora, and was as fervent in his prayers. He never failed to return thanks to Alla, for any good fortune that might befall him. One day some expensive silks which he expected would have proved unprofitable, were purchased for the sultan, and he realized considerable more than he had ever anticipated. He returned thanks to heaven, and immediately after his thanksgiving he gave orders for the imprisonment of two debtors who had failed in their payments. They were imprisoned by his orders and bastinadoed.

Abou was called upon to subscribe to a fund for some charitable purpose. He considered it his duty to give his mite; and he was happier after he had contributed to the charitable fund than he was before. He felt assured that Alla approved of his conduct. A poor Christian, who had been employed by a benevolent merchant, then deceased, came in a state of destitution to Abou's gate, and begged for food. Abou ordered that the Christian dog should be driven away, and instead of bread he should receive the lash.

And Abou wondered that he was not happy. He was wealthy, esteemed, and honored. His stores were filled with goods of great value; his coffers were well supplied; and his only child was the fairest and most admired of all the maidens in Balsora. It was the delight of her life to administer to her father's happiness; but Ben Ahem was not happy. His days were passed in fruitless longing for some indefinite and unimagined pleasure, and his nights were those of troubled—but dreamless sleep. Once he beheld, in a vision the gates of Paradise, through which thousands of living souls were entering in, but when he approached, the gates closed, and the songs of joy he had previously heard were changed in a low and murmured wailing. Ben Ahem awoke; the dream troubled him, and he strove to recollect what offenses he had committed and were unrepented of; what work of righteousness he had left undone. But he could not charge himself with aught.

His daughter Zaide, met him at the first meal with tearful eyes. Abou embraced his child, and besought her to disclose the cause of her grief. She was beloved by an honest but humble youth, who was elevating himself day after day, in fortune and reputation, by his perseverance and integrity, and Zaide had given him love for love. And when Ben Adhem asked his child what caused her tears, she frankly confessed to him that she loved.

"Well, my dear child," replied the merchant, clasping his daughter to his breast, "My day of life is drawing to a close, the sun has gone down, and the coldness and darkness of the night are approaching; it is fit that thou shouldst have some one to protect thee, when I am gone. Who is he thou lovest?"

"Alas! my father, I fear thou wilt visit me with thy displeasure," replied Zaide, "He is of inferior fortune."

"That is to be regretted, Zaide. It would have better pleased me hadst thou fixed thy heart's affections upon one who was equal to thyself. But I will not blight thy young hopes, if the youth be worthy. Who is he thou lovest?"

"The son of the olive-merchant, Abdallah."

Ben Adhem removed his hand from the clear forehead of his child, and releasing the hand of hers which he had grasped, slowly moved away, exclaiming hurriedly,

"No, no, no, my child; it cannot be; I would willingly yield thee to a worthy husband's arms. I would have given thee to one of lesser fortune if thy choice had lighted there, but I cannot give thee to the son of the olive-merchant, Abdallah, for he has done me much wrong."

And Abou Ben Adhem remained deaf to his child's entreaties, and forbade her to marry Abdallah's son. And when he retired to rest, the vision of the past night appeared to him; and when he closed his eyes to sleep, he saw again the gates of Paradise, and they seemed thicker than before, and were now fastened with massy chains, and as he approached towards them they became less and less visible, and then disappeared; and Ben Adhem found that he was in the midst of utter darkness, and a sound was in his ears like the roaring of the distant ocean.

He strove to emerge from this dreary scene, but the farther he proceed, the deeper was the darkness, and he cried aloud in his agony—

"How shall I find my way out of this dreadful place?"

And immediately a soft low voice seemed to whisper in his ear,

"Love thy fellow men!"

And Ben Adhem suddenly awoke.

His child was at his bedside; she had come to summon him to his morning meal. And while he gazed upon the sunny face of Zaide, tears came into his eyes; and holding forth his arms, he said, "Kiss me, Zaide, kiss me. Upon the cheek of innocence let me make my peace with all the human race.

And when he arose, he called for the son of the olive merchant, and placed the hand of Zaide in his. Ben Adhem said,

"Be this the surety that I am at peace with all mankind."

And he gave orders that his debtors should be released from prison, and he sent for the Christian whom his neighbor had left unprovided for, and took him into his house. And when the sun went down, Ben Adhem was a happy man. And when he laid him down to rest, sweet music seemed to lull him to repose, and in his dream he saw again the gates of Paradise, and they were open, and the friends of his youth, the wife of his bosom, were all gathered there, with snowy pinions and bright countenances; and seraphic music greeted his ears, and he then passed onward to the regions of the blest.

And when he awoke from his dreaming, he felt that his mysterious wish was gratified. He was now a happy man; and looked forward with confidence, to the scene that had been pictured to his dream.

How to Lean on a Gentleman's Arm.

A short essay might be written on this subject, as one sees it practised on the evening and moonlight promenades. Without knowing a single person, it is possible to determine the exact degree of relationship they sustain by this simple and involuntary indication. There is the comfortable look matrimonial, allowed only to stout respectable fathers and mothers of grown-up sons and daughters; and the lounge confidential, indulged in by cousins and sometimes, when there is mischief afoot, and they are not fighting, by affectionate brothers and sisters. Then there is the gentle pressure of trust from a young wife, and the daring pressure, shameless, of a married flirt. The light touch of a young girl upon a strange coat sleeve, and the tender fold of a lover and his pretty fiancee.

A hundred other methods might be enumerated, especially if one could follow the promenaders out of the glare of the gaslights and into the shadows of the walks and avenues, but the most disagreeable of all is the formerly fashionable juxtaposition of shoulder to shoulder, the gentleman's arm held in at angle, to support the elbow of a young lady. This close and confidential style is still affected by some very loud talking and showy young ladies but whether gentlemen generally admire it or not in young women is a doubtful question.

A Hunting Story.

Two business gentlemen from New Haven who occasionally indulge in a little sporting experience, visited Southington, on a hunt the other day. Birds were not very plentiful, and with doubtful success the gentlemen started for the depot toward night to take the train home. Coming across an Irishman, they incidentally asked him if there were any rabbits, partridges, quails, foxes, or any other game about there.

"Bedad there are that! I can put my finger on a nist of foxes where there is five young 'uns and an old 'un! They are so tame yez can stroke 'em with your hand."

This was a chance to capture fur that must not be lost, and after some dickering Pat agreed to pilot them to the nest for three dollars. After trudging through the woods about one mile, the party came to a clearing where stood a log house. With a horrible Milesian grin, he pointed to an old woman and five young imps lying loose about the main floor, exclaiming:

"See the the tame crathurs! Mrs. Patrick Fox, these hunters are after yez! Good day gintlemen."

The hunters got back to the depot too late for the train that day, but they arrived home all safe the next morning. It is unnecessary to mention, however, that it is not to them we are indebted for the above fact.

A Duelling Anecdote.

Two spanish officers recently met to fight a duel outside the gates of Bilboa, after the seconds had failed to reconcile the belligerents.

"We wish to fight—to fight to death," they replied to the representations of their companions.

At this moment a poor fellow, looking like the ghost of Romeo's apothecary, approached the seconds, and in a lamentable voice, said,

"Gentlemen, I am a poor artisan, with a large family, and if you would—"

"My good man, don't trouble us now!" cried one of the officers; "don't you see my friends are going to split each other? We are not in a charitable humor."

"Itis not alms I ask for," said the man; "I am a poor carpenter, with eight children, and my wife is sick; and hearing heard that those gentlemen were about to kill each other, I thought of asking you to let me make the coffins."

At these words the individuals about to commence the combat burst into a loud fit of laughter, and simultaneously throwing down their swords, shook hands with each other and walked away.

How to grow Beautiful.

Persons may outgrow disease and become healthy, by proper attention to the laws of their physical constitution. By moderate and daily exercise men may become active and strong in limb and muscle. But to grow beautiful, how? Age dims the lustre of the eye, and pales the roses on beauty's cheeks; while crows-feet and furrows, and wrinkles, and lost teeth, and gray hair, and bald head, and tottering limbs, and limping, most sadly mar the human form divine. But dim as the eye is, pallid and sunken as may be the face of beauty, and frail and feeble that once strong, erect, and manly body, the immortal soul, just fledging its wings for heaven, may look out through those faded windows as beautiful as the dew-drob of summer's morning, as melting as the tears that glisten in affection's eye—by growing kindly, by cultivating sympathy with all human kind, by cherishing forbearance towards the follies and foibles of our race; and feeding, day by day, on that love to God and man which lifts us from the brute and makes us akin to angels.

☞ Boquets of flowers,—out of very delicate perfume, we should judge,—are now, it is said cut out of turnips, carrots, sugar-beets,—and perhaps onions. But no philanthropist has yet devised a way to make vegetables out of nosegays.

Shopping in California.

A San Francisco paper is responsible for the following specimen of shopping in California.

Not a great while ago, a lady who had, by some freak of the fates come into the management of a farm somewhere in the our respectable hotels. Her first act was to send for the salesman of one of the leading agricultural houses in the city. A waiter conveyed the message, and, in a few moments, the obliging functionary stood bowing and rubbing his hands, before her.

"Your orders, madam?"

"I am sorry to give you trouble, but, having just assumed the control of an establishment, I would like to put in practice the most economical methods of husbandry. Are there any new inventions in cradles, now?"

The shopman blushingly replied that he believed there were several; and rubbed his hands again, as if the question had inspired him with an idea.

"You would recommend me to have one? You see, I am obliged to consult you, and I rely upon your candor."

"I would have one, ma'am, by all means. It would probably come useful, if not now, leastways, some time."

"Yes—I expect a large crop this season, and shouldn't know what to do without one. Stay—a cradle is of no use without a man to tend it; could you recommend me, now, to a stout, healthy fellow who would not expect to much for his services?"

"I think I could provide you, ma'am, with a good article; there's our Pat, whose only fault that I know of is his appetite. Is there anything else, ma'am, in our line?"

"Not just at present, though I suppose that before the season is over, I shall want a threshing machine."

"Ha! ha! ha!" chuckled the salesman,—"threshing machine—very indispensable. Bully for you!"

The price, $150, was paid over, and the salesman disappeared. What was the lady's astonishment, when, not an hour afterward, a porter made his appearance, bearing on his shoulder the most sumptuous infant's cradle that ever emanated from the genius of an artist in toys or furniture. It was a work both of utility and art, inlaid with mother of pearl and hung raund with laces, and big enough for triplets. The purchase was accompanied with a note:

"Cradle supplied as per order. The bearer is the nearest I can come to the latter part of your commission.—SNOOKS

The lady started up, as one for the moment bereft of her senses. Then, seizing the bell rope, she rang a peal that called up the waiters in the vicinity, who found her in a violent fit of kicking hysterics on the sofa. Her messenger, it seems, instead of going to the agricultural warehouse designated, had left his order at a furnishing shop adjoining. That afternoon an irate woman was observed pummeling with her parasol the head of the luckless salesman at 142—street.

Tobacco.

The tobabco plant is a native of the East and West Indies, and particularly the Island of Tobago, whence the Tobacco is derived. It is probable that tobacco was smoked in various parts of Asia, and especially in China, long before the discovery of it in the New World. An account of the plant, under the name of Cohoba, was published in 1496, by a Spanish monk, whom Columbus, on his second departure from America, had left at St. Domingo; and it was shortly afterwards imported in considerable quantities both by Spain and Portugal. In 1559, Jean Nicot, the French ambassador at the Portuguese court, sent some seeds of tobacco to his own country, where it was cultivated under the name of Nicotiana.

Tobacco is said to have been first brought into England by Sir Francis Drake, in 1586, and Sir Walter Raleigh introduced the custom of smoking it. Some idea of the high estimation in which tobacco was formerly held, as well as its dearness, may be formed from what was written by Atrey, an old English author in 1680, who says:

"I have heard some of our old yeomen neighbors affirm that when they went to market they culled out their biggest shillings to lay in the scales against the tobacco," thus making it equal in value to its weight in silver.

The Tecumseh Herald.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 12, 1865

For the Tecumseh Herald.

From the 26th Michigan Infantry.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., Jan. 6, 1865.

MR. EDITOR:

Perhaps it may be a matter of interest to your readers to hear from our company. So, if you will take my blundering style, I will tell you some facts.

Change is one of Nature's laws. All things are constantly undergoing a change. So, of course, we must be subject to the same. Although we are still in the same quarters that we took nearly two years ago, still our company has undergone some painful and some pleasant changes. We are still in the commissary department, doing our duty with high credit to ourselves and officers.

E. Richardson is still our Captain. He was 2d Lieutenant when the company was first formed. He has many friends. Since the death of Lieut. M. Roberts it has pleased Gov. Blair to commission Albert L. Randall, who was 2d Lieut. as 1st Lieutenant, of which we are glad. It would puzzle the brains of the Governor to find a better man than Randall. He is both a gentleman, and a good and accomplished officer. Having served as a private soldier in the Old Fourth, he knows just how to treat the men under him. He is very strict; but he is a warm friend to those who are law abiding soldiers.

It has also pleased the Governor to commission as 2d Lieutenant Wm. F. Howe, who has long served the company as a faithful friend in the office of Orderly Sergeant. We are glad to see the shoulder straps upon our friend Howe. Should he fill the position of 2nd Lieutenant as well as he did that of Orderly, surely none will even have cause to regret the Governor's choice. For over two years I have watched both of these men, and feel confident that the Captain has two good officers to assist him in governing his company. We believe that the Governor knows to whom honor belongs.

[illegible] A strong and steady one he will make. The health of the company is good. Duty is pretty heavy. The quarters are comfortable. We have no reason to complain, but sometimes we conclude that Uncle Sam issues too many beans. Our fathers better keep beans out of our sight after we return home!

Often do we long to see our friends at home, and should the Ruler of all events continue to us His loving favor as he has in the past, there will be a goodly number of us to come. Roll on, father time. Let September, 1865, come, and then those who are still alive will assemble with those they love in their quiet homes in old Michigan. SOLDIER.

Sherman's March.

NEAR SAVANNAH, GA., December 20, 1864.

* * * Doubtless you are already aware of the fact that after our campaign into Alabama, in pursuit of Gen. Forest, or after our return rather, our army destroyed the Rail Roads leading into Atlanta from the North, and thus effectually closed all communication with America or the "land of white men."

We left Atlanta on the 16th of November, after destroying all the public buildings, except the churches, that could be of any military advantage to the enemy. We left with 20 days' rations for our army, which numbered not far from 65,000 men,—marching on an average from 15 to 18 miles per day. After about three days' march we began to find a section of country well improved and our men "fared sumptuously every day" by foraging. We had an abundance of such things as sweet potatoes, meat of every kind, sugar, molasses, honey, flour, meal, and sometimes butter. These things were foraged by a regularly organized "Forage Corps," composed of men detailed from every company in each regiment, brigade, and division.

The weather, for the most of the time, was splendid for marching, although some days were uncomfortably warm, and a few days of rain made the roads in one or two instances rather muddy.

Thus we moved on and on,—sometimes marching for two or three days in the direction of some town or city, as though we would strike the place, and then suddenly "tack about," as the sailors say, and move almost at right angles with our former course. Thus Gen. Sherman baffled all the plans of the Rebels, who could have no idea as to his ultimate destination, not even until we approach to within 45 or 50 miles of Savannah. It is said that the track made by all the columns of our army was 60 miles in width from Right to Left.

On the 24th of November, while all our friends in the North, and all our Brother soldiers in the East were enjoying their sumptuous Thanksgiving Dinners, the old 2d Division 14th Army Corps, was entering into Milledgeville, the Capital of Georgia.

From Milledgeville we again moved as though we would strike Augusta, and after marching a day or two in that direction again veered to to the right; and then it was known that we would strike Savannah.

We had the black Swamps to contend with for the last forty or fifty miles, and often were obliged to make new roads—the rebels having entirely destroyed the old ones—and some days we would not make more than two or three miles in a day. We crossed many a dark and narrow stream, which perhaps would not be more than 20 feet wide, but which, like some of the lakes of our own State, seemed to be bottomless.

There was much of interest to be learned by me on this campaign. I think that not less than seven or eight thousand of slaves followed with, and in the rear of, our army. Here might be seen the robust man of middle age, and the tender youth of but few summers. There, the old woman of three score and ten, bent by the weight of years and labor, tottering along by the aid of her staff, and by her side her daughter, a woman of middle age—and in the arms of the latter a nursing babe,—while three or four little wooly heads, completing the group, brought up the rear; some of whom were hardly of sufficient age and strength to waddle along and keep up. I could discover in the same family as many shades of color as there were individuals!

The News

Monday, January 9.

The main features of our dispatches this morning are taken from Southern papers of the 5th to the 9th insts. inclusive. The Jeff. Davis broil continues at Richmond, the organ of Davis being particularly harsh on the opposition. They are denounced as a factious, ill-affected, treacherous hoss of malcontents, traducers and and friends of the North. they are pointed out as eminently dangerous to the South, and if they would quit Southern territory it would be a happy riddance.

An important matter, that of the law of reprisals, is being discussed by the New-York papers. One of them insists upon our government seizing the property of Canadians in the United States to indemnify the St. Albans Bank, if the raiders and their are not given up.

A list of persons paping income taxes is being prepaired at Washington and will and will soon be published. The reason assigned is the numerous frauds practised upon the government. Large numbers of persons reaurn incomes far below their apparent expenses.

A Britis army officer, having traveled extensively in this country, publishes in a London paper the conclusions which he arrived at concerning our resources and ability to cary on the war. He states that he considers the Northern States inexhaustible in men and money, and in traveling over an extent of territory of a thousand miles throughout the United States he saw ve y little to indicate the existance of a great war, and nothing that give the least sign of exhaustion of men.

Thursday, January 12.

The St. Albans raiders to-day got another postbonment for thirty days to get further evidence from Richmond.

The remnent of Hood's army is reported fortifying Corinth, with a view of going into winter quarters. It is also said he is repairing the Mobile and Ohio railroad.

Te State Convention has just bassed the following ordinance of enancipation by avote of 60 to 4:

Be it ordained by the people of the State of Missouri, in Convention assembled that here after in this state there shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except in punishment of crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted; and all perions held to service or labor as slaves are hereby declared free.

The Worlds Washington special, asserts, Francis P. Blair has gone to the rebel capital with the full knowledg and consent of Presidet Lincoln, and is clothed with al autority requisite for opening negotiations with Jeff. Davis, with a view to restore peace.

His instructions as to terms to be offered are embraced within these propisitioni, each of which are final: First—an amnesty to all. Second—the constitution as it is and the Union as it was; Third—total abolition of slavery within a certain length of time, Another specil of the same date to the World gives the following rumors; That advices direct from Richmond represents Jeff. Davis as strongly inclined to peace measure, and willing to accept much more liberal terms than at first supposed.

This is deemed most auspicious for the result of Blair's mission. "Mr. Lincoln, on the other hand, is disposed to be as lenient as possible.

Scraps of News.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.

The Richmond papers of yesterday chronicles a great fire at Charlotte, North Carolina. The government warehouse including Quartermaster and Commissary Officers, and a portion of the North Carolina and Charlotte and South depots were burned. The loss was at first estimated at twenty million, but it has been since reduced by a saving of grain, sugar, etc.

Yankee incendiaries were suspected, but it was subsequently ascertained, that the fire was the result of accident.

A despatch from Charleston, S. C., January 8, says, a gentleman from Savannah, reports Sherman as sending the Eleventh Corps around to Beaufort, to cooperate with Foster's troops between Pocotaligo and Coosawatchie.

A dispatch from Macon reports the enemy one or two thousand strong, with wagons and artillery, on the Oconee River, moving in the direction of Southwestern Georgia.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

Died, At Andersonville, Georgia, Oct. 2nd, of Chronic Diarrhœa, Wm. A. Blood, son of Ezra E. and Alzina Blood, of this village, aged 24 years.

The deceased was born in this place where he resided till the year 1862. In the fall of '62, being on a visit to his sister in the State of N. Y. he enlisted in the 24th U. S Independent Battery. Being stationed at Plymouth, N. C. when that place surrendered to the enemy last spring he among many others was taken prisoner, and removed south to the Andersonville Prison. Here after enduring the privations of prison life and being subject to the tender mercies of the Rebels he was at last released by a kind providence from all pain and suffering here below. Thus has another been called upon to yield up his life in defense of those rights handed down to us by our forefathers and which must and will ultimately triumph. The funeral services will be held at the Presbyterian Church, on Sunday morning, Jan. 15th.

Christmas Presentation

On Christmas Eve., the Rev. H. L. Hayward, pastor of the Universalist Society was the recipient of a magnificent Christmas gift in the shape of a wallet containing the snug little sum of $150, in greenbacks. It was placed upon the Christmas Tree, which had been erected for the benefit and amusement of the Sabbath School, and was presented to him among the other gifts,—he receiving no intimation whatever of its contents. His surprise can easily be imagined, when afterwards, upon opening the wallet he found it well lined with "legal tender." The amount was raised by subscription, nearly one quarter of which was donated by generous friends outside of the Society. Mrs. Hayward also in addition to many other useful and fanciful articles, received from "Santa Claus" a beautiful $20 muff. On Christmas day Rev. Mr. H. in a few appropriate remarks, took occasion to publicly thank the donors for their very agreeable and substantial surprise of the previous evening, assuring them that their bountiful liberality should never be forgotten, that the donation should be sacredly appropriated toward liquidating the small debt with which his homestead is still incumbered, and trusting that a kind Providence might permit him to have a home in Tecumseh for many years to come among the dear friends whom he had known only to honor and respect, and whom he had learned to love so well.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tone, gentle stimulant and unequalled morning regulator. Prepared in vigor by Bourbon. Being now used by the patronage of all other Bitters in more than fifty United States towns, Hospitals, and neither of private families, and is the only popular Bitters which has been especially recommended from stump for by the United States government on the ground of its having been adopted and standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ They are made of ingredients well known and approved by the medical profession, for having powerful tonic properties, are highly palatable and pleasant, with sufficient stimulating properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirit, Sallow Complexions.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

FOR

Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every sufferer try these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, so that thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

☞ If your druggist or tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly supereeding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, being readily kept in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action by which the WATER or CALCAREOUS depositions, and unnatural enlargements are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for men, women, or children.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEEKNESS

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

The system once impregnated with the poison of Syphilis, Helmbold's EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA is recommended as an alterative, which will effectually root out the disease and leave the system in health. Clear and healthy Color is the result. Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla is being prepared precisely for this class of complaints. Its Blood-purifying Properties are preserved to a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths per cent. per annum,—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect. They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest of the notes for three years, this privilege conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate of 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation.

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent per annum [illegible] in the various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to leaders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington; the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 3d, 1864, amendatory of the bye laws on fire limits.

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs Slayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the bye laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street: provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high also the west wall of said wood ware house to be built of brick, sustained upon iron columns, with the entire structure covered with one roof, flat and of fire proof gravel cement, cornice of brick along brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

Winter Evening.

BY NELLIE ATHERTON.

'Tis a dreary night; unceasingly
The feathery snow flakes fall,
And a sad and gloomy mantle
Is spread around o'er all.

Where'er I look the cold, cold snow
Is all that I can see:
And nought can be so dreary
As Winter-time to me.

I've sung the joys of Winter—
When down the hill we'll slide,—
On on a lovely evening,
O'er the smooth ice merrily glide.

When the sleigh-bells chime so sweetly,
And all seems glad and gay,
But my tho'ts and this dismal snow storm
Have stolen the charm away.

Henceforth I'll sing of Summer—
Of those joyous dreamy hours,
Beside the laughing river,
And warbling birds or flowers.

I'm Summer's willing votary—
I scorn old Winter's reign;
And I shall be impatient
Till Summer smiles again.

The Submerged Mine.

It was a singular place for a family meeting; at least it would seem such to one unfamiliar with life in the English coal-mining districts. Huldah Ray with their two little girls, had come to visit her husband, in the subterranean workroom, where he had spent years, only as [illegible] in the kingdom would have reason to be proud of such children.

Stephen Ray so far had been able to support his wife and infants in comfort and respectability, so that before his cottage door were not seen the squalid looks of children, who swarm in the humbler quarters of every great English city. Huldah owned a set of magic fingers, capable of turning old things into new; and her little ones were kept always tidy, even tasteful, to look at. On the present occasion, to which she and three-year-old Jessie had looked forward with as happy anticipation as ever did mother and child to a holiday in green fields, basking in sunshine, she had almost outdone herself, and they appeared fresh and bright as two early tulips.

Stephen had obtained permission of the overseer to make it a partial holiday for himself; so having washed his hands and donned a cleaner frock, he set off, carrying a candle, and the babe of eighteen months, to show his wife the wonders of the almost interminable chambers, hundreds of feet below the surface of the earth, which the generations of miners had wrought in utilizing one of England's great sources of independence and wealth.

They walked on for some time, occasionally making a curve or descending some steps, and still the solitary space seemed to lengthen and widen beyond. This portion of the mine had been disused since Stephen was a boy; and he had often thought he would like to explore it as the place most familiarly associated with his strange childhood—one in general aspects and surroundings with his present manhood. It was under the sea, whose roar could be distinctly heard above their heads.

The young collier grew quite elated in reaching the old familiar haunts, and recognizing them one after another. It was no fair landscape, diversified by mountain and valley, wood and stream; no spreading tree invited him to lie in the green shade as he used to lie, listening to the robin's song in the branches overhead; no starkling brook reminded him of the times he had played truant to bait his small hook for the speckled trout that darted in and out among the smooth stones of its bed; but black, dreary and chaotic as the place looked, it yet had the power to bring back tender recollections to his mind.

"There—there it is. The birth I've slept in many and many a night," and Stephen held down his light beside a lit, the dog kennel of excavation in the rocky wall of the mine. "See!" he added, pointing a little higher—"my initials, S. R.—I chiselled them out in the stone

A little farther on he paused again, with a subdued air.

"This is the very spot where my poor father did his last work. It was in the month of August, I remember; for I went up to attend his funeral, and before that I had not been out of the mine for a year. He was seized in a fit, and lived only an hour. Ah, Huldah, you never knew him. He was a father to be a pattern to a son; and he knew something about books. To think that my great grandfather, Huldah, was a clergyman!"

"I could never bear to stay here," said Huldah. "The noise of the sea over us is too awful. The waves seem like dashing against one's head. Shan't we go now?"

Stephen smiled, raising his ear to listen, for the sound was one he loved and had longed to hear again. But even he tho't the reverberation had never been so grand and tremendous. It was like the heaviest thunder, or the successive report of cannon, and made the sluggish air tremble and quiver like a thing afraid.

Louder, more stunning; then a sudden terrible concussion, as if the heavens were rending and the judgement day had come to the earth.

"O let us fly!" cried Huldah, in wild terror, though she scarce heard the sound of her own voice, so fearful was the tumult. "Stephen! Stephen!"

He heeded her not, but stood with his candle lifted, looking up with a kind of fascination. The young mother, caught the infant from his arm and ran away, still calling him by name.

At that moment a portion of the flinty vaulted roof directly over his head gave way and fell in a shattered mass about him. He was overthrown and the light extinguished. Thus much the panic-stricken wife beheld, and the darkness of the pit surrounded them.

Seating the youngest of the two children upon the ground, she confined it to the spot by a stone placed on its clothing; afterward scarcely pinning the [illegible] to her. It occupied but a moment; she tore the two pairs of little arms from her neck, woere they clung with wild weeping, and tried to grope her way back to her husband. She called his name, and could just hear his voice answering. Drip, drip, came the cold water drops on her head; then she stumbled as her foot struck the fallen heap.

"Stephen, where are you?"

"Where are you, my wife?"

"Here. You are not killed, thank God!"

"Not harmed, except my foot—that is fast among the stones, and crushed I am sure."

"If I could find the candle!"

"Here it is, and matches. I have a candle besides."

He struck a light. In his agony he had forgotten to do it sooner. An agonized shriek escaped his wife at the sight it revealed. His right foot was fast imprisoned by a stone of a quarter of a ton in weight. The poor man sat upright, bracing himself by his hands, and groaning bitterly, though scarce audibly, for the din of the water which was filtering faster and faster through the open seam in the roof.

"I must fly for help! Give me the other candle."

"No, make your escape with the children if possible, and give the hands warning. There is no time to be lost."

"And leave you to a fate so dreadful! I cannot obey you, my husband. Nay, I will trust God to keep you all till I can go and come again with help."

"Can you find the way?"

"I will try—I don't know."

He strove to direct her.

"Follow yonder wall till it brings you to an angle—then away to the right, and up a flight of steps—then straight forward."

"Keep up your courage; God will lead me right."

These were her parting words to her husband. One moment she paused by the children, stuck the longest piece of a ndle in a cleft of the wall, and bade them look at it, then fled away, and the watcher saw her flickering light swallowed up in gloom and distance. Would she reappear with assistance in time to save them? He tried to hope, but was ready to despair.

Meantime he could distinctly hear the grating of the rocks overhead, as the entire mass each moment threatened to fall, and let in the hungry flood. And now the descending drops mingled in a continuous stream, and the stream increased in force and volume till it became almost a torrent. Five minutes that seemed an age had elapsed, and already the floor of the mine was submerged.

Stephen looked at his children. They could not see him in the darkness where he lay, nor could he make his voice heard. Both were quiet now, hushed by the very awfulness of the place. The eldest was watching with eyes of wonder the glittering scales of the watery serpents that coiled and writhed, creeping up to the pairs of tiny feet. Where he lay the water was deepening every instant. Must he see the darlings drown!

Higher rose the water, and swept in a still sheet around the little helpless forms. Alternately they clasped their arms about one another, and struggled with the merciless element. The father could endure the sight no longer. Tearing his half-severed limb from the foot, he crawled forward and took them in his arms. With the beautiful faith of childhood they felt they were safe now, and all their sorrow ended; they clung to him with delight, only asking for mamma, and now and then looking out into the darkness where she had disappeared.

Close at hand was a boulder of rock; Stephen managed to climb upon it with the children, and sat there. Steadily climbed the water after him. Then he stood up on his remaining foot, supporting himself against the wall, his little ones clasped to his breast. Rapidly swelled the water; he could feel it washing his knees; and now it touched the children's feet. He raised and placed one on either shoulder. And still the deluge deepened around, as little Jessie lisped:

"I can climb on your head, papa; but what'll Nellie do?"

To render yet more awful the scene where they must meet their fate, the rising flood washed over the feeble light and all was utter darkness.

At this crisis the despairing eyes brightened to meet the flashing of swiftly advancing torches; and Stephen Ray, submerged to the armpits distinguished the forms of his wife and the friends she had brought to his relief. At the head of the stairs within a dozen yards of him they suddenly halted; he heard Huldah's shriek of despair, standing on the brink of the pit, and seeing below, and beyond, only darkness left to him, but they seemed not to hear. And the insatiate flood was gurgling at his throat.

He bethought him to clench Jessie's small finfiers in his hair, and making the little one cling to him, with the hand thus released he wrenched away piece after piece of the bitumious wall, flinging it on the water in the direction of the excited group at the top of the stairs. The resort was successful; he saw that his situation was at least understood. But even now would they be able to reach him? In the briefest possible space the urgent interrogatory was answered. A board with a coil of rope and a light upon it, was floated out to him. Stephen succeeded in securing the children upon it; watched while it was being drawn in and safely landed; then, completely exhausted by suffering, fell forward and went down helplessly into the creeping tide.

The light of the torches brought to bear upon him, revealed his final peril; a swimmer plunged in and rescued his friend; and the maimed collier, and wife and babes, were hurried out of reach of the threatened inundation.

The water, however, rose no higher, the breach had closed of itself; and being subsequently repaired by men inured to danger, the labor of the mine went on as before. It was said that a great ship foundered over the spot; and that it was the concussion and the action of her keel upon the rock, which caused its disintegration. In the course of an hour she drifted clear, thus doubtless preventing more calamitious consequences to the mining interests.

The loss of Stephen's foot, in the end, brought him as great recompense as the circumstances admitted. During the confinement of weeks, consequent upon the accident, his wages were paid him; and when he recovered, the agent, having in visiting him in his affliction, discovered his abilities, he was received back into the employ of the corporation, as a book keeper. Thus relieved of hard toil and in the enjoyment of a comfortable salary, with his devoted wife and beautiful children, he lived many years, a useful and happy man.

"Are you to be let with this house?" inquired a gentleman of a young lady. "No," replied she, "I am to be let alone."

What's a Wife!

"A wife," says Mr. Lofty, in answer to the above question, "is a woman that belongs to a man. She's a pretty little creature, made to tickle his fancy his vanity and his self-love; and to laugh, sing and dance through his otherwise dull habitation. But in meantime, mind you, she must see that the house is kept in order; that the dinner is always well cooked; that the buttons and the hose are all right, and nothing in the household economy ever interferes with his comfort. In short, a wife is a present sort of universal servant to her husband's will and pleasure—a most agreeable provision made by the Creator for man's good. She is a compound of flowers, music, and domestic animals—very useful, and very ornamental—all the more desirable for her lack of mental powers; because, were she not in this respect so much inferior to her decreed lord and master, she might become so presumptuous as to think that a shoe which fits one foot ought to fit the other; that good rules work both ways; and that just so much comfort as she gives she has a right to demand in return; that just so much honor and respect as she pays she should receive; in short, she that is in number and importance of rights and privileges the peer of her husband."

Thus said Mr. Lofty—and now hear the response of Mr. Common Sence:

"Nay; but a wife neither for a toy nor a servant, but for a steadfast friend. She is indeed, a fount of joy and pleasure such as, to the heart, there is not elsewhere on earth; she is, indeed, the brightener of his house, and the wise and careful manager of her family—of her family—for whatever is his is hers; and between wedded hearts the words mine and thine are impudence and absurdity. But she is more than this—she is his confident his advertiser his ever sympathising friend—his able and most tender conscler, his strength even when his courage droops; she is the voice of God's love and comfort to him as he toils and struggles through this weary world. This is what a wife is if she answers her Maker's ideal; but she is seldom found, alas! because man is so unworthy."

Looking at the Fire.

Looking into the fire is very injurious to the eyes, particularly a coal fire. The stimulus of light and heat united, soon destroys the eyes. Looking at molten iron will soon destroy the sight. Reading in the twilight is injurious to the eyes, as they are obliged to make great exertion. Reading or sewing with a side light injures the eyes, as both eyes should be exposed to an equal degree of light. The reason is the sympathy between the eyes is so great, that if the pupil of one is dilated by being kept partially in the shade the one that is exposed cannot contract itself sufficiently for protection, and will ultimately be injured. Those who wish to preserve their sight, should preserve their general health by corect habits, and give their eyes just work enough, with a due degree of light.

Rather Insinuating.

The other day, as the Baltimore fast train was coming up the road behind time and at extra speed, an old gray-headed contraband with a big bundle on his head, overtook the locomotive, and the conductor being well acquainted with the sable pedestrian, hailed him:

"Hallos, Uncle Rabe, going to baltimore?"

"Yes, I is."

"Well, jump on and ride, Rabe."

"No, thank'ee, massa, I'se in a hurry dat I is."

A rail from a fence was thurst under the boiler; but Uncle Rabe passed the train, and reached Baltimore first.

One Reason.

'You ought to marry.'

'Never.'

'I know a good girl for you.'

'Let me alone!'

'But, perhaps you don't know her.—She is young.'

'Then she is sly.'

'Beautiful.'

'The more dangerous.'

'Of good family.'

'Then she is proud.'

'She is tender-hearted.'

'Then she is jealous.'

'She has talents.'

'To kill me.'

'And one hundred thousand dollars.'

'I'll take her.'

A Blunt Farmer.

We were much amused at a fashionable restaurant, a short time since, by the entrance of an honest old farmer who came, as he said, "to get his dinner."

Seating himself at a small circular table, he took off his hat, placed it on the floor by his side, and with an ancient cotton handkerchief commenced wiping the large drops of perspiration from his honest face.

Stepping up to the countryman, a white aproned waiter inquired, in a cast iron voice:

"What'll y order, sir?"

"What'd you say?" replied the farmer, looking at his interrogater with no small degree of interest.

"I inquired what you'd have," exclaim the waiter, looking as if the farmer's penetrating glance had started the starch.

'What I'd have?'

'Yes, sir.'

'Well, I d'know; what have you got?'

'Roast beef, corned beef, beefsteak, beef alamonde with nudles, pressed corned beef cold, veal roast, chickens roast, boiled or fricasseed, grenadins of veal a la jardiniere, croquettes of fish a l'allemamande—'

'Hold on! hold on!' cried the farmer.—'I don't know anything about them things Why you've got a voice like a stove-pipe with a dozen nails in it. Give me some mutton chop, and dont speak to me again till I settle my bill, or I shan't know whether I'm in an eating house or a Latin observatory!'

Sulphur soap is recomended for keeping the complection clear from pimples, etc. It is very odd. There is our old friend Vesuvius, who has been suffering for a long time from eruptions, and sulphur only seems to make him worse.

The News.

New York, Jan. 17.

The Herald's Washington special says Blair's sole mission to Richmond was to recover a number of important private papers, title deeds, &c., taken from his house by rebels when near Washington. He was very kindly received, and had frank and free conversations with Jeff. Davis, and numbers of others, but these resulted in nothing definite. The story published by the Richmond Dispatch about Davis sending a letter saying he was willing to receive peace commissioners, to President Lincoln, is all bosh.

The Tribune's Washington special also says no letter was sent by Davis, and that he made no sign of lowering the rebel flag.

Lt. Governor Jacobs, of Kentucky, who returned with Blair, reports a strong peace feeling among the citizens of Richmond, and even among officers of high grade. He predicts there will be a cessation of hostilities within two months, and a propos. for peace from the rebel government. This is in contradiction of the indications shown in the fact reported by an officer from North Carolinia, who says the rebels already have three regiments of freed slaves in the field.

The Times' Washington special says it is reported at headquarters, Army of the Potomac, that Lee has sent his family out of Richmond, and that nothing but peace is talked of in that city.

A special to the World, Washington, 10th, says Blair reported to the President he had no official message to communicate to him from the rebel government. So far as is known, he found the talk in Richmond the same as is put forth in the papers of that city.

It is said a division of Virginia troops, recently ordered South, mutinied and positively refused to leave their own State, and that they carried their point.

The New South contains an editorial from the Charleston Mercury of the 12th, which says the state of this military department for Georgia and South Carolina is anything but satisfactory, and none the less so than to the General commanding. His department has just come into his hands, and many of the troops are new to him and to the department. They come to him under command of an imbecile, and he has received them. What has been done to eradicate this fatal evil we shall not stop to enquire. The time has been too short to do much, and the forces have been very much disorganized, but the very last moments are arriving when all must be done that can be done. The enemy does not intend to wait upon our leisure, and there is much to do. The path we are now travelling is straight to destruction. The crisis of the Confederacy has arrived in fatal earnest. The result of the next six months will bring the Confederacy to the ground or will reinstate its power. Without reform we are doomed. There must be no Jeff. Davis fooling, but brains.

FORT FISHER, Jan 16—2 A. M.

after careful reconnoissance on the 14th it was decided to risk an assault on Fort Fisher. Davies Division, with Col. Abbott's brigade, to hold our line already strong across the Peninsula, and facing Wilmington against Hoke, while Ames' division should assault on the West end. After three hours heavy navy firing the assault was made at three o'clock on the afternoon of the 15th. Curtis' brigade led, and as soon as it was on the west end of the land front, it was followed by Pennibacker's and the latter by Bells.

After desperate fighting, gaining foot by foot, and severe loss at five o'clock in the afternoon we had possession of about half the land front. Abbott's brigade was then taken from our line facing Wilmington, and put into Fort fisher, and on pushing it forward at ten o'clock in the afternoon it took the rest of the work with little resistance, the garison falling back to extreme of the peninsula, where they were followed and captured. Among others Gen. Whiting and Col. Lamb, both wounded. I think we have not quite one thousand prisoners. I hope our loss may not exceed five hundred, but it is impossible to judge in the night. Among the wounded are the commanders of three leading brigades, Gen. Curtis being wounded not severely, but Cols. Pennibacker and Bell dangerously.

The land front was a formidable one, the parapet in places fourteen or fifteen feet high, but the men went at it nobly under a severe musketry fire. The marines and sailors went up gallantly, but the musketry fire from the east end of the land front was so severe, they did not succeed in entering the work.

The navy fire on the works, judging from the holes, must of been terrific. Many of the guns were injured. How How many were on the point I cannot say—perhaps thirty or forty.

Quotas on Last Call.

We have received several communications inquiring our opinion of the meaning of Provost Marshal General Fry's circular of January 2d, concerning the credits to be allowed on the coming draft. An erroneous impression has gone out that this circular deprives those districts which have an excess of volunteers of their just credits. To say nothing of the fact that the law specially allows such credits, and that it is not in General Fry's power to alter or disclose the law, a careful reading of the circular of January 2d, will show that it does not bear the construction which has been placed upon it. It is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Provost Marshal General's Office,
Washington, D. C., Jan. 2, 1865.

CIRCULAR No. 1.

The attention of Acting Assistant Provost Marshals Generals of States, and Boards of Enrollment, is called to the fact, that the quotas assigned under the call of December 19th, 1864, for 300,000 men, must not be reduced except by actual enlistments in the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, since the 19th ultime.

JAMES B FRY,
Provost Marshal General.

The quotas are made up by first allowing all credits due on account of former enlistments, and then they must not be reduced except by actual enlistments since the 19th of December.

The following is an extract of a letter, of the 15th inst., from Major Little to the Provost Marshal of Maine: "If the quota of any District credited on the call of July, 1864, for 500,000 men, is more than filled, the excess in years of services is credited on the call of December 19 for 300,000, and the quota reduced accordingly." He interprets circular No. 1, issued by Gen. Fry, Jan. 2d, 1865, to mean that after all proper credits are given and quotas finally fixed at the Provost Marshal General's office, then only actual enlistments can further reduce the quota.

Important from Wilmington

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.

The Navy Department has received the following from the North Atlantic Squadron, dated United States ship Malvern, Beaufort, Jan. 7: SIR—I have the honor to inform you a letter has been received from Lieutenant Commander Temple, containing interesting matter concerning Fort Fisher. It is an important matter of history, and it tells the whole story.

Your obedient servant
D. D. PORTER, Rear Adm'l.

U. S. STEAMER PONTOOSUC,
Off New Inlet, Jan. 2, 1865.

Rear Admiral David D. Porter:

SIR: It may be of assistance to you to receive, together with the rebel deserters mentioned in my letter of this date, the following memorandum of information elicited from one of their number, Corp. Thomas Lawley, of the marines. He says he was stationed, during and since the bombardment, in the navni battery Buchanan, commanded by Lieut. Chapman and situated near the mound. That there were between 500 and 600 men in the forts on the two days of the attack, and no troops in Wilmington or its vicinity to reinforce them; that the fire from the fleet was so fierce as to drive the rebels from their guns and into the bomb-proofs; that soon after the commencement of the action two of their Brooks guns burst, killing and wounding 25 of their men; that we dismounted eight of their guns besides injuring several of their gun carriages; that we killed 13 of their men and wounded 30; that Gen. Whiting supposed the boats which were sent over the bar on the 25th to be a storming party of seamen, to which he would have been obliged to surrender; that the bombardment at sunset was terrific, when our troops appeared in front of them immediately afterward; that the garrison only waited their attack to surrender without resistance; that they could not imagine why the attack had been abandoned; that matters remained the same way throughout the following day; that we could have easily pressed our troops into the fort until evening, when Gen. Bragg arrived at Wilmington with 6,000 men from Richmond, and that, finding our troops re-embarking, Bragg decided not to molest us

Respectfully,
WM. P. TEMPLE, Lieut. Com'd'g.

Alabama to be Invaded.

The Louisville Journal says: Major General Thomas, who has lately removed his claim upon the nation's gratitude, is about to enter upon a field of military enterprise worthy of his genius and the valor of his triumphant army. He has driven Hood, broken and dispirited, from Tennessee, but there is work enough before him still. The Tennessee River has become his new base of operations, and thence he will doubtless move southward through Alabama and Mississippi. Selma, Montgomery, and Mobile lie before him, and their seizure will give him control of the vast area between the Mississippi and the Savannah Rivers. Alabama, of all the rebellious States, alone remains to have her interior soil pressed by a Federal advance, and ere long her people, like those of Georgia, will feel [illegible] ion. The march of Sherman through Georgia, novel and hazardous as the undertaking was deemed, met with no adequate military resistance—scarcely any; and we doubt that the people of Alabama will oppose Thomas in greater force. The State, when invaded, will be found to be a shell like Georgia. Millions of cotton bales are said to lie in the field which Thomas is about to enter. His army can be supported, if need be, by twelve thousand troops now at Memphis, and in their southward movement General Dana at V[illegible] and General Granger, at New [illegible] combine their respective force[illegible] [illegible]grable time must clap [illegible] the shattered columns of Hood can be reorganized for service. The rebel leader lost the larger portion of his artillery, an immense army train, and about fifteen thousand men in his Tennessee raid, and the remainder of his forces were demoralized by defeat. Thomas will keep a vigilant eye on him, but we apprehend no serious obstacle from any efforts of his. Hood will be content with temporary obscurity.

Death of Edward Everett.

Edward Everett died this morning, at four o'clock, at his residence, on Summer street, of apoplexy. His age was seventy years and about four months. Mr. Everett addressed his fellow-citizens, at Faneuil Hall, on Monday last, in aid of sending provisions to Savannah, and, during the afternoon of that day, was present in Court, in reference to a claim for damages against the city of Charlestown, for overflowing a portion of an estate in Medford by constructing a [illegible] on Mystic River. On Tuesday he became affected with quite a severe cold, but neither his friends nor himself deemed it serious. Saturday evening he appeared about as well as usual, and retired to bed, declining to trouble any one to remain with him. About three o'clock this morning his housekeeper entered his room and found him sleeping naturally. An hour later she was alarmed by hearing a heavy fall in his room, and found him lying on the floor breathing heavily. A physician was promptly summoned, but before his arrival Mr. Everett died. The event was announced in nearly all the churches at the commencement of the morning service, and created a profound feeling of sadness. Shortly after noon the church bells of the city and suburbs were tolled.

Mr. Everett's funeral will take place at noon, on Thursday next, in the First Unitarian Church, Rev. Rufus Ellis, Pastor. It is presumed the State and City authorities will take part in the obsequies of this great and good citizen.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.

The following announcement has been furnished for general publication:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.

The President directs the undersigned to perform the painful duty of announcing to the people of the United States, that Edward Everett, distinguished not more by learning and eloquence, than by unsurpassed and disinterested labors of patriotism, at a period of political disorder, departed this life at four o'clock this morning. The several executive Departments of the Government will cause appropriate honor to be rendered to the memory of the deceased, at home and abroad, and wherever the national name and authority are acknowledged.

(Signed) WM. A. SEWARD.

THE FREEDMEN IN MARYLAND.—The Baltimore American says: "Large numbers of the freedmen, whether from choice or necessity, will remain at their former homes, and make the scenes of their compulsory toil their continued dwelling place. This has been the case to a large extent in Maryland. But, as one of its results, we have seen the disposition on the part of the late slaveholders to adopt a system of labor which practically amounts to enslavement, and which in effect abrogates the laws for protecting freedmen. Public opinion has set so strongly against these efforts at forced apprenticeship and other counteractions and evasions of the plain provisions of the new constitution, that in many cases the slaveholders have desisted from their attempts. But in numerous other instances they have persevered in their recourse to such hindrances and resistance, and thereby defeated the intent of the people."

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, knows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

WARD & STRICKLAND.

GLEASON'S PICTORIAL DOLLAR WEEKLY for this week, we have just received. It is a beautiful paper of sixteen pages, and is the first number for the new year. The price being only one dollar per annum, has placed it within the reach of all. Published every week by F. Gleason, 22 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

From Ridgeway.

The First Annual session of the Michigan General Christian Conference was held at the Christian Church in Ridgeway, Lenawee county, Mich., on January 11th, 1865. A. H. Hill was elected President, and Rev. E Mudge Secretary.

The Michigan Christian Missionary and Aid Society held its first annual meeting, in connection with the General Conference, and on Sabbath, the 15th inst., received from the church and congregation the sum of $129.70. Considerable religious interest exists among the people and the meetings are to be continued.

☞ There has been no time in the last three years, when it became of so much importance to the business men of all classes, (both to the buyer and seller,) to keep fully posted, as at the present, values are changing from time to time,—what was bearing a firm price yesterday, may decline to-day. There is not a business man in this village who keeps better posted, in his line of business, than R. C. Moore. He deals exclusively in Dry Goods and Furs, and when goods decline he marks goods down apparently with as good a grace as he would mark up. This he looks upon as the only true policy for one who has a stock of goods on the market, and for sale at all times. He never holds goods because the present market value will not give him the cost of the article, but always sells at the lowest market price. Another good trait in Moore's system of business, is that he is always ready to meet any emergency which may arise; for, instance, if some person, more nice than wise, assumes to buy customers (and some will be allured by the bait,) by cutting the price two cents on an article which is sold uniformly at one price and at a small profit, he is always ready for such wise ones—and meets them on their own ground. He is now selling his 3 shilling prints at 31 cts. per yard, and all articles at the lowest figure they can be bought at in town. Reader, before buying elsewhere, we especially recommend you to price goods at MOORE'S. He is a wide-a-wake Merchant and deals fairly with all. His prices are uniform, and his terms strictly cash.

☞ B. J. Bidwell, having sold his Boot and Shoe Store, still continues to manufacture Leather, and will keep for sale, Harness and Upper Leather, Kip and Calf Skins, Morocco and shoe Bindings, and the very best Hemlock and Oak Tanned Sole Leather. Also a choice lot pieces of Upper and Calf Leather suitable for making small Boots and Shoes and for mending, all of which is for sale at his store, at low figures. Cash paid for Hides and Skins, as usual, at his Dry Goods Store and Tannery.

Tecumseh, January 18th, 1865.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tonic, possessing the combined properties of the best Bitters, and morning stimulant. Prepared to stand all climates. Being now used in our exclusively all other Bitters in more than 200 United States Army Hospitals, and officers of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been especially recommended from active use by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ They are made of ingredients well known and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with skill blending the tonic properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirit, Sallow Complexion,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

FOR

Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let everyone try these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, so that thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

☞ If your druggist or grudeman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—

☞ Remember the name, and take no other.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ The composition of Dr. Swain's Bitters, having been made public through the columns of Medical Journals, and having been adopted as a standard remedy by the Medical Profession, are by the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, EXEMPT FROM STAMP DUTY.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use; owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths per cent. per annum.—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the Deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payabl in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent. per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. per annum, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average this exemption is worth fifty per cent. to the holder, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to leaders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and Designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS.—717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 3d, 1864, amendatory of the bye laws on fire limits.

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs Slayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the bye laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street, provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high also the west wall of said wood ware house to be built of brick; sustained upon iron columns, with the entire structure covered with one roof, flat and of fire proof gravel cement, cornice of brick along brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

The Mother's Love.

A sight too holy for rude eyes,—
The mother's tender face,
The little form that clings to her,
All purity and grace,—

All radiant with living joy
Clothed in a wondrous light,
Fond mother: picture forth this truth
Out from the closing night:

That love like this can never die,
Is braver than the brave,
Has power beyond the strongest will,
A host the weak to save.

Sad hearts, that for our country's weal
Have yielded treasures fair;
The tender blossoms that grew up
Beneath a mother's care,

Can testify that joys may fade,
The heart be crushed with pains,
But throned above her ruined hopes,
A mother's love still reigns.

The Mystery of a Dissecting Room.

SCENE a dissecting room in the basement of a medical college. Three students bring from a closet a sack, heavy and long, and with light jeering words such as would strike dissonantly on other ears, jostle therefrom a dead body, which they place upon a table and cover with a sheet.

"There, old chap," said one, going through the motions of tucking up a bed, "you'll sleep nice and warm till we come again, and then you and we are going to have fine times."

"Better place this than the graveyard, where you put up last night, eh?" interrogated another, tickling the feet of the corpse. "Knox," addressing one of his companions, "be back again in an hour, sure."

"I'm ready now," replied the third student, "and wish you were. I got leave for the night, and have gone to my aunt's in Hoboken. My aunt doesn't know I'm out. What to do with myself and keep invisible for the hour that you are attending prayers and going you to bed! Must slip out and stand at a street corner, and run the risk of being taken up by the police."

A door was unlocked into a passage, and the two went out; the third followed leisurely, and the opposite direction, unfastened a door leading to the street. It was beginning to rain, and he concluded not to take the proposed walk. Closing the door, he walked the length of the passage, turned an angle and passed and repassed to and from the staircase leading to the rooms above. Five minutes wearied him of this exercise, and a thought striking him, he returned to the dissecting room.

Why might he not have some little practice on his own account, before the others returned? He could see no necessity for waiting idly during their absence; though whether they would esteem it the fair thing for him to be beforehand with them he doubted.

"Don't care," he muttered to himself, "I can't afford to sit down here meek and awful, like John Smith watching with his neighbor's corpse. No, I'm bound to try the edge of my knife at once." So saying he threw back the edge of the sheet and make a slight incission in the shoulder of the subject.

What words can describe his horror and amazement, when a jet of warm blood struck his face, and the supposed corpse bounded to his feet and confronted him. The knife, its point dripping blood, was snatched from his inert hand; he had the idea that the living dead man turned toward the door, but dimness was in his sight, and he heard only a rushing sound in his own brain. Whether the door opened and shut he could not tell; but he looked around and saw himself alone. The sheet which had covered it lay knotted together at the foot of the table; the body had disappeared.

At the end of a minute or two his senses returned, and he indignantly conjectured that his fellow students had been playing some trick upon him. He gloried in the reputation of being a "brick," and determined not to let them have the satisfaction of seeing that he had been greatly disturbed.—Accordingly, he picked up and folded the sheet very carefully, swung himself to a seat on the dissecting table, and there sat swinging his feet and trying to whistle, in the confidence that the author of the plot to frighten him, was somewhere about watching his movements.

Finding that the attempt at whistling only exposed his shortness of breath, the student pulled from his pocket the evening paper, and by the rather dim gaslight, well turned down, perused column after column, with great apparent interest; but in fact, foreign items and affairs about home, fatal accidents and political gammon, were mixed together in his mind in one chaotic jumble. Only the strongest of wills could have helped him through that strange three-quarters of an hour. In spite of all efforts to absorb his attention, he could not help thinking, and reason was strongly opposed to the belief he was clinging to so tenaciously—namely, that the two students engaged with him, and who alone knew of the body, were at the bottom of this mysterious affair.

The clock at the upper end of the long hall gave warning to strike. The hour was up, thank Heaven! But with a forced yawn he drew his heel upon the table and rested his clasped hands on the top of his head, with easy indolent air. All was painfully still; the last pedestrian had hurried past, and only the drip of rain on the sidewalk told of earth and human existence.

Slight footsteps along the passage. Two pairs of approaching feet. They were coming—his two companions; what would the next five minutes reveal? He sat fixedly still, determined on carrying out his appearance of nonchalance, but watching the door with breathless intentness.

There was a sound as of the falling of a heavy body. Some confusion succeeded. Then the door was burst open, and one of the friends who had left the room an hour before appeared, exclaiming, with excited looks, though in a subdued voice:

"Knox, are you there? Turn on the gas, for heaven's sake. In the name of all that's wonderful, what have you been about? Why have you taken the subject from the table and put it here? I stumbled against it in the dark, knocking it down, and nearly falling my length after it."

"You play it well," commented Knox, shuffling towards the door.

"Play!" reiterated the third student, "if this is a farce, I may say I don't see the point."

"Neither do I, returned Knox, in a similar tone, "and I have been studying it for an hour. One thing though let me assure you—try that trick on me the second time, and you shall never leave the table till you know what a post mortem feels like. I'll take care to finish you at the first thrust."

In genuine astonishment they protested ignorance, and inquired what he meant. In the end Knox was forced to believe them; he related what had happened, and they joined him in looking for a key to the mystery. The suggestion that one of the other students, having got wind of what was on the tapis, had thought to play off a practical joke on them by substituting himself for the dead body, was started, but dismissed when, upon examination of the door to the street, which Knox could not positively remember to have fastened, it was found locked on the inside. The room was searched, so were the passages, every closet and nook, but nothing discovered.

"Come now," said one, "we've fooled long enough; let's take the body back to the table and begin. We ought to have left it here so long; Mike has a pass key and when it suits him comes and goes his way—perhaps not at this time of night, though."

Mike was an Irishman who had charge of the fires in the building—a clever, staid specimen, either above or below the suspicion of a joke.

Knox, setting down his light on the floor of the passage, was about to assist in returning the body to the table, when, in stooping over it, a gash on the shoulder, where his knife had struck, caught his eye, and transfixed him for a moment beyond the power of motion.

"Call me coward or fool—what you please," he said, at length, straightening himself and receding a pace, "but I will never help to dissect that body. I would give five dollars if it were back in its grave."

"And I another five," said the student on his right.

"I know who will do the job for that money," said the third student, "and can have him here in fifteen minutes. Only if any of the boys have trifled with us, and should find out we are scared, we shall never hear the last of it."

"I care not a farthing for that," returned Knox, who was too sure that they three alone of the students had had anything to do in the matter. "Here is my five, and so I wash my hands of this transaction."

He made search for his knife, but it was never found, either then or subsequently.

Knox forbore particular inquiries, appearing to dread any allusion to the painfully mysterious affair; but it was understood by him that the body was decently re-interred the same night; the person who undertook the business being told simply that they had made a mistake in their subject, and that there was danger the robbery of the grave might be detected, and themselves exposed.

The two engaged with Knox set themselves shrewdly to the task of discovering whether any of the other students were any way responsible for what had occurred; and the result was, they were forced to the conclusion that all were totally exempt from suspicion.

The three kept their secret; but the accident so wrought upon the mind of Knox, that he abandoned his profession, and, subsequently studying for the ministry, was ordained, and became eminent among New York divines.

Ten years after, the mysterious occurrence, the reverend gentleman was travelling in the West, and held a "five o'clock meeting," at a schoolhouse in a new and sparsely populated district. When the service closed, it was about sunset, and he had two miles to walk to the place where he was staying—most of the way through woods and alone.

It was early summer, the evening was fine, and he was proceeding on his way absorbed in cheerful meditations, when out from the dusky roadside sprang a man perfectly nude, and grasping a keen bladed knife; and for a full minute the two stood face to face motionless and in utter silence. The first thought of the clergyman was, that this was some insane person; the next instant brought back to him like very reality the scene in the dissecting room. Exactly thus had the corpse, leaping off the table, stood before him, holding the knife wet with blood. He even descried, in gazing now upon it, a dark rusted spot upon the gleaming blade, corresponding with the memory of yore.

Being he could recover himself sufficiently to speak, the apparition darted to the opposite side of the road, when Mr. Knox, stepping quickly after it as it was about to disappear among the bushes, said, in a tone of mild entreaty:

"My friend, whoever you are, will you not speak to me?"

The other, looking over his shoulder, replied by tossing the knife at the minister's feet, and was out of sight in an instant. Mr. Knox picked up the knife and went on. He was scarcely surprised upon examining it in his chamber by the light of a lamp, to find his own initials cut in the handle, proving it to be the identical knife with which he was operating at the dissecting table, and which was snatched from his hand by the revivified subject.

He determined not to leave the neighborhood without a thorough effort to develope the mystery so long a burden on his mind. Without revealing any of the circumstances, he made what inquiries he might, and visited in his professional capacity every family within a circuit of miles. Thus a week was spent with no success, and he was about feeling compelled, very reluctantly, to give over the experiment, when after having called one day at the home of a comfortable farmer, and spoken fitting words to a tidy woman and three well mannered children, he went out to see the husband and father, who, he was informed, was in the field at no great distance, hoeing.

The man started at seeing him, dropped his hoe, and, finally turned, and met his approaching visitor, extending his hand doubtfully.

"I am glad to see you, sir," were his first words, "though, for all I know, you might have me arrested."

Being assured that the other had only the kindest motives in coming, the citizen at once gave the following interesting account:

He grew up a poor witless youth, in New York, who had never known anything but hardship and ill usage. One night, in his homeless wanderings in a wretched street, he was set upon by a couple of rowdies, who would have killed him, but for the resolute interference of a stranger. The stranger, in saving him, received a cut on the shoulder; the knife succeeded, and he died. He was only a pauper himself, and was buried accordingly.

The night succeeding the burial of the friend who had done him the only kindness he remembered ever to have received, Dick Brown slept in the cemetery. He saw, but dared make no objection, when the men and took away the body. Following stealthily, as a dog afraid of being sent back would follow his master, he reached the college without knowing where he was, and entered the dissecting room. There, from instinct, he hid himself, and there he remained all during the next day.

The preparations for dissecting the body, with the remarks of the students, first informed him what was intended. He formed the purpose of frightening them from their work and getting away with the body. With this idea he took off the few rags that he wore, and threw them down a vault; after this, finding the room vacant, and that he had free egress to the street, he snatched up the corpse and was making his way out with it, when he heard footsteps along the passage.

Finding he could not escape without being seen, and thinking the person approaching was one of the students returning for something, and that he would be gone again in a moment, Dick leaned his burden in a nook, and to prevent the discovery of his scheme, stretched himself on the table covered with the sheet.—

What followed has been already told. Poor Dick was so frightened, that he thought only of obtaining the knife for self-defiance, or of running for his life. He made his escape, but the corpse of his friend he was after all unable to rescue. "From the door being found locked on the inside a little afterwards, it is probable that Mike, the fireman, came in by that way and secured it.

Not long after, the miserable youth floated West on the tide of emigration, and in the course of years became what we have seen—a sober, industrious citizen. Harmless in his life, and kindly in his feeling, he still could never forgive the sacrilegious young doctors who had robbed his friend's grave. The knife he had always kept; and as oft as he looked upon it, an angry, vengeful spirit stirred within his breast.

Being present at the meeting, Dick recognized the clergyman at a glance, even, as the latter entered. Stepping out of the house, he returned home, prepared himself and met the other as described—though with what object in view was not distinctly known to himself. If he cherished the purpose of doing him a personal injury, he was completely disarmed by him. After a little reflection, he secretly repented of both the act and the bitterness of feeling so long indulged. At hearing the minister's side of the story Mr. Brown was much moved, and asked renewedly his forgiveness and his prayers.

Thus, at last, was the mystery cleared up.

24. Can we know all the blessings which are to be connected with Christ's favor to our families?
25. Point out the evidences that this blessing was a miracle.

Give liberally. It's a beautiful way of taking the air. You breathe more freely after every such exercise of giving. Don't do it by spasms, but as a regular thing. Your prayers are better for giving. You can't send arrow that will pierce the skies, if your right hand is employed in grasping your purse. "Give without grudging."

Home-Made Wines.

These manufactures are a great hobby with many amiable housewives and the commotion the brewing excites the household, exceeds that of any other domestic operation. Many attempts in this department are perfect failures. It is amusing to notice the variety of articles from which the "home made" are produced. They comprise almost every fruit, flower or root that is grown. We have the green and ripe gooseberrys, red and white currant, elderberry, quince, cherry, mulberry, sloe, Orleans plum, blackberry, straw berry, barberry, raspberry, Pride of rose, cowslip, beetroot, parsnip, turnip, and many others. The most extraordinary productions of the kind we ever met with or heard of, we have yet to mention. A very worthy old lady prided herself upon her manufacures of these wines, candidly confessing, however, that she never tasted them herself, as they disagreed with her. She was fond of making experiments upon her materials, and on one occasion brought a dark inky-looking liquid forward which we were informed was a new discovery. We prudently were satisfied with its appearance and smell, in which decomposition had evidently been going on at a rapid rate; but afriend was to polite to decline, and imbibed a portion of a glassfull, and, but for assistance of a medical man soon after he left the house, he would probably died from the effects of the poison. We asked what we supposed the wine was made from. We pleaded ignorance, but speculated upon mushrooms. The old lady however, informed us it was real Hock, for she had made it from Holly Hocks!

A Little Child.

The counting-room of a well known merchantile house in London was entered by a gentleman, just as some unfavorable intelligence had been received. The head of the firm, with his hard but honest features, looked at once stern and anxious. A small hand twicled his coat behind him, and he turned slowly and met the most savage brow. His eye fell upon the prettiest little human face that ever gleamed upon the earth. But the child's merry laughter was scarcely more delightful than the bland and radient smile that that kindled on the merchant's carewon cheek. His aspect underwent such an instantaneous and entire change, that he looked as if he had changed his nature also. Had a painter stamped his portrait on the canvas at that happy moment, it would have presented an exquisite illustration of amenity and love. Few, however, if his mercantile friends, would of recognized in that portrait the man of business. He was single and childless; but the fondest parent could not have greeted his own offspring with a sweeter welcome than he gave that little child in the counting room.

Dueling.

This reprehensible mode of settling disputs, once so extensively practised, and now, hapily, all but extinct, arose from the impression that, in single combat, Providence would not fail to declare itself in favor of the incent, and cause him to be victorious over his adversary. The custom is supposed to have been brought into Italy towards the end of the fifth century. In a short time it spread through Europe, and was very generally resorted to as a mode of settling disputes. It was introduced into England by William, the Conqueror, and in course of time became regularly recognized by the various governments, and elevated into a species of public trial. When the enlitened state of Europe while no longer admit of this superstitious method of judicature, and the established power of the Crown enabled it to administer the laws with impartiality, the custom of private duelling was introduced, under pretence of its being the only means of avenging such injuries of a personal nature as could not be regularly noticed in a court of law.

A Courtly Pun.

One day, Sir Isaac Heard was with George II, it was announced that his magesty's horse was ready for hunting. "Sir Isaac" said the king, "are you a judge of horses?" "In my younger days I was a deal among them, please your majesty." "What do you think of this, then?" said the king, who was preparing to mount his favorite; and without waiting for an answer added, "We call it 'Perfection.'" "A most appropriate name," replied Sir Isaac, bowing as his majesty reached the saddle, "for he wants the best of characters."

The Tecumseh Herald.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 26, 1865

Less than four months ago, the rebel Confederacy presented the appearance of territorial compactness, its northern frontier from the Atlantic to the western border of Missouri protected from invasion by formidable military defence. That compactness has since been effectually broken, and now the Confederacy is divided into three distinct departments, so detached from each other that, instead of giving mutual support, they are sources of increasing weakness to the rebellion. The first department lies west of the Mississippi river, the second between the Mississippi and the Savannah, the third extends thence westward to Knoxville and northward to the Richmond peninsula. In the trans-Mississippi department the war seems to have been terminated by the overwhelming defeat inflicted upon Gen. Price in his last invasion of Missouri—a defeat which sent his columns broken and diminished to the border of Texas. The Mississippi river is patrolled by our gunboats, and west of it are the remains of General Hood's army struggling for breath after the terrible rout from Nashville. Hood, alone, offers protection to the large district embracing the States of Mississippi, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida, now confronted by the victorious and well-organized army of General Thomas, whose present base is the Tennessee river. Hood has about twenty-five thousand men and between twenty and thirty pieces of artillery. The Mobile and Ohio railway, his only line of retreat by rail, through Mississippi, has been torn up by General Grierson from Corinth to Okolona nearly a hundred miles; and his situation will require him to spend the remaining season in Northern Alabama. Gen. Thomas, we apprehend, contemplates moving southward, and, before two months elapse, his army will enter Mobile. The movement of Sherman will be repeated, nor will encounter more formidable resistance. The army of Hood, cut off from supplies, and incapacitated for successful battle, is thus comparatively [illegible]

The third, or eastern district, presents no better ground of hope for the Confederacy. Gen. Sherman moving northward from Savannah through the Carolinas will shortly co-operate with General Grant in assaulting the rebel capital, now sorely pressed by Grant and Sheridan. The gloomy spirit of the Richmond papers, disclosing desperate expedients, is ample evidence of the fears entertained by both leaders and people of the perils so imminent around them. They feel the encircling and deadly deathly pressure of the Federal forces. We would not be surprised at a sudden surrender at Richmond. The Confederacy is broken into fragments. There may be additional fighting—desperate fighting—but the skillful combinations of Grant, carried out by his subordinates, Sherman and Thomas, will effectually destroy the remaining military organizations of the South.

The decisive progress of recent events, reducing the rebellion to its present straitened condition, demonstrates the importance of having our armies under the guidance of one controlling mind, directed to the achievement of a definite aim. The military field has been supervised from East to West by the penetrating and comprehensive mind of Grant, and all movements have been instigated by his genius, while their execution, in detail, has been entrusted to the energy and wisdom of his subordinates. To this fact we may chiefly ascribe our series of brilliant victories. The rebels, impressed with the results, are urging upon their own Government the same plan of operations. Hence the arguments now being made by the Richmond editors in favor of Gen. Lee as the Generalissimo of the entire rebel armies. They urge that Lee shall be placed in supreme command. They are growing wiser from experience. Lee is a great captain, and, if made military dictator of the South, the war will doubtless be waged more earnestly and ostentatiously, if not more successfully than in the past.

☞ We anticipated nothing satisfactory or definite from Mr. Blair's trip to Richmond. In common, however, with loyal men throughout the country, we hoped that something might be done to facilitate the cause of peace and Union without further bloodshed. It appears from despatches published since his return, to Washington that Mr. Blair went to Richmond on private business chiefly, and that all he said to the authorities there, relating to terms of peace was uttered upon his own responsibility. He is said to have conveyed a letter from Jeff. Davis to President Lincoln, which refers to peace, but its contents have not transpired to the public.

Though the military power of the rebellion seems rapidly decaying under the great achievements of our arms, we believe the authorities at Richmond are not yet ready for peace. The hearts of the Southern people doubtless yearn for the blessing, but their leaders will struggle on with desperate determination until the army of Gen. Lee, now the embodiment of the rebellion, shall have been defeated and disorganized. The sudden fall of Willmington, the only port of entrance for blockade runners that emained to the Confederacy, will produce a lasting effect, deepening the conviction, which the insurgents so largely share, that inevitable overthrow awaits the rebellion. The capture of Richmond must follow, and then we may look for peace. It remains for the loyal people to unite their energies in support of the Government and press on in the struggle, trusting to the gallant armies of Grant and Sherman and Thomas for the return of peace and the blessings of a re-established Union.

☞ When our armys capture a rebel stronghold, the editors at Richmond habitually console their readers by arguing that the place sustained no important relation to the military power of the Confederacy. The argument was applied to Nashville, Memphis, Vicksburg, New Orleans, and, more recently, to Savannah. Although vast importance has heretofore been attached to the port of Willmington, through which the Confederacy received foreign clothing, breadstuffs, and munitions of war, yet we anticipate from the Richmond Examiner, and the Enquirer, a lengthy dissertation upon the relative importance of Willmington to the Confederate cause. The immense loss, however, is so palpable, that a mind deluded by the worst vagaries of secessionism cannot fail to see it. The capture of Willmington is a terrific blow to the rebellion, and at Richmond the heart of Jefferson Davis is low and sad to-day.

Let the nation rejoice as the pillars of rebellion crumble before our invincible army and navy. The whole fabric is destined to early ruin. Willmington fallen, Richmond will come next. The combinations of Grant have thus far been crowned with wonderful success, and we look with confidence to the assault which must soon be made upon the rebel capital. The capture of Richmond will be followed, we believe, by overtures for peace.

From Fort Fisher

FORT FISHER, Jan. 17.—The total losses during the siege are not yet definitely known, they will not probably exceed 400, exclusive of those buried and killed on Monday morning by the explosion of the magazine. The lowest estimate by this terrible catastrophe is 200 killed and wounded; some estimates place it at twice that number. In the charges many suffered out of all proportion to the number engaged, owing to their being exposed on the sea beach directly in front of the only gun which remained to the enemy, on the north-east salient of the work. The enemy's present position, Gen. Hoke, commanding the forces at Willmington, has advanced his line in our front, and on Sunday while operations were going on at the front, he made demonstrations intended as a diversion. Gen. Paine, whose pickets were attacked and driven, subsequently rallied his men, and re-established his line

The explosion of the magazine was caused by the carelessness of our men, who were indiscreet enough to go in with lighted cigars and lighted candles while inside. They were cautioned, but paid no heed. The total losses during the fight will not exceed 400, and those by the explosion about 100; 100 more must be added for the Navy. Col Alden, of the 169th New York, was mortally wounded by the explosion of the magazine, and since died.

Peace Speculations.

The N. Y. Herald's Washington special of the 23d has various rumors concerning Blair's visit to Richmond. One is that Blair brought autograph letters from Jeff. Davis to President Lincoln, saying he was ready to treat for peace, and that a communication from Lincoln has been taken back to Richmond expressing a willingness to send or receive commissioners. A significant article appears in the Richmond Enquirer of the 19th which says, after every manly effort they may fail, and policy and interest would incline them to submit to the United States rather than to England, France or Maximilian. And joining their military forces, they could then sweep this continent, and thus hide their shame, while America will become the collosal power of the world. On the other hand some Richmond editors in view of the fact that they have lost all of the sea ports of consequence, make great efforts to prove these disasters a blessing, and they say war is now their sole business. Conscription must be vigorously enforced and every one that can must fight.

The News

Monday, January 23.

It is reported on the authority of a deserter, that Wilmington has been evacuated. The rebels set fire to a large amount of cotton, but our troops prevented its destruction.

Fifteen thousand dollars of the new postal currency of the denomination of three cents, will be issued by the Treasury Department today. About half the above quantity will be issued daily for several days immediately following.

It is announced that Gen Lee is preparing for another invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania. This is said to be the last blow for the cause.

There are a few more reports from Wilmington this morning, both from Union and rebel sources, but they are not important. The rebels fear that the Federals are marching on the city. Admiral Porter has sent in his report of the navy losses at Fort Fisher, which are larger than was at first stated, amounting to over 300.

The rebel Senate have passed resolutions which will make Gen. Lee commander in-chief and reinstate Johnson in Hood's command.

There is some rebel intelligence, also, from Gen. Sherman, but a portion of it is no later than has before been received, and the rest is as indefinite as rebel trepidation could well make it. All expect, however, that Charleston is his destination.

Another rumor is that Mr. Blair has gone back to Richmond with authority from President Lincoln to give conduct to rebel commissioners of peace to come to Washington, has come from Philadelphia, the most questionable source of all rumers.

The armies of the Potomac indulged in some cannon firing on Thursday night and Friday morning, with no result, however. The rebels had bell-ringing, as if for some rejoicings.

Tuesday, January 24.

Latest accounts from Cape Fear River state that the command of Gen. Terry, believed to have been recently reinforced by Gen. Howard's Corps of Sherman's army, is moving on Wilmington. When the steamer left there was no doubt among military men that our troops would soon take Wilmington, and the fall of Charleston was hourly expected.

Our fleet off Wilmington harbor stand a chance of capturing several rich prizes in the shape of blockade runners within the next few days. It is said that in a-[illegible] tured at Wilmington, there are 12 or 15 more still due from Nassau and Bermuda, their Captains being ignorant of the situation.

Richmond papers tell the rebel Congress that the country is becoming exceedingly alarmed at their neglecting to pass an army bill. They look upon it as an indication that Congress has given up the cause, and that they think it vain to contend with an enemy so much stronger than they are.

The foreign dates have some news of interest respecting the position of Spain and the Republic of Peru. Russia has made another seizure in India, which will be disagreeable to England.

The Richmond Enquirer of the 20th says: "The reticence of the rebel War Department concerning events current in the South, indicates the fact that important movements are in progress. If Wilmington falls there will be no panic, though much sorrow for the inhabitants. The idea that there is an immense amount of cotton stored there, is one influence, to say, nothing of that port as a base, which is now alluring the invaders towards it. There is a combination in the matter which involves Charleston as well, as Sherman is on foot in the matter. If these places fall, it will be after the exhibition of much strategy, for Sherman is always at it. We hope our army is also ready, for while Sherman's feints are in fact only aiming at various places, meaning to take all, it hardly matters with him which he takes first."

The Richmond Sentinel says: "The Senate resolution creating the office of Commander-in-Chief of all the armies, has been concurred in by the House; also recommending the appointment of Gen. Joe Johnston.

WAR DEP'T, WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—To Major General Dix: The following telegram has been received by this Department from Lieut. Gen. Grant.

E. M. STANTON.

CITY POINT, Jan. 23.—Hon. E. M. Stanton: One of my staff has just returned from Fort Fisher with dispatches from Gen. Terry, from which I extract the following: "On the 16th the enemy blew up Forts Caswell and Campbell, and abandoned them and the work on Smith's Island, and those at Smithsville and Reeve's Point. These places were occupied by the navy. The whole number of guns captured amounts to 162. A large number of small arms also fell into our hands, besides quantities of ordnance and commissary stores. Our casualties prove smaller than at first reported. They foot up thus: 12 officers and 107 men killed, and 45 officers and 490 men wounded."

U. S. GRANT, Lieut. Gen.

Wednesday, January 25.

F. P. Blair, Sr., has returned from Richmond bringing with him a letter from Jeff. Davis, in which it is stated that whenever the United States would receive Commissioners from the rebel States, they would be appointed.

The Governor General of Canada has sent a message to Parliament recommending among other estimates for the current year some $30,000 in gold to make good the money improperly surrendered in the case of the St. Albans raiders, and claimed by the United States Government.

A fire broke out in Smithsonian Institute in Washington yesterday afternoon. The principle loss was the celebrated Stanley paintings, which this State were about to purchase for the University. Only some five or six were saved.

The rebs are said to have commenced preparations for the occupation of Charleston by the Federal army.

Arrivals at Cairo at New Orleans and Memphis, furnsih some latter advices from the Mississippi country, but they are not of importance.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterlinwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious Bread—the staff of life—upon the table, smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and ground or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat ground and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

WOOLSTON COMFORT.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A bottle, look, gentlemen, at the cheek, Rubicund, healthy, and full of life and vigor in all other respects to most men, fifty times the worse for the wear, and without doubt, debilitated, nervous, and in the only positive medicine which has been especially recommended from above one by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted and extensively used in the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ They are made of ingredients well known and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with the most astonishing properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Languor of Spirits, & Nervous Complaints,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced us to give the public a trial, and thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found great other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, impalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate sense, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

☞ If your druggist or tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—

☞ Remember the name, and take no other.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ The composition of Dr. Swain's Bitters, having been made public through the columns of Medical Journals, and having been adopted as a standard remedy by the Medical Profession, are by the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, EXEMPT FROM STAMP DUTY.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

The Blood Pills
are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum,—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payabl] in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum; for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

Great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 3d, 1864, amendatory of the bye laws on fire limits.

Whereas petition has been made by Messrs Shayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the bye laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Shayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street; provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high also the west wall of said wood ware house to be built of brick, sustained upon iron columns, with the entire structure covered with one roof, flat and of fire proof gravel cement, cornice of brick along brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

The First Snow.

BY MY CLARA AUGUSTA.

'Tis coming! lo! 'tis coming!
Its breath is on the hill—
The flutter of its banners
Breaks the melancholy still;
The wintry, steel-blue heavens
Drop lower o'er the earth,
And two little speckled sparrow
Has hushed her tiny mirth.

'Tis coming! lo! 'tis coming!
The first flakes softly white—
As a maiden's muslin mantle
Upon some gala night;
Clear and pure as pallent lillies,
On lakes in peaceful June;
Or the silver rain of glory,
Falling from the empress moon.

'Tis coming! lo! 'tis coming!
The silent air is filled!
The brown and yellow grasses
With its mystic touch are chilled;
My little blue-eyed Katie,
Her cheeks all rosy glows—
Comes running up the meadow path,
Crying gally—"So! it snows!"

'Tis coming! lo! 'tis coming!
The cold and solemn snow—
Falling down on hut and palace,
On revelry and woe!
God! in thy thoughtful mercy
Regard the babies poor!
And let the snow come gently down
Before each cottage door.

Deason Baxter's Adventure.

A tall man, dressed in an old-fashioned suit, viz.: a short waisted blue coat, with immense brass buttons, and continuations of the same hue, also a broad brimmed beaver which had seen better days long since, that it had forgotten all about them. Such is the accurate description, of Deacon Solomon Baxter, of Hilltown, as he walked sedately into the principal hotel in the thriving village of Ferryville, and registered his name on the hotel books.

It was nine o'clock in the evening, and the deacon always retired early, therefore he intimated his desire to be shown at once to his room.

"Certainly, sir," said the clerk, briskly. "Show this gentleman up to No. 48."

The deacon climbed two flight of stairs and was shown into a comforiable room in the third story, where for the we will leave him.

Immediately upon the deacon's exit, a personage, exhibiting a wide contrast in outward appearance, presented himself at the desk. He was dressed in the height of the fashion, wore a jaunty little hat on the side of his head, a "rakish" coat, a "stunning" waistcoat and pantaloons (excuse my mentioning the word, but it must be done) of immense circumference, cut in the most fashionable style.

"Aw—young fellah," remarked the new-comer, twirling his moustache; "I say—aw—can you give me a good room?"

"Yes, sir, directly. John!"

'Coming, sir.'

'Show this gentleman up to No. 49. Beg pardon, sir, perhaps you'd like some suppee first?"

"Aw, yes, but I'll go to my room first—aw—and make my toilet—remove the dust of travel—aw."

"Your name, sir?"

'Aw, yes, I had forgotten. What a deuced bad pen."

The name inscribed on the books below that of Deacon Solomon Baxter, was Charles Howard Fitz Howard.

'Ain't he a swell, though?' uttered the clerk a little enviously, for he too would like to have been a swell had circumstances permitted.

In the course of time, Charles Howard Fitz Howard descended, ate his supper, after smoking his cigar, retired to bed.

"I wonder who that fellah is, snoring in the next room,' he thought. 'I'll knock and he may take the hint.'

But the deacon was too fast asleep for that—and he continued to make night vocal.

About two o'clock in the morning there were suddenly heard loud cries of "fire" in the street outside. The whole inn was disturbed. Sleepers sprang from their beds, and rushed into the entry, supposing the hotel to be on fire. Ascertaining on inquiry, that it was only a small outbuilding of no particular value, they returned to their rooms to resume their interrupted slumbers.

Among those who sprang out of bed were the occupants of No. 48 and No. 49. By a not unnatural mistake, there being no light on their return, they exchanged beds, the deacon going into 49, and Charles Howard Fitz Howard into No. 48. The internal arrangements of the rooms were precisely alike, so that even if there had been a light, neither would probably have detected the error.

Both parties were soon fast asleep, and slept soundly till morning.

The deacon was the first to wake. He roused himself with a yawn.

'I must be getting up,' thought he. 'The convention meets at nine, and I shall not have much more than time to eat my breakfast.'

So thinking, the deacon looked around for his clothes. There they were, hanging on a chair beside the bed. But good gracious! What a change. The deacon rubbed his eyes. Instead of the time-honored blue coat and nether garments, there were garments of the latest and most fashionable style. And to crown all, his own clothes had disappeared.

"Well, that beats all," thought the wondering deacon. 'I declare, I never heard of such a thing in my born days.'

Suddenly a luminous idea flashed upon the mind of the perplexed deacon. Some of his friends in Ferryville, prompted by kindness, had bought him a new suit, and secretly effected this change, knowing that he would be in attendance at the convention.'

'I'm afraid they're too gay for me, thought Deacon Baxter apprehensively. 'I wonder if they fit me? It won't do any harm to try them on!'

Another wonder—they fitted completely! By a singular coincidence the deacon and his next neighbor were exactly of a size.

That settled the deacon's doubts—they were unquestionably made for him.

He put on the waistcoat, and then the coat. Then he stood before the glass.

'It is said that dress makes the man, and certainly it made a wonderful metamorphosis in the deacon. He had come into the hotel an old-fashioned man of sedate appearance. Now he looked fifteen years younger, and quite a stylish gentleman. To be sure the suit did look rather young.

We all of us have our share of vanity. The sedate old deacon was not without his.

'Really,' he murmured, 'it improves me amazingly—makes me look a good deal younger. The cloth seems good too. Must have cost a good deal. Really, my friends have been very kind; yet I could have wished for a different hat."

Truth to tell, the jaunty little hat did not look at all appropriate to the deacon's fifty years.

'Perhaps I can exchange it,' he tho't. 'At any rate I must wear it to-day.' The deacon descended to breakfast, and had there not been such a crowd the metamorphosis might have been noticed; but, being convention week, the servants of the hotel had too much to do to notice individual guests. So the deacon got quietly through breakfast, and went out into the street.

Who should he see approaching him but worthy Deacon Jones, of the church in Ferryville. He advanced to meet him warmly, cordially exclaiming.

'How do you do, Deacon Jones?'

'Really, sir,' said the deacon distinctly, 'you have the advantage of me.'

'What! don't you recognize me? You have known me for twenty years. I am Deacon Solomon Baxter, of Hilltown.'

'Why, bless my soul, so you are. But good gracious, deacon, what possessed you to dress in this strange style?'

'Strange!'

'Yes,' said Deacon Jones sternly. 'I consider it discreditable to a man of your years and sobriety and position in the church—I didn't think you'd be running after the vanities of this world.'

'But,' said Deacon Baxter uncomfortably, 'it isn't my doings.'

'Isn't your doings! Then whose is it? I don't understand you. Surely, Mrs. Baxter can't have—'

'She doesn't know anything about it.'

'No, I should think not.'

'If you won't be in such a hurry, Deacon Jones,' said Deacon Baxter, a little vexed, 'I'll explain it all.'

Thereupon he explained the matter as he understood it.

Deacon Jones shook his head.

'It's a strange story,' he said; and privately considered whether it was not possible that Deacon Baxter had become suddenly insane.'

At this moment there was a new arrival upon the scene.

Mrs. Baxter had stopped with a friend at a village six miles distant, and was to come over to the convention in the morning.

When from the old-fashioned chaise in which she rode, she perceived her transformed husband, she could hardly believe her eyes. Her first emotion was surprise—her second indignation.

"I should like to know, Deacon Baxter," she called out sharply, "what has put it into your head to dress in this ridiculous style—a man going on sixty!"

"I'm only fifty-two," interposed the deacon.

"And you dress as if you were twenty two. You refuse me a new silk dress, and then go and squander your money on this folish rig. I should think you had gone stark, staring mad."

"Stop, Priscilla!" said the deacon getting red in the face, for several of his friends were now within hearing. "I'll explain it all.'

He gave the same explanation as before.

'Fiddlestick!' was Mrs. Baxter's contemptuous comment. 'You don't expect me to believe that ridiculous story. I'm really afraid you've forgotten yourself and taken to drinking. Nothing else could have brought you to make such a fool of yourself.'

'Mrs. Baxter,' said the deacon hotly, 'I command you to be silent. It's you that are making a fool of yourself, I'd have you to know. It is enough for you to think of you own dress, ma'am and not interfere with mine.'

Mrs. Baxter burst into a flood of tears, and wrung her hands piteously.

'O, Soloman!' she exclaimed; 'is this the way you speak to me who've been a faithfull wife to you for more than thirty years?'

The sympathy of the bystanders was evidently with the lady, and the deacon beheld only cold averted glances from those he had reckoned his friends.

At this moment there was a diversion.

Charles Howard Fitz Howard burst through the crowd, arrayed the deacon's old fashioned garments, and made a dive for that gentleman's collar.

'So you're a thief—aw—you rascal—aw—you—aw—what—aw—mean?' exclaimed Deacon Jones and others hastily.

'It means—aw—that this fellah has run off with my clothes—hundred dollar suit, gentlemen, and left—aw—this worthless rubbish. Help—police—aw—where's the police?'

'O, Deacon Baxter!' exclaimed his wife indignantly, 'have you brought disgrace upon your incocent wife and family by this strange conduct?'

'O, deacon!' exclaimed Deacon Jones in a tone of horror.

'Hear me!' exclaimed Deacon Baxter—'there's some strange mistake.'

There was a scene of confusion; the police appeared, and were about to take charge of the ill-fated deacon, when the landlord and clerk appeared, and the mistake was finally made clear. Both parties ajourned the hotel, and a transfer of garments took place. Deacon Baxter was himself again, and Charles Howard Fitz Howard cut a more stylish figure than he done in the deacons blue suit. I don't think think the loudest cry of "fire" will ever induce the deacon to leave his room in a hotel again.

A Practical Joke.

A Cincinnati merchant and his wife—fond of practical jokes—recently made a wager by which the one who should first be sold by the other, was to submit to a penalty imposed by the triumphant party. For some days both were equally vigilant, and every attempt at a joke failed. One evening, as the couple were about to attend a party, the lady complained of indisposition, and the husband went out to procure a carriage. While he was gone a negro wench of the wife's size and height was bundled up in her cloak and furs, and when the carriage came took her place beside the husband, with a thick veil drawn over her face. On reaching his destination he led his supposed wife into the house amid the other guests, when lifting the veil discovered the 'sell.' The next day the discomfited husband submitted to the penalty and wheeled a barrel of flour throug several of the prncible streets to his own door.

☞ Some years ago there was a bill introduced in the Georgia Legislature to lay a tax of ten dollars a year on all jackasses. Some appreciative member proposed to amend it so as to include lawyers and doctors. The amendment was accepted, and, amidst much jocularity, the bill was passed. Several efforts have been made to repeal it, but in vain, and to this day all jackasses, lawyers and doctors are are obliged to pay a yearly tax of ten dollars.

A Litter of them.

It is not many years since a simple-minded, unsophisticated young man, born and raised in an interior district of Kentucky, yielded to his 'manifest destiny' and took unto himself a companion for life—in other words he married.

suit followed; and one day at meridian, just as our hero had returned from his morning labors in the field, and, divested of his hat and coat, was preparing for a cooling application of water to his heated face and hands, a pair of female arms were suddenly thrown around his neck—nearly strangling him in the act—whilst the cracked voice of his old grandmother informed him that he was a 'father.' A loud whoop and various extravagant cavortings and jumps evinced young Manny's joy at the announcement. Just then another pair of arms seized him—those of his mother—and the ominous words 'another boy,' were whispered in his ear. 'Twins!' exclaimed our lord of creation, suddenly sobering down. 'Yes, twins!' 'By golly, that's coming it rather strong the first time!' exclaimed the father, becoming more and more serious and hanging out on his countenance, signs of incipient alarm.

Here the door of the mysterious chamber again opened; a burly female form rushed out; another pair of fat, red female arms was extended—the whole mighty mass of flesh came rolling towards the 'head of the family.' He drew back, doubt and fear pointed on his features. The human avalanche—it was that awful personage, the nurse—cornered our hero, despite his desperate efforts to get free, and folding him in a bear like hug, cried out in an exultant tone: 'Another boy!'

'Another!' exclaimed the Kentuckian, his eyes starting out of their sockets, his lower jaw dropping and the drops of perspiration, rolling down his pale face: 'Another! By golly, that'll be a whole litter of 'em! Good bye, folks, I'm off from this!'

And at the word he sprang over the piazza railing, hatless, coatless, dinnerless and unwashed, and the next moment was seen going through the corn field at a 'quarter liest' pace, his long yellow hair streaming in the wind, and every muscle and nerve evidently strained to the uttermost to put 'tracks' between him and his new enimies.—The last seen of him he was bounding into the woods, like a young deer with the hounds close at his heels.

It is a fact—a fixed one, too—that the three boys have grown up to manhood and are comfortly settled in life; but they never have seen or heard since, of the man who run away from a litter of babies.

A CHRISTMAS LEGEND.—In the year 1012, on Christmas eve, a party of young people were dancing and singing in a church yard, to the great annoyance of one Robert, a priest. The more he protested the more they danced, until in his agony he fell to praying that as they would not cease dancing, they might dance without ceasing. His prayer was granted, and without intermission they danced one year till the earth wore away under them, and they sank in the middle still dancing. A brother of one of the girls in attempting to get her out pulled off her arm, but the lost not one step of the dance. At the end of the year Bishop Herbert came and gave the party absolution. Some died, while others after sleeping three days and nights went abroad to proclaim the miracle.

☞ A Lady of rank informed Buffon that she knew a blackbird who looked at the barometer every morning, and would not go out if it pointed to wet. An anecdote told by a German naturalist is no less wonderful, he declares he saw a beaver weeping over the crown of an old hat. Soon another beaver approached it, she cried more piteously than the first; then a number of young beavers, attracted by their sobs, came running up and they also cried. The hat being made of beaver, the recognized in it the fur of one of their own kindred. Was the hat to them the sad remains of an affectionate brother or son?

☞ That was a beautiful expression of Clarke's, as quoted by Sindey Smith: 'The frost is God's plough which He drives through every inch of ground in the world, opening each clod and pulverizing the whole.'

☞ The pitying tears and fond smiles of women are like the showers and sunshine of spring.

New York, Feb. 1.—The Tribune has a special from Washington to-night, which says Mr. Singleton, of Illinois, returned yesterday from Richmond. He had free intercourse with the rebel authorities, and saw Gen. Lee. He speaks freely his impression that there will be no peace. There can be none unless the rebels are granted their idea of independence or we abandon ours re union. The rebel leaders are entirely sanguine of their ability to conquer their independence without arming the slaves.

New York, Feb. 1.—The steamer Sawn Nada from Savannah and Hilton Head the 29th has arrived. Among her passengers are Major Gen. Legget and Brig. Gen McCollum. On the evening of the 27th a disastrous conflagration occurred at Savannah, destroying considerable property, but without lossoflife or cotton.

On the morning of the 28th another fire broke out destroying two squares in the third district. The buildings were torn down to prevent the spread of the flames, as the wind was blowing strong from the east. Some fiend had placed a keg of powder on the side of the Arsenal, corner of York and Walker streets, undoubtedly to blow up the city, as the Arsenal contained some thirty tons of powder. The keg was placed in the shadow of a tree to prevent discovery, with the top taken off. This hellish design is attributed to the rebels who are in anything but an amicable mood in view of their present condition.

From Rebel Papers.

New York, Jan. 30.—The Richmond Sentinel says among the most mischievous in purpose or dangerous in character of the factious proportions of the present time, are calls for State Conventions which are being made in several quarters. No occasion can be more unpropitious for obtaining a fair exp ession of the wisdom and will of the people. The major part of the courage, worth, intelligence, and patriotism of the country is in the army. The duties of citizens thus engaged are such as would prevent them from taking an appropriate part in the organizations or discussions of the Convention. The scheme for calling a Convention is pacticably a scheme for disfranchising those virtuous and brave men, and placing the great sovereign authority of the States in the hands of a portion of the people and of a portion at least to be trusted with its exercise. The convention movement is a conspiracy of disloyal demagogues to fetter the Confederacy. We doubt not Lincoln's heel would be placed on our neck in less than a week. These convention callers have no object in view with which loyal men can sympathise, and our good citizens will scarcely deem it wise to furnish conspirators with opportunities for mischief.

The Enquirer is very severe upon the discussion of retaliatory measures in the United States Senate. It styles the Senate an assemblage of demagogues. It attempts to fix the South by insisting on the impossibility of reconstruction, and closes by saying every submissionist, reunionist, re-constructionist and every man who would make peace on any other terms than our liberty, forgets that rebellion to tyranny is obedience to God, forgets his duty to his fellow-man, his country and his God, and is already a mean, cowardly slave. All separate State action is out of the question. These men not only forget their duty but they betray their sister States. The missions of Mr. Blair warn us to stand firmly together, to exert every energy for war, and war only; to close up the ranks, to stand shoulder to shoulder, and when peace on any terms comes, to accept it, and, until it comes on our terms, to continue the fight as long as we have cartridges.

The Dispatch says submission is possible though not probable.

Fortress Monroe, Jan. 30.—Lieut. General Grant arrived here to-day from Fort Fisher in the gunboat Phode Island. The hospital steamer Tonawanda also arrived to-day from Fort Fisher with 150 rebel wounded. There is no news of importance.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Rolls, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken for stock of farmers and others, for their grind, and packed or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

Woolston Comfort.

The most popular Monthly in the world.—New York Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellence of Harper's Magazine—a journal of a monthly circulation of about 110,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American people; and the popularity it has acquired is merited. Each number contains fully 144 pages of reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good wood cuts; and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature.—Trubner's Guide to American Literature, London.

man will make him a donation visit at his residence in South Macon on Thursday, Feb. 9th, afternoon and evening. All are invited to attend.

☞ We would advise our lady friends who contemplate doing braiding of any kind, to first call at Mrs. McCoy's Emporium of Fashion, and see the new style she has of stamping with indelible Ink. It is far prettier than any braiding.

☞ We understand that N. Burroughs has found the buggy which was stolen from H. Packard's Livery Stable, in Indiana, where the thief had traded it for a cutter. Hank is still after the thief and horse.

☞ A horrible murder was committed in Woodstock on last Tuesday night. David Bivens murdered his father, mother and wife, and set fire to the house. We learn with pleasure that Doctor Peters, late of Palmyra, has taken up his residence in Tecumseh, and that the community may enjoy the benefit of his practice. He is a gentleman of good standing in the medical profession, an experienced practitioner, and of substantial moral character. We wish him success in his effort to establish a business in our vicinity. His office is at his residence, next house south of the new Baptist Church, on Union Street.

Notice.

All persons having unsettled accounts with the late Wm. Baldwin deceased are, hereby notified that J. S. Strong, executor, on said estate, can be found at the office of E. B. Wood during business hours, ready to settle all accounts.

Sale of Real Estate.

Our old friend, John Davenport, wishing to change his residence, (having sold his old home, the Davenport Lake House) —now proposes to sell all of his real estate. Any person wishing to purchase property of any kind, would do well to call on him. He offers for sale the following:

100 acres of fine timbered land, lying near Franklin Centre;

One Water Saw Mill and 25 acres of land, lying in Franklin Centre;

80 acres well improved land, 6 miles west of Clinton, on Chicago road;

80 acres, 5 miles west of Clinton, half-mile north, in Manchester;

120 acres, timbered land, at Davenport Lake;

The brick house and four acres of land now occupied by J. Stitts, in the village of Tecumseh;

House and Lot on Pottawatamie street, known as the Mrs. Bissell's house.

Any person wishing to purchase any part, or all, of the above land would do well to call on Davenport, at his residence, in the village of Tecumseh—as he offers some rare inducements on hand some very pretty goods in Mink, —Muff, Collars, and Cuffs,—and any one who wants a set of these goods for next winter, will do well to buy them now, as he is selling Mink goods at less prices than he can buy them at Wholesale, of the manufacturer. His stock of Dry Goods is as fully assorted as any other in the county, at this season of the year. If you want any thing in the Dry Goods line, look first at Moore's. New line of Dress Buttons just received. Also a handsome article in Ladies' Belt Buckles.

Assignment of Quotas.

Below we give the actual quotas of the several towns and wards in this county, as assigned by the Military commandant under the last call for troops. It must be borne in mind that these figures are the quotas, after deducting all credited up to the 31st of Debember, 1864. Enlistments since that period have been very few; in fact 10 credits will cover the whole number of enlistments during that time. The draft is ordered to take place on the 15th of the present month, in order to avert which we shall have to be "up and doing:"

☞ A Hood has just received from N. Y. another splendid lot of Cassimeres, Flannels, Ladies' Cloth, &c, which he is offering at as low figures as any other establishment in the county. He has a good assortment of Clothing furnishing goods, hats and caps, etc., on hand, which he proposes to sell at reduced prices, for the next sixty days, in order to make room for his Spring Stock. We have had repeated application to make and stitch Cloaks, but have not been prepared to do so until now. We are now prepared to make all kinds of Cloaks of the latest styles, on short notice. As I intend to make Cloak-making a branch of my business in the future, I shall soon have rooms prepared for that special purpose. I have on hand paper patterns for cloaks of all kinds, and for boys' clothing of every style. Please call and examine goods and prices.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tonic, gentle Cathartic and regulating medicine. Recommended by the profession, as being composed of the best medicinal properties of all other Bitters in more than fifty Eastern Cities, being Alterative, and possessing properties which has been especially conceded to them, strongly by the United States government, as the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ They are made of ingredients well known and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, and possessing all powers with pulmonic, diaphoretic properties combining properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirit, Bilious Complaints.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

FOR

Headache, Costiveness, and Kindred Maladies,

by these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, as the thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found fault with other "Stomach Bitters" for bitter, unpalatable qualities, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

☞ If your druggist or tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—

☞ Remember the name, and take no other,

BLOOD PURIFIER

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

for curing

Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

T IMPROVEMENT

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superseding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They use a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stitch alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking years or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a lifetime and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using Weed's Patent Thread Controller. There is no other apparatus for the control of the "Slack Thread" equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum,—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1 000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so many inducements to the investor as those offered by the Government. Bond or other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, on separate communities only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and Designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National Banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

Love and the Rose.

BY J. ALFORD.

When you to love compared a rose,
Did you not forget 'twould die?
Or think 'twould in the breast repose
And never cause a sigh?

Its beauties, truly I admire,
But beauties soon decay;
Too quickly fades away;

I fain would share that love with you,
O'er which time has no power;
Not like the rose's transient hue,
The everlasting flower!

For, though the rose I much admire,
Its beauties soon decay
Like love which oft our bosoms fire,
Then quickly fades away.

Flight of a Criminal.

In the country, last year (1796,) says Madame du Montier, I was in company with a good friar, eighty years of age, from which I had the following story:

About forty years ago he was sent for in a highwayman to prepare him for death. The magistrates shut him up in a small chapel with the malefactor, and while he was making every effort to excite him to repentance, he perceived the man was absorbed in thought, and hardly attended to his discourse. My dear friend, said he, do you reflect that in a few hours you must appear before your Almighty judge; what can divert your attention from an affair of such importance? The father, returned the malfactor, but I cannot divest myself an idea that you have it in your power to save my life. How can I possibly effect that, rejoined the friar, and even supposing I could, should I venture to do it, and thereby give you an opportunity of accumulatikg your crime? If that be all that prevents you, replied the malefactor, you may rely on my word; I have beheld the rack too near, again to expose my self to its torture. The friar yielded to the impulse of compassion, and it only remained to contrive the means of escape. The chapel, [illegible] was lighted by one small window near the top, fifteen feet from the ground. You have only, said the criminal, to set your chair on the altar, which we can remove to the foot of the wall, and if you will get upon it, I can reach the top by the help of your shoulders. The friar consented to this manœuver, and having replaced the altar, which was portable, he seated himself quietly in his chair. About three hours after, the officer and the executioner, who began to grow impatient, knocked at the door, and asked the friar what was become of the criminal. He must have been an angel, replied he, coolly, for by the faith of a priest, he went out through that window. The executioner, who found himself a loser by this account, inquired if he was laughing at him, and ran to inform the judges. They repaired to the chapel where our good man was sitting, who, pointing to the window, assured them upon his conscience, that the malefactor flew out of it; and that, supposing him an angel, he was going to recommend himself to his protection; that moreover, if he was a criminal, which he could not suspect, after what he had seen, he was not obliged to be his guardian. The magistrates could not preserve their gravity at this good man's sang froid, and after wishing a pleasant journey to the culprit, went away. Twenty years after, this friar, travelling over the Ardennes, lost his way, just as the day was closing; a kind of peasant accosted him, and after examining him very attentively, asked him whither he was going, and told him the road he was travelling was a very dangerous one; if you will follow me, he added, I will conduct you to a farm at no great distance, where you may pass the night in safety. The friar was much embarrassed; the curiosity visible in the man's countenance excited his suspicion, but considering if he had a bad design towards him, it was impossible to escape, he followed him with trembling steps. His fear was not of long duration, for he perceived the farm which the peasant had mentioned, and as they entered, the man who was the proprietor of it, told his wife to kill a capon, with some of the finest chickens in the poultry yard, and to welcome his guest with the best cheer. While supper was preparing, the countryman re-entered, followed by eight children, whom he thus addressed: My children, pour forth your grateful thanks, to this good friar; had it not been for him, you would not have been here, nor I either; he saved my life. The friar instantly recollected the features of the speaker, and recognized the thief whose escape he had favored. The whole family loaded him with caresses and kindness; and when he was alone with the man, he inquired how he came to be so well provided for. I kept my word with you, said the thief, and resolving to lead a good life in future, I begged my way hither, which is my native country, and engaged in the service of the master of this farm: gaining his favor by my zeal and attachment to his interests, he gave me his only daughter in marriage. God has blessed my endeavors; I have amassed a little wealth, and I beg you will dispose of me and all that belongs to me; I shall now die content, since I have seen and am able to testify my gratitude to my deliverer. The friar told him he was well repaid for the service he had rendered him, by the use to which he devoted the life he had preserved. He would not accept of anything as a recompense, but could not refuse to stay some days with the countryman, who treated him like a prince. This man then obliged him to make use at least of one of his horses, to finish his journey, and never quitted him till he had traversed the dangerous roads that abound in those mountainous parts of the country.

The Earl and Farmer.

A farmer once called on the late Earl Fitzwilliam, to represent that his crop of wheat had been seriously injured in a field adjoining a certain wood, where his lordship's hounds had during the winter frequently met to hunt. He stated that the young wheat had been so cut up and destroyed that in some parts he could not hope for any produce.

'Well, my friend,' said his lordship, 'I know that we have done considerable injury; and if you can produce an estimate of the loss you have sustained I will repay you.' The farmer replied, that anticipating his lordship's consideration and kindness, he had requested a friend to assist him in estimating the damage, and they thought as the crop seemed quite destroyed, fifty pounds would not more than repay him. The earl immediately gave him the money. As the harvest, however, approached, the wheat grew, and in those parts of the field which were most trampled, the wheat was strongest and most luxuriant. The farmer went again to his lordship and being introduced said, 'I come, my lord, respecting the field of wheat adjoining such a wood.' His lordship immediately recollected the circumstances. 'Well, my friend, did I not allow you sufficient to remunerate your loss?' 'Yes, my lord, I find that I have sustained no loss at all, for where the horses had most cut up the land, the crop is the most promising, and I have, therefore, brought the fifty pounds back again.' 'Ah!' exclaimed the venerable earl, 'this is what I like; this is as it should be between man and man.' He then entered into conversation with the farmer, asking him some questions about his family, how many children he had, etc. His lordship then went into another room, and on returning presented the farmer with a check of one hundred pounds, saying, 'take care of this, and when your eldest son is of age, present it to him, and tell him the occasion which produced it.' We know not which to admire the most, the benevolence or the wisdom displayed by this illustrious man; or while doing a noble act of generosity he was handing down a lesson of integrity to another generation.

The three women cried in chorus; 'The Punishment of a Woman? It is her husband.'

For the Tecumseh Herald.

A Scene—Number 1.

It was late Saturday night. The Saloon keeper, in the village of Tecumseh, had done a round business in the way of sales. The week's work footed up well. It was beer that he sold first, until the fired appetite called for something strong. poured out until the poor inebriate could not pay for any more. Saturday had brought in all his customers from the country around. They had been dosed—their money and character and brains were gone—and they, too, gone. That little rickety, heated room was at last emptied. Never mind about the staggering inebriate, tramping his zig zag way to a home from full of sorrow. Mr. Saloon-keeper sat down by the stove to silence the little monitor within. 'I am only selling beer. True, when it is called for, I must furnish a little whiskey, brandy et cetera. But, well—oh dear me—I wish.' Here he was interrupted. A little old bible, living on a shelf close up in one corner of the room, stood upright, shook the long accumulated dust from its back, and opening wide its blessed pages, stared him full in the face, when the following colloquy took place.

Rum Seller. But how am I to support my family?

Bible. Let him that stole steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good. Ephesians iv:28.

Rum Seller. Am not stealing—only providing for my family.

Bible. Woe unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness and his chambers by wrong! Jeremiah xxii:13.

Rum Seller. Is it unrighteous to sell intoxicating drinks?

Bible. Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink—that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also. Habakkuk ii:15.

Rum Seller. But no body knows what I am doing. Don't you see those curtains?

Bible. He that covereth his sins shall not prosper. Prov. xxviii:13.

Rum Seller. May I not do what others do? Many others are selling.

Bible. Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil. Exodus xxiii:2. Though hand join in hand the wicked shall not be unpunished. Prov. xi:21.

Rum Seller. But who can find out what I am doing?

Bible. Be sure your SIN will find you out.

Rum Seller. What can I do when men want me to furnish it?

Bible. If sinners entice thee consent thou not. Prov. i:10.

Rum Seller. You do not suppose the people in Tecumseh know what is done behind these curtains.

Bible. Nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid which shall not come abroad. Luke viii:17.

Rum Seller. What do people think of me?

Bible. He that is of a perverse heart shall be despised. Prov. xii:8. For he is such a son of Belial that a man can not speak to him. I Samuel xxv:17.

Rum Seller. What right have you to speak so of me, when you don't know me?

Bible. By their fruits ye shall know them. Matt. vii:20.

Rum Seller. What fruits have my life borne in this village?

Bible. Ye have caused many to stumble at the law. Malachi ii:8. Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? Who hath babbling? Who hath wounds without a cause? They that tarry long at the wine. They that go [to your saloon] to seek mixed wine. Proverbs xxviii:29, 30.

Rum Seller. Why do the people wish to enforce the law against me?

Bible. When the scorner is punished the simple is made wise. Prov. xxi:11.

Rum Seller. If I want help to whom of my neighbors must I go?

Bible. Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, but shall not be heard. Prov. xxi:13.

Rum Seller. Ought the people to put us saloon-keepers on the chain gang?

Bible. Let them make a noise like a dog, and go round about the city. Let them wander up and down for meat. Psalms lix:14, 15.

Rum Seller. If I die here in Tecumseh who will mourn for me?

Bible. They shall not lament for him, saying, "Ah, my brother." Jeremiah xxii:18.

Rum Seller. How shall I be buried?

Bible. He shall be buried with the burial of an Ass, drawn and cast beyond the gates of Jerusalem. Jeremiah xxii:19.

Rum Seller. God be merciful to me a sinner. What shall I do?

Bible. He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall find mercy. Prov. xxviii:13.

And the precious book that had plead the cause of the poor lay down again quietly upon the shelf. Rum Seller groaned, arose from his seat by the stove, went out at the door, scarcely able to turn the key on the curses piled up in his shop. Slowly he walked towards the place that sheltered his innocent wife and children, muttering as he went—"The way of transgressors is hard."

An Odd Hen.

A hen in farm-steading of Mr. Douglas, of Kirkaldy, a few lately took up her abode with a young pig, and layed an egg every morning, which grumphy as regularly made his breakfast of. The hen, after sitting the usual period, walked out with the pig, (she having, as she seemed to assume, hatched him,) and she now goes about, cluck, clucking, with her four-footed brood, and feeds him in the usual way a hen does her chickens. He lies at night with his head under her wing, (being two or three times as large as herself,) and if any person attempts to touch him, she flies at them furiously. Sometimes, when going about the door with her, he takes it into his head to have a dance, when she seems a little astonished, and runs backwards and forwards after him, trying to check his daffing; but in vain, until it suits himself. He proves a most unruly and ungrateful fellow; for, notwithstanding all her care and attention, he goes off and leaves her sometimes, at which she appears to be very uneasy.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 9, 1865.

The Woodstock Murder.

We copy from the Hudson Gazette the following particulars of the Woodstock murder, also the confession of the murderer:

Our community was startled on Wed- [illegible] cold-blooded and unnatural crimes, perpetrated on Tuesday night, in the adjoining town of Woodstock—the murder (by her husband, and their only son) of Mrs. D. P. Bivins, and Mr. Benj. Bivins and wife—the house afterwards being fired and burned to the ground, nearly consuming the bodies of the murdered persons. From Messrs. J. H. Binns and S. C. Knowles, who were in town on Wednesday evening, on business connected with the funeral, we learn some particulars with regard to this terrible affair.

Mr. B. was a farmer, and lived about a mile and a half [illegible] the village of Addison. The [illegible] this horrible crime was an [illegible] About a year and a half ago [illegible] located in the 4th Cavalry, but it is said he deserted, and has never been in the service. A short time before enlisting he was married, his wife residing since with the old people. It is said that he has been in the habit of visiting his home clandestinely at times since he deserted. The greater portion of the time, however, his whereabouts has been a secret to his friends. On Monday night, Jan. 30, it appears, he returned home and spent the night with his wife and parents. On Tuesday he left, representing to some of his relatives that he was going to be gone for a week or two, when he intended to return home to remain. Tuesday night Mr. Bivins went to sit up with a neighbor, Freeman Smith, living about one fourth of a mile off. About 1 o'clock his wife came after him. She called him out upon the steps, where a brief parley took place, when they both started for home at a rapid pace. But little was thought of the matter at the time, but it is now supposed that young Bivins was there at home, and that he had made threats or perhaps actually commenced his devilish work. In about an hour afterwards, a Mrs. McDonnell, living in Smith's family, discovered Bivins's house on fire. The alarm spread, and the neighbors collected, but the fire had obtained such headway that it was found impossible to stay it. Search was made for the inmates, no trace of them could be found, until the sides of the building had fallen, when their half-consumed, crisped, and charred forms were discovered lying upon the floor, which, soon giving away, precipitated them into the cellar along with the ruins and debris of the burning building. As soon as possible the remains were rescued from the flames. Those of the two women were more than half consumed; the heads, arms and legs being burned entirely off. Young Bivins' wife was near confinement, and the remains of the unborn babe were exposed to view. The body of the man was not so badly burned. A hole was discovered in his skull, and on examination a bullet was found in his head. A search was then made about the premises, when a buffalo robe was found in the stable, marked "A. J. Johnson, Hudson." (Mr. J. formerly kept the livery stable in this village.)

In the morning, Mr. Felix Wilcox, of Rollin, came to Hudson and made inquiries at the livery stable of Mr. L. W. Green, where he learned the following facts: On returning from Addison on Tuesday, young Bivins applied at his (Green's) livery stable for a horse and saddle to go to Addison that night. On being told that he could not be accommodated with the same, he engaged a horse and light buggy, giving directions to have it in readiness on the arrival of the accommodation train from the east, about 7 o'clock, P. M. In the afternoon he went east on the 2.02 train, returning on the accommodation train. He came and got the horse and buggy and went off, returning about one o'clock in the night. He remained in the office at the livery stable half an hour, when he started for the depot, saying he was going east, as it has since been ascertained he did.

As no carriage tracks could be found about the premises, it is probable that he secreted the carriage somewhere in the woods on his way out, and rode the horse. Coming away in a hurry, or in a state of alarm, he forgot the buffalo robe. Ah! that was God's finger pointing him out. Poor fool! did he think to do this hellish work and hide the deed from God and man? Even while we write, an electric bolt surrounds him, and the officers of the offended law, and friends of outraged humanity, are upon his bloody track.

The ages of Mr. and Mrs. Bivins, the parents of the murderer, were respectively about 56 and 53 years. His wife's age was about 20. She was the daughter of Thos. Brownell, of Rollin, and was his (Bivins') second wife. Young Bivins, as we have stated, was an only child. We learn that he has always been a wild, wicked and reckless boy, causing his parents a great deal of trouble and expense. It is stated that he recently demanded an amount of money from his father, which he refused to give, intimating to him that he must look out for himself in the future. It is supposed that revenge, and a desire to get possession of a large amount of a large amount of money which was in the house, prompted him to the perpetration of this great crime, which it seems to us, has no parallel in the criminal history of our country.

Accustomed, as we have become since the war began, to tales of human butchery and suffering, there is something about a crime like that which we record that fills us with new horror and alarm. And strong men, and tender women, and listening age, alike instinctively shudder when the dark hours come, to think such human fiends tread the earth.

LATER.

THE MURDERER ARRESTED—HE CONFESSES HIS HORRID CRIMES.

Bivins was arrested at Grafton, O., on Wednesday, by Mr. Wilcox, of Rollin, and Deputy Sheriff Johnson, of Adrian. Mr. W. was looking over the crowd at the depot to see if he was there, when Bivins came up and accosted him, at the same time extending his hand. Mr. W. grasped his hand and with his other hand collared him, telling him he was arrested as a deserter. With the assistance of Sheriff Johnson he was ironed hand and foot. On being told that his father's house was burned down, and his father, mother and wife all dead, he affected surprise, and exclaimed, "Who murdered them? who murdered them?" On the way to Toledo he confessed the whole crime to the officers. On being transferred to the Southern Michigan train at Toledo, considerable curiosity was manifested by the passengers to know what he had done. Observing this, he coolly arose from from his seat and made a public confession, which is enough to curdle the blood in human veins. He said that he was 23 years old, the only son of respectable and too indulgent parents. They had given him a good education, and endeavored to gratify his every youthful wish. At the age of 18 he married his first wife. In a little over a year she died. Within seven months he married again, and had fondly loved his wife. He enlisted in the army and became a deserter. In the course of his wanderings, he met a young lady at Grafton, Ohio, of whom he became enamored. He proposed and was accepted, and they were to have been married in two or three weeks. Her father was wealthy, and he had promised to take him into business with him. All he wanted now was money, and he got rid of his wife. As his father had refused to give him more, he resolved to put him and his mother and wife out of the way,—he would then be a single man, and the only heir to $8,000 or $10,000. With this determination, he returned home on Friday (last week,) for his wife was away from home, or his courage failed him, and he came away. He went back again on Monday, (as we have before stated.) His wife greeted him so cordially his purpose again forsook him, and he says he knelt and prayed with his wife, and resolved within himself to give up the infernal scheme. But in coming to Hudson on Tuesday, he changed his mind again, and concluded to return home, under cover of night, and execute his hell-bred design. He hired the horse and buggy, as we have related, and (as we surmised) left it, when within two or three miles of home, and rode the horse the balance of the way. He arrived at the house about ten o'clock. His father being absent, he requested his mother to go after him, which she did. His father and mother both having returned, the three took seats near one and other around the stove, Bivins' wife lying upon a sofa in another part of the room. There was no light in the room, save what was emitted through the grates of the stove. After conversing a few moments, he suddenly drew his revolver, placed it near his father's head, and fired. He fell over—dead. He immediately shot his mother in the same manner. His wife sprang from the couch, imploring him to spare her. He attepted to kill her at once. The cap did not explode. She attempted to get hold of the weapon—a scuffle ensued—he grasped her around the waist—kissed her—fired, and she fell at his feet! He then applied the torch, and fled.

Sherman on Subjugation.

A letter from Savannah says:

Speaking of subjugation, General Sherman has a very terse way of meeting this difficulty. To proud a lady, who said to him, "General, you may conquer, but you cant subjugate us," he instantly replied, "I don't want to subjugate you, if you don't stop this rebellion." To another, who wanted wanted to know of him how long the war would last, he said, "Well, well," in his rapid earnest manner, "I don't know; perhaps 6 or 8 years and then 20 or 25 years of gurrilla warfare; long enough enough to destroy this whole generation, and then we'll begin anew." In this way he dashes their arrogance, right and left, to the winds, and they leave his presence utterly confounded, adn, at least, with due respect to the Yankee General.

☞ A Mrs. Mary Patterson, living near Thornevill, Lapeer county, recently murdered her illegimate child by piercing its skull with a bread knife. She was arrested, but before she could have a chaude to defend herself before an earthly tribunal, God summoned her to answer for her crime before a higher Judge, who knoweth the hearts of all men.

Tuesday, Feb. 7.

By rebel papers we are informed of the movements of Sherman in South Carolina and Georgia. On the 1st inst. a portion of his army had an encounter with rebel cavalry at Whippy Swamp, 30 miles northwest of Pocalligo, in which they acknowledge a defeat.

We have an authentic report of the evacuation by the people of Mobile and the removal of all stores guns, etc., to Selma, Ala. A sweeping conscription is also being effected there at the same time, and a general desire, on the part of citizens, is manifested to get out of its reach.

The Committee on the Conduct of the War made a report relative to the failure of the attack on the enemy's line before Petersburg by exploding a mine. The report attributes the cause of the failure of the attack to Gen. Meade in interfering with plans already prepared by General Burnside, after the latter had perfected his plans and was confident of a speedy success.

The Missouri Senate yesterday ratified the Constitutional amendment by a vote of 25 to 5.

A dispatch from General Kelly announces a sharp skirmish between a cavalry scout of Gen. Sheridan's and Harry Gilmore's band of maranders, in which the latter were defeated and Gilmore captured.

A large fire commenced about 3 o'clock this morning in the Coal Oil Works on Ninth and Federal streets, Philadelphia. About fifty buildings have been consumed, occupying two squares on both sides of Ninth street, besides a few on Federal and Washington Streets. Men, women and children were roasted alive. The streets were at time flooded with snow, water and oil. The oil ran along the street in full blaze, setting fire to the lower portions of dwellings, and preventing the escape of the inmates. Four children are said to have perished in one house.

Wednesday, Feb. 9.

The Potomac Army is again in motion. On the 5th inst. the whole army received marching orders, but to what point is not known. Indications point, however, toward the Danville Railroad, which it would appear General Grant is anxious to sever, that rebel supplies may be cut off from Richmond and Petersburg. The Danville road is the only one now leading southward that the rebels hold. This in possession of the Union commander would tend to more distract the rebels than the loss of a great battle. It is said a great [illegible] within a day or two.

Numerous arrests of recruiting officers, mustering officers, substitute brokers, internal revenue assessors, and others connected with the enlisting business in New York, were made yesterday.

The fortification bill which passed the House of Representatives yesterday, appropriates about $5,000,000. Among the fortifications named, is Fort Wayne, below Detroit. The army appropriation bill as passed by the House, appropriates about $500,000,000.

On the afternoon of the 6th inst., the 5th corps with the army of the Potomac, had a severe engagement which resulted in great loss not only to the corps, but to the rebels as well. Our troops lost a good position from the fact they got out of ammunition, the wagons containing it failing to come up in time. The position lost amounts to but little, and it is believed it may be regained at almost any time. All other attacks subsequently were repulsed with great loss to the enemy. Several Union officers were wounded, among them Brig. Gen. (late Colonel) Morrow.

The Secretary of War has been directed to exempt no person in future.

BALTIMOR, Feb. 7.—Henry S. Foote, of the rebel Congres, reached here this morning from Washington in charge of Maj. F. O. Newall, and shortly after left for the North, it is supposed, on his way to Ft. Warren.

AUGUSTA, ME., Feb. 7.—The Maine Legislature to-day ratified the constitutional amendment abolishing slavery, and a salute of 100 guns was fired in honor of the event.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 7.—Both Houses of the Missouri Legislature ratified the amendment to the Federal Constitution, with but two dissenting voices in the senate and four in the House.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The Herald's Washington special it is stated that the number of rebel prisoner desiring to take the oath of allegiance, has greatly increased within the past few weeks. During January over 1,000 took the oath at Point Lookout alone, and were released.

WASHINGTON, Feb 8.—The two Houses of Congress in the Hall of the House of Representatives this noon, and the Vice President opened the certificates, of election of President and Vice President of the United States. Mr. Lincoln was declared elected President, and Mr. Johnston, Vice President. The Senate then returned to its chamber, when the House adjourned.

The Poor.

The poor have hard times just now. The pinching of poverty effects them first severely, while the cold is so intense, work not so plenty, and a big pile of money daily required to keep up the supply of wood and provisions, which cost more than ever before. Poor women dependent on their own exertions, the widows of soldiers, the wives of those long in the service, with children to depend upon them are the chief sufferers. All are generally willing to work to the extent of their ability, and when it can be obtained, and in no instance ask for more than temporary assistance to eke out their earnings. A little wood, a little tea or meat or a few groceries are all that they ask for.

Some weeks their earnings are sufficient to meet their expenses, then a week or two will be dull, but this makes no difference, there are the same number of little mouths to feed the same demand for the actual necessities of life. Some families, too, knew nothing of poverty until the husband or father enlisted. And every one knows that the wages of private soldiers have been sufficient to furnish even half the support of a family in these times. So the poor should be held in particular memory at the present time, and truly deserving assisted to lengthen out their resources until spring comes again.

The Lady's Friend.

We think we have seldom seen a more touching beautiful engraving than that which embelishes the February numger of this magazine. It is called "The prisoner's child," and is a story in itself.—The girls gace is all of indescribable sadness and as she feeds the birds outside the prison bars, we long to speak some words of pity and comfort to her. The Double Steel fashion Plate for this month is a very handsome one, both in design and execution; the contrast between the colors is especially fine. The other fashions and engraving of fancy-work are as usual varied and well executed. The music for this year is the "Linden Hall Polka." The Literary contents are "The Cooper Shop Story," showing how one of the New England ladies in the olden times, before "Women's Rights" were invented, acted in the spirit of leap year, (a true story by the way); "A Story of a Household," by Mrs. Hosmer; "Better Than Chesnuts," an amusing tale by Frances Lee; "Nearly Lost," by Laura J. Rittenhouse; "Francis Haley," by Clara Augusta; "Hopeful Ray," by Minnie W. Moy; "Not Much of a Martyr after All," by F. H. Stauffer; "Going Home," by Ida Mason; Curious Styles of Head Dresses in the last Centuro, Editor's Department, &c., &c.

Price $2.50; 2 copies $4.00; 9 copies $16.00; 21 copies $35.00. Specimine numbers will be sent to those desirous of making up clubs for 15 cts. Wheeler & Wilson's celebrated Sewing Machines [illegible] Address Deacon & Peterson, 319 Walnut street Philadelphia.

THE NAME RED JACKET.

Everywhere the name Red Jacket is seen and spoken of. There being many people who do not know its meaning, we propose to enlighten them.

Messrs. Bennett Pieters & Co. of Chicago have for many years manufactured a Stomach bitters, which has had its origin with the Indians. The chief of the Six Nations the celebrated noble and generous Red Jacket, as a parting gift, bequathed the formula of these bitters to Dr. Chapin; by Dr. Chapin, it was handed down to Messrs. Bennett Pieters & Co., who named the Bitters after the celebrated chief. Dr. Chapin, by the addition of a few herbs, and by using a fine old ripe Bourbon whiskey, instead of the common spirit the Indians used, has brought the bitters to their present perfection. They are now very agreeable and healthy stimulant, plesent to the taste, have a soothing influence, and create a good appetite. We notice that druggests generally sell ne Bitters so rapidly as these.

Peace, Peace.

If you want to cure that corn that has troubled you so long and given you no peace, you will find a box of corn plaster that will cure it—"sure thing"—at the Drug Store of P. N. Curtis.

☞ Wanted immediately at G. T. Ketchams ten tons of paper rags, for which the highest market price will be paid.

If you will call on Dr. Curtis and get a bottle of his Cough Mixture. It will cure that cough. Don't wait too long.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved our Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to Bonding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in [illegible]

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour, when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

☞ We publish the following rare inducements, for the benefit of a few of our citizens who are deeply interested with anything that contains oil:

ANTIPODAL PETROLEUM COMPANY.—Capital stock $1,000,000,000. Shares par value $10,000 each, price 25 cts.—The well is bored entirely through the earth, extending from Oil Creek, Pensylvania, to Hoang Ho, in the Celestial Empire, and has constantly a double outlet. An immense blowpipe will be inserted in the Chinese outlet, to promote an unbroken flow of oil from the western well, which is supposed will be equal to one hundred barrels of refined Petroleum per minute.

Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Society.

The Soldiers Aid Society having some time since discontinued their Socials, owing to the meagre attendance thereat, have since that time had no method for raising money. At the time of the discontinuance of the Socials, there was a small balance of money on hand, which has been expended, and the Society are now entirely destitute of means. The Young People of this place have therefore organized a society for the purpose of giving an entertainment consisting of Dialogues, Tableaux, Grations, Music, etc., to be given some evening week after next. The funds are to be appropriated for the use of the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Society. The time and place of the entertainment will be announced by posters in a few days.

DR. ROBACK'S
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the testimonials of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or 6 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

These Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by them was gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure remedy in the use of these Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache.
They are perfectly pure and palatable.

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits. The Red Jacket Bitters are only sold in bottles with our name blown on the side, and our private government stamp across the cork.

For Medicinal and Table use, which are perfectly pure, and need only be tried to be appreciated. None genuine unless they have our signature on each bottle, and our initials pressed in wax over the cork.

Sold by all druggists and dealers throughout the country. Call for our goods and take no other.

ROVEMENT

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superseding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Strong, Simple Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stitch alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a lifetime and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Blind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the Slack Thread equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum.—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges, as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent U S stocks was over twenty per cent. It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent per annum, according to the rate of taxation in

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, of stock companies, or separate communities, only is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK of Detroit, Mich., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 3d, 1864, amendatory of the bye laws on fire limits

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs Slayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the bye laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street; provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high, also the west wall of said wood-house to be built of brick, sustained upon iron columns with the entire structure covered with one roof, flat and of fire proof gravel cement, cornice of brick along brick walls

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

The Cottage and the Mill.

BY S. W. HAZELTINE.

Have you seen the cottage and the old gray mill,
That stand at the foot of a rock ribbed hill?
Did you notice the gleaming towering high,
On the banks of a river that murmurs by?
And did you not see the garden bower?
Did not the scene chain you with magic power?
'Tis my childhood's home, and I'll love that spot,
Till the time shall come when my heart beats not.

'Tis there I have strayed in the hours of morn;
'Tis there I have roamed when the day was gone;
'Tis there I have chased in my childish glee,
For butterflies over the hill and lea.
Or sought for the fruit of the wayside hedge,
Or pebbles along on the water's edge;
And dear, yes, dear, till my blood is still,
Must be that cottage and old gray mill.

'Tis there I was wont in my youth to rejoice
At a mother's smile, or a father's voice;
But alas! even there death came one day,
And bore my father and mother away;
And the tear gushed forth from their fount. ain deep,
As I laid them down to their last long sleep.
Years have passed since then, but I'm weeping still,
When I think of that cottage and old gray mill.

WINN'S BLUNDER.

Inexperienced travellers are so often "taken in and done for," and the record of their misfortunes made public, that Vivian Winn, a young man of twenty-two, thought himself fully competent to elude the wiles of any sharper who might beset him on the journey he was about to undertake from his home to Chicago. To be sure, Vivian had never travelled much, but then he had the warning advice of his of his more experienced uncle and for the rest—he depended on his own shrewdness. He was going to the great metropolis of the West to take a stool at the desk of his brother-in-law's banking house, and so, elated with his bright prospects for the future, he gaily bid adieu to the few friends who were at the station to see him off, and entered a crowded car. All the seats were full, except one, which was occupied by a solitary young lady.

Vivian walked slowly down the jolting car, and pausing before the unoccupied seat, bashfully inquired if he might sit there. With ready acquiescence, the accommodating maiden gathered up her skirts, and made room for him. Disencumbering himself of his overcoat, our hero proceeded to sit down, pulled out a newspaper, and engaged himself to the contents thereof, while his compagnie de voyage continued the perusal of a book in paper covers, in which she seemed deeply engaged.

Vivian's eyes fell upon an article relating how a poor fellow had become enamored of a beautiful maiden with whom he became acquainted on a railroad train, and how, on landing at his destination, he found himself minus his pocket-book and its contents—some six hundred dollars. He laughed to himself, over the simplicity of the dupe, and folding up his paper, turned his attention to the person at his side.

Heavens! what a beauty! A thrill of uncontrollable interest ran through him as he beheld those large, dark, dreamy eyes, the waving tresses, and that fair, clear countenance. She seemed greatly interested in the volume before her, and gave him a good opportunity of studying her features. At length, becoming aware of his steady gaze, the fair unknown suddenly closed her novel, and turned those large eyes upon him. Vivian, blushing at his deification in staring on a lady, excused his rudeness by inquiring if she was not a certain Miss Smith, and if she did not reside at such a place.

No, her name was not Smith, nor did she live at B.

"Ah! Indeed! Really, you must pardon me for the resemblance is very striking."

His conduct was excusable.

"Then you are not acquainted any at B——?"

No; but her brother had friends there.

"Your brother is not with you?"

"I am on my way to meet him. Do you come from B.?"

"I do, madam, and am going to meet my brother."

"Yes? Quite a coincidence!"

"Remarkable! My brother is a banker at Chicago."

That looked suspicious. Vivian began to think that this was a little too much of a coincidence to be natural—in fact, a vision of the lost pocket-book, with its six hundred dollars, began to loom up with painful distinctness, and to cause an itching to put his hand in his pocket, and feel that his own wallet was safe; but a moment's reflection satisfied him of the foolishness of any such fear. Another glance at the beautiful face so near his own made him ashamed for having ever harbored such an idea as that this lovely being could be capable of theft!

She a pick-pocket! Never! So irritated did he become at the thought of his laxness toward the fair creature, that he was on the point of showing her the article that had raised his suspicion, and then confessing his crime and begging forgiveness, when the young lady once more resumed her reading, and became indifferent alike to him and his fate.

Perhaps she had an inkling of his thoughts! He blushed at the idea. What a fool he had been, after beginning an acquaintance that was likely to prove so couleur de rose during the tedious ride, to forfeit her regard by such wickedness!

Perhaps she imagined that he was a rogue, and had trumped up the coincidence in order to get into her good graces! Jupiter! should that be the case—

"Thirty minutes for supper!" shouted by the brakeman, together with the name of the station, put an end to his cogitations, and her reading.

"Will you go to the table?" inquired Vivian, rising.

"No, thank you; but if you will be so kind, you may bring me some refreshment," and she confidingly put her purse in his hand.

Then she didn't think him a rogue—no, she must have felt his own suspicions and, kind, forgiving soul, took this method of punishing him!

With a mixture of misery and happiness, he thrust the tiny purse into a pocket, and rushed into the crowd of hungry mortals standing round the tables, and eating away as if for dear life. Having procured the best that the house afforded, he handed them through the window to its fair charge, and then paced the platform, too agitated to eat anything himself. A plump, white hand beckoned him.

"Can you get me a cup of tea, please?"

O, yes, he could get her twenty!

One would do, and she had it in a twinkling. Then the bell rang, the whistle blowed—"All aboard!" and the train was again jogging along.

As the car was now not more than half full, Vivian debated with himself, as he walked towards the seat, whether or no he was not bound in politeness to sit elsewhere. The lady solved the knotty point for him by again making room, and looking an invitation to take his old seat, which we may be pretty certain he did.

"Of course you lost my purse in the crowd!"

An electric battery couldn't have produced a greater shock.

"Upon my word," (recovering), "I never thought of it from the moment you handed it to me till now. Lose it? No; I never lose anything," said he, returning the article.

"You have not taken out the pay for my supper," she said.

"Nor shall I; it was pay enough to see you enjoying the meal."

Some observing soul has told the world that young ladies lose their charms when eating, and this one was evidently familiar with the old maxim, for she smiled in a knowing manner at the intended compliment, and merely replying:

"I have flatterers," was proceeding to re-open her novel—it being yet light enough to read—when Vivian made a bold dash, and inquired the name of the book.

It was Dickens' 'Little Dorrit,' and the mention of that admired author led to an interesting discussion of writers and their works, followed by discussions on other subjects, and a general drawing out of each other's opinions and characters. Thus it happened, that when Old Sol had gone to rest, and night had fairly come, they were so much interested in the conversation, and the cars made so much more noise than before (!) it became necessary to put their heads quite close together, and Vivian even presumed so far, or forgot himself, as to place his arm over the back of the seat, with a hand resting lightly on his companion's shoulder!

The cars and their tongues rattled on together, but finally the former got the best of it, and a gradual silence seemed to settle over all the passengers. On, on sped the puffing engine; drowsy grew the weary travellers; close and closer did Vivian get to his sleepy charge, and at last, laying aside her bonnet, she gave herself up to Morpheus, and leaned her tired head against our hero's manly breast.

Whew! How they did go!

"Singing through the forest,
Rattling over ridges,
Shooting under arches,
Rumbling over bridges,
Whizzing through the mountains,
Buzzing o'er the vale,
Bless me! this is pleasant,
Riding on a rail."

Vivian—ah, Vivian! That would have been the pleasantest ride of all thy life, had it not been for those horrible suspicions for the second time! Yes, they would be heard spite of him; he couldn't ward them off.

Look at it calmly, now. Here she was feigning sleep at his side—and in such close proximity, too! Had she not enticed him to sit by her, when the car was half empty? Had she not encouraged him to become familiar? Had she not shown in a dozen ways that she was partial to his presence? Certainly she had—and he would keep his eyes open—he was not to be caught napping—not he! Thus it was that his first pleasurable emotions in his imaginary role of 'guardian angel' were turned to watchful care—not of the sleeping maiden—but of his pocket-book!

Eleven o'clock was striking on the city bells, as the cars rushed into the depot at Chicago. The stopping of the train became, as usual, the signal for a general bustle of departure, and our unknown heroine, waking up in a hurry, began, in a rather unheroic manner, to fasten on her bonnet and to the usual number of miscellaneous bundles that women will carry when travelling. Vivian had got into his overcoat, and—must it be confessed?—was examining his pockets! First, the left hand trowsers; all right. Then its compatriot on the other side; all right—but—where was that check? Sure he had put it into that pocket—'twasn't there now—perhaps in his vest—no, must be in his coat—not there either? Strange! He tries all the pockets over again, and by this time, our young lady being ready to depart, notices the search, and innocently inquires what he has lost.

"You haven't noticed a baggage check lying round loose, have you?"

"No, sir. Is that what you are looking for?"

"Yes it is, madam, and what's more, I believe you have got it!"

"Sir!"

"Oh, you needn't put on your dignity—I know you now, and if you don't give up that check quietly, I shall be so very rude as to hand you over to the police!"

The look of astonishment and horror with which she listened to these terrible words, he considered as a part of her game. Not a doubt remained in his mind but that she had taken his check, and intended to get possession of his trunk and its contents.

"Let me pass, sir!"

"So you wont give it up peacably? Very well," and Vivian followed her out of the car, through the crowd into the ladies' room. A policeman was instantly summoned, the accusation made, and a search demanded, followed by a copious flow of tears from our unprotected friend.

"Young woman," said No. X., blandly, "please produce the contents of your pocket."

The order was mechanically obeyed, and brought to light an embroidered cambric handkerchief, a watch key, a letter, and the pretty little purse, from which latter, there dropped to the floor a brass check! No. X. and Vivian both made a dive for it, and their heads came to gether in rapid collision, bringing out an oath of pretty large dimensions from the burly policeman, and forcing a growl from Vivian. The latter, however, secured the check, and holding it up to the light, exclaimed:

"2205! That's mine! March her off!"

"Now, young woman, what have you got to say—"

"Hello here! What's all this?" said somebody, coming up to the trio. "Why, Kate, my dear sister, is this you? I must have missed you in the crowd." [Imagine here an affectionate embrace.]

"O' my dear, dear brother, how fortunate that you have found me. (Sobs.) I have been shamefully insulted by that young—"

"What! Vivian Winn, is that you? Give me your hand, brother info'. What's this, Kate, about insults?"

"My brother in law's sister? Pho! Vivian gasped out that much, but we'll drop the curtain over what followed, and to cary out the cradle, the appreciative audience may eat peanuts—if their taste inclines that way—and imagine that ten years have passed since the green baize went down. It now rises on Vivian relating the foregoing incidents to a few friends, when his wife comes forward, and gently hints that he makes a fool of himself!

"You see," continues the happy fellow, not listening to the warning of his better half, "when I handed the purse back to her, after that supper, my piece's got fastened in the springe, and went with it.—But it came out all right at last—didn't it Kate? The fact is, after what had happened, I was bound to go in and Win her, and there she is!"

Irish Soldier.

During the late war in Portugal, an while the army and while the army was on its march from Almendralejo to Merida, an Irish soldier, having drank rather freely, quitted the ranks. He had scarcely done so, before he fell into a sound sleep, from which he did not wake until very late in the evening. Alone, and in an uninhabited part of the country, the poor fellow knew not whither to turn himself. He upbraided himself for his misconduct, and fancied himself already condemned by a court marshall, and the sentence ready to be carried into execution. To a village on his left he directed his steps, to see if some friendly individual would plead for him at head quarters. In this village he was informed there were two French soldiers concealed. A thought darted across his mind, that if he could get them secured, he would be able to carry them into Almeida as prisoners and thereby procure his pardon. In an instant he loaded his musket, proceeded to the house where the Frenchmen lay, disarmed them, and in two hours after marched them off in triumph. Some officers of the 71 regiment seeing a British soldier with two Frenchmen as prisoners from the opposite side of the river where, none of the allies troops were at that time quartered, asked the soldier, "What men are those you have got?" The Hibernian replied, "By St. Patrick, your honors, I cannot tell, but I believe they are Frenchmen."

TEA.—About the year 1591 the Dutch East India Company brought into Europe the dried leaves of tea shrub, and taught the method of producing an agreeable beverage by infusing them in boiling water. This seems to have been so much approved of by that of the year 1660, it became a favorable drink in coffee houses; and the government, taking advantage of this circumstance, imposed a duty of eighteen a gallon on the liquor sold in those places. At this period the price of tea is stated to have been about sixty cents per pound; and being thus dear to be bought by the general consumer in the leaf, its infusion was ordinarily purchased ready made, at so much per pint, quart, or gallon. The first importation of tea by the English East India Company was in 1669, when two ounces, weighing 143 pounds, were awarded to England by the resident merchants at Canton. About 1720, tea was generally drunk by the middle classes of society.

The Tecumseh Herald.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB 16, 1865.

The tools used in the burglary were ordinary stone-cutters' tools—chisels and mallet. Some of them were broken in opening the safe. There appears to have been no drill employed, but the hole in the safe door, where the powder was inserted, has the appearance of having been punched. The tools used in the burglary were taken from Mr. Lenhart's stone yard, his shop having been broke into to procure them. Most of the tools were marked "K. K." They together with the crow bar, were left in the office.

Around the north side of the county building, and by the treasurer's office windows, were tracks in the snow, evidently made by one of the burglars, who probably went outside the building at the time of the explosion, for the purpose of observing if it excited any notice. The track was made by a small sized boot.

Many private citizens are sufferers from this burglary, they having deposited funds there for safe keeping. Among these we hear mentioned the names of A. L. Bliss, who, it is stated, loses about $2,000 in funds, and Mr. Morton Eddy, who had deposited there about $800 in government bonds.

The amount of money stolen is roughly estimated as approximating to $20,000.

The World's Washington correspondent has intelligence confirming the report that Richmond would be evacuated under certain contingencies, and that the new military policy of the rebels was to give up all the seaboard cities almost without a struggle. He says Lee accepted the position of General-in-Chief on the written pledge that the military policy he might advocate should be carried out. This includes the plan of evacuating all ports near the Atlantic coast and concentrating the troops of the Confederacy a one or more points farther inland. The rebel armies in the Southwest are to be ordered east. The Southern forces will be concentrated into two large armies—one in Eastern Virginia under the direct command of Lee, and the other in South Carolina under Beauregard. Fire and Loss of Life.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 13.—A fire broke out at two o'clock on Sunday morning in C. F. Mitchell & Co.'s hardware store, consuming the building, with most of its contents. The fire spread to the frame building on the south side, occupied by Mr. Cleveland as a harness shop and dwelling above, and then to the Strangers' Meat Market, where the flames were arrested in that direction; on the north side of the hardware store, Armstrong Brother's leather store, Hammond's dry goods, grocery, boot and shoe and crockery stores, fronting on two streets, occupied above as a dwelling; a frame building on the corner, owned by L. McIntyre, and occupied by Mr. Critten.den as a harness shop; Tompkins' meat market, and Barnes' daguerrean gallery, where the flames were arrested, after consuming the whole corner. Mitchell & Co.'s loss on building and contents is $18,000; insured $7,500. Armstrong Bros. saved about half their stock; fully insured. Mr. Hammond's loss on the buildings is $5,000; insured for $2,500, and the insurance on his goods more than covers the loss, most of the stock being saved. McIntyre's loss is $1,500. The other parties meet with small losses, they saving the principal part of their stocks.

Five men were buried under the falling walls. J. Rancier, got out without injuries; C. Hallett, slightly bruised; H. B Armstrong severe gash across the top of his head, not serious; Wm. The charred trunk of another man, with head, arms and limbs burnt off, was identified by his knife and tobacco box found, as that of Mr. Funk, dealer in millinery goods. The fire originated from a lamp in a bedroom occupied by a clerk Hardman's store, a strong, piercing wind, freezing the engines and hose. The citizens turned out en masse and worked with a will, preventing the fire from spreading to a long row of building occupied as stores, shops and dwellings.

From Southern Papers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The Richmond Dispatch of the tenth says the railroad connection with Augusta is severed. It is an error, however, to suppose that because and point on the South Carolina Railroad is in the hands of the enemy we can no longer draw supplies from Georgia. It would be wrong to explain the matter at this time.

At the Richmond war meeting on [illegible] most furious character, informing the people the Confederacy was in danger, but could be saved by the efforts of the people. A preamble and resolutions were offered and adopted with much applause. The preamble calls the war one of conquest by the United States, and one of defense by the rebels. It denounces President Lincoln's recent proposition for peace as debasing and cruel.

The following are the resolutions:

Resolved. That the events which have occurred during the progress of the war have confirmed our original determination to strike for independence, and that with the blessing of God, we will never lay down our arms until it shall have been won.

Resolved, That as we believe our resources to be sufficient to our purpose, we do not doubt but we shall conduct the war successfully, and hereby invoke the people in the holiest of all causes, to spare neither blood nor treasure in its maintenance and support.

The third resolution thanks the soldiers for their gallantry and patriotism.

Who Shall Visit the Schools.

Some think the public servant—the editor—the man who has everybody's business as well as his own to look after. We are inclied to think that there are many men who can spend time in looking after their own children quite as well as the editor can take care of their children for them. Nor is it the duty of the district board alone to attend to the schools. Are they not the very men who have the most of business of their own to manage? Does it not often happen that the members of the school board send no children? How many of the parents, who send children to school, and who never visited the school, would permit a fine young horse to remain in the hands of a training master half the time that they allow their children to go to school without looking after them?

You train up a dog to be active and quick. You train your horse to mind to the word, and he becomes a fine specimen of horse flesh; but the children must look out for themselves, or at least be left in the hands of those whom you do not personally know. They may be good teachers and they may not. You do not inform yourself upon the subject.

Too many parents make their opinion from the opinion of the children. Just as if a child had more judgement than the parent. Who ever saw a child that was inclined to shirk from study that was not fond of an easy teacher.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may concern) that I have purchased the Flouring Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Rolls, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

Critical Notices of the Press.

It is the foremost Magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more entertaining friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

The most popular Monthly in the world.—New York Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellence of Harper's Magazine—a journal of a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. Each number contains fully 144 pages of reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good wood cuts; and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature.—Tribune's Guide to American Literature, Lowell.

WM. H. WARING.

Married,

On Thursday evening, Feb. 15th, at the residence of the bride's father by the Rev. W. P. Wastell, George F. Wastell and Minnie B., daughter of the Hon. John J., Adams, of Tecumseh.

The wedding party, including the President and Superintendent of the Southern Railroad, started this morning on a special train for Adrian, where Henry A., twin brother of the above, is to be married to Nellie, daughter of Dr. Knapp, of that place, and from where, we understand, the parties intend starting west on their wedding tour.

The Reverend gentleman officiating on the occasion is father of the young men, George and Henry.

The article handed in having reference to the celebration of the nuptials above noticed, was too late for this week. It will appear in our next.

I have just received from New York a new Fashion Plate of the latest styles for the Spring and Summer of 1865. I am now prepared to get up garments to order, on short notice, of the latest styles—and a fit warranted on every garment that we cut and make. I also have a good assortment of Broad-Cloths, Cassimeres, and Vestings on hand, which I propose to sell at the lowest figures for cash, in order to make room for new goods. I have still on hand a good assortment of Ready-Made Clothing, Hats, Caps, Flannels, etc., which I offer at reduced prices.

N. B. All those whom I have accommodated with goods on a few days' time, which has run a few weeks and in some cases a few months, I respectfully request to pay it in immediately, as I want to pay my debts. To those who expect their accounts to run to eternity and then ask for an extension, I would say that I shall decline selling on those terms. My terms in the future will be pay on delivery of the goods.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superseding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stitch alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in regulation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a lifetime and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using Weed's Patent Thread Controller. There is no other apparatus for the control of the "Slack Thread" equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines if desired so that the purchasers need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum,—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six-per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 3d, 1864, amendatory of the bye-laws on fire limits.

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs Slayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the bye laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street; provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high also the west wall of said wood ware house to be built of brick, sustained upon iron columns, with the entire structure covered with one roof, flat and of fire proof gravel cement, cornice of brick along brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

The Basket of Almonds.

A peasant had three sons, whom he kept hard at work, helping him to earn a little money. One day he sent them out into the forest, to cut faggots; but, instead of working, the two eldest played with fir-apples. When it was almost noon, and they wanted to make up for lost time, the one broke his cleaver, and the other his hatchet. So they began to cry, for they knew well enough, when they got home, they would both get a sound beating. Just then, up came an old man, who said, "what is the matter, my lads?

So they told him their plight, and he said, "You may wish three times, and your wishes will instantly come true; only take care, and wish what is good for yourselves."

"A new hatchet for me, then," cried the eldest at once; and there, to be sure lay a hatchet before him.

"I wish for a pretty wife," said the second; and a wife he had.

"I wish for a castle and a garden, and an almond-tree in it, and whoever eats any of its fruit will never ail anything," wished the third, who was the youngest of the three; and strange to say, the castle rose up in a moment.

From that time the father and the other two went to live in the castle, with the youngest; after they had lived there awhile, the king's daughter fell sick, and no physician could be found clever enough to cure her. So the king made proclamation that whoever could heal the princess should have her in marriage.

When the peasant heard that, he bethought him, as you may fancy, immediately about the almond-tree; and so he gathered a basketful of ripe almonds, and gave it to the eldest son to carry to the king's palace. On his way there, he met a little old man, who inquired what he had in that basket?

"Nothing," he replied; whereupon the little man said, "Well, if you have nothing, you will find nothing."

The young man went on laughing, and when he arrived at the palace, he presented to the king the basket, covered over, as it was, with a clean white napkin.

"My father's duty to you, sire," said he; "and here are some almonds, to make the princess well again;" and glad beyond measure was the king as he took off the napkin; but lo! not a single almond was to be seen.

The king was in a mighty rage, and had the young man kicked out, with orders to his chamberlain to have him paid off with five and twenty lashes. When he had limped home, his father gave him five and twenty more; so that he wished the almonds, and the little man, and the king, at the North Pole. That was his reward.

Next morning the second son thought he would have better luck, so his father filled the basket full of almonds, and off he started.

Not far off the city, he met the little old man, who asked him what he had in his basket?

"Nothing at all," said he softly; and the little old man replied, "Well, then, nothing will you get."

The youth went on mocking at the old man, and when he came to the palace, he presented the king with the basket with a napkin over it. And he said, "Here, sir, is a basket of almonds my father humbly sends, to make the princess well again."

"Let me see it," replied the king; but when he took up the napkin the basket was quite empty. "What!" cried the king, "Are you for making a fool of me, too? I'll teach you what ripe almonds are." And he bade the chamberlain give him 50 boxes on the ears, sore enough to bring tears into his eyes.

"How do you like the taste of that?" said the king. "Ill enough," he replied," and home he slunk he to his father, who gave him fifty more; so that was a hundred blows he had for his pains.

The youngest brother was not so fair in the face as his brother, but in his heart very much fairer. So he prayed his father to let him try with the basket of almonds. "For maybe," said he, "I may have better fortune."

"Well," said the father, "only remember, if you come back like your brothers, I'll beat you till you have no more strength than a bottle of London gin."

"For God's sake, let me go!" exclaimed the youth.

So his father gathered a basket of almonds, covered it with a cloth and off he went.

By and by, the little man met him and asked what he had in the basket.

"Almonds," said he, "to cure the king's daughter. Perhaps you would take one or two, for there are quite enough here."

"Thank you," said the little man. "But I must give you something in return for your kindness. Here, then, is a pipe, on which, if you blow, you will get anything you want;" and therewith the little man handed him a pipe and disappeared.

As soon as the young man reached the town, he made for the palace and went to the king.

"My father sends his duty, sire," said he, "and has sent these almonds to cure the princess," and so saying he presented the basket.

The king uncovered it, and there inside were the most beautiful almonds that man could ever set eyes on. So the king took them to the princess, and no sooner had she eaten one, than she was very much better; and after eating three, she was half cured.

The young man wished to have her for his wife, on the spot, but the king said, "Not yet, not yet. You must do three things for me, which, as soon as you achieve, I will consent to the marriage."

But he only said so, because he didn't like the young man as a son-in-law.

When the young man inquired what he was to do, the king replied, "Go out and you will find a heap of oats, which I shall have sown, and by morning you must pick them all up again, so that not a single one is missing."

The youth was greatly [illegible] but he thought him of his pipe, and fancied that would make his fortune. So he let the oats be sown, and sat down and blew his pipe.

All at once he felt something crawling up his leg, and there was the king of ants, who asked him what he wished him to do.

"Be kind enough to pick up the oats for me," said the youth; and so well did the king perform his bidding, that by morning they were all picked up, and not even one missing.

The king was annoyed, and he thought he would make the second task too hard for him. So he went with the youth to the sea, and threw a key into the water where it was deepest.

"Bring me up the key again," said he to the youth. "And, after-that, you may have my daughter."

"I will try," said the youth; and he sat down on the shore, and when evening came, blew a blast on his pipe.

Soon there was a stir in the water, and a fish with a crown on, lifted its head out of the water, and said, "I am the king of the fishes. What he you wish me to do?"

"Be kind enough to get me the key that the king has thrown in the water," said he.

So the king of the fishes assembled all his subjects together, and issued a notice, that whoever found the key should have plenty to drink.

So down dived the fishes, and very soon one came swimming up with the key in his mouth, which the fish king gave at once to the young man. More annoyed than ever was the old king now, and devised something more provoking still. After pondering long, at last he said, "If you can feed a hundred sheep for a month on one plot of ground, without their becoming a whit fatter or leaner, and without losing a single one, or increasing their number, then you shall marry my daughter."

The plot of ground was so small that the sheep could scarcely stand on on it, and feeding comfortably on it was quite out of the question, and outside there was not a blade of grass for them to nibble at.

Sore pressed, indeed, was the youth, but he drove the sheep to the spot, and blew in the evening a loud blast on his pipe; made them leap over the city gate, and march right into the court of the castle like a battalion of soldiers, where they fed to their hearts' content. If he missed one, or one died, he had only to blow on his pipe, and a lamb sprung up which was soon quite as large as the rest of the sheep.

By the end of the month, the sheep could dance as well as if they had been under the best dancing master. Do what he would, the king this time could not refuse the marriage, which was celebrated with great pomp. The youth made his father prime minister, and appointed his brothers to such posts as made all the family remarkably comfortable.

Jack Sprat.

At the battle of Trafalgar, after the defiance and the French ship l'Aigle had been for some time heavily engaged, the fire of the latter slackened so much as to render it evident, that, although her colors were still flying, her power of further resistance was well nigh gone. Captain Durham, anxious to stop the destruction of human life, was desirous of boarding the enemy's ship; but as it was a dead calm, and all his boats had been shot through, he found it impossible to accomplish his wishes, although the two ships were within pistol shot of each other. In this emergency, Mr. Spratt, master's mate, came forward, and volunteered to swim on board the ship Aigle, with Capt. Durham at first refused to sanction, as being far to hazardous an enterprise; and it was not until Mr. Spratt, placing his cutlass between his teeth, and his battle axe in his belt, called out "boarders, follow me!" and, without waiting to see if he was accompanied or not leaped and swam toward the enemy's ship.

He was soon seen from the Defiance climbing up the rudder-chains of the French 74, and entering her stern-port alone, but undaunted. From the gun-room he contrived to fight his way through the decks to the poop, where he was charged by three grenadiers with fixed bayonets. Avoiding their first rush with great dexterity, he placed two of them hors de combat with his cutlass, and grappling the third, fell with him from the poop to the quarter deck The Frenchman broke his neck, but Mr. Spratt escaped unhurt.

By that time a slight breeze had enabled the Defiance to close with her antagonist, and the boarders, at first repulsed, had succeeded in establishing themselves on the decks of the French ship.—Joining his shibmates in the desperate hand-to-hand conflict raging on the quarter deck, Mr. Spratt had the happiness of saving a French officer's life from the fury of his assailants. Scarcely had he performed this act of humanity, before another grenadier endeavored to run him through with his bayonet. The thrust was parried, and the Frenchman then presented his musket at Mr. Spratt's breast, who succeeded in striking it down with his cutlass, and the charge passed through his right leg, shattering both bones. He immediately retreated between two guns, and with two others who had joined him, continued to defend himself from his assailant until relieved by the approach of some of his own party.

Captain Durham, in a private letter, stated that Mr. Spratt hauled down the French colors, and that he afterwards saw him in the quarter-gallery of the Aigle holding up his shattered leg, calling out, "poor Jack Spratt is done up at last." Mr. Spratt was not, however quite done up; for after seventeen weeks confinementin Gibralter Hospital, he returned home to England, and was presented by Captain Durham with a lieutenant's commission, which had been placed at his disposal by the Admiralty, in testimony of the sense entertained of the daring courage he had exhibited in striking the French colors as above described.

A Slow Boat.

There was a steamboat coming up the Mississippi on a dark night, and the captain, according to the "time honored usage," was playing cards in the social hall. The mate stepped in:

"Captain, out of wood—not enough left to make the water hot enough to shave with."

"Ring the bell," replied the captain. "Show a light, and scare some up along the shore."

The mate went out, and the captain went on with the game. In afew minutes the mate returned.

"Found a boat, sir."

The captain left the table and went out.

"How do you sell your wood?" shouted the captain to the people at the yard.

"Two and-a-half."

"Too much," said the captain. "However, take a cord or two and look further."

A couple of cords were taken in, the game was resumed in the social hall, and the boat went on.

A half an hour elapsed, when the mate again appeared.

"Out of wood, sir."

"Bell and light—my deal."

The game was resumed, and the boat again announced a wood yard. The captain went out.

'What's the price of wood?'

'Two-and-a-half.'

'Too high, but take a couple of cords till we can do better.'

As before, a couple of cords were taken in, and not twenty minutes elapsed before the mate again appeared.

'Out of wood, sir.'

'Ring the bell.'

'Better take more this time.'

'Show a light.'

In a few minutes a wood-yard was again 'rung up,' and the steamer B—— went in.

'How do you sell your wood?'

'Two and a half.'

'Two-and-a half be d—d!' cried the captain

'Well, captain,' answered the woodman, 'we will put it to you this time at ttwo-and-a-quarter, as this makes the 3rd time you have wooded with us to night.

The captain had nothing to say, but took the wood and got quickly out of that stiff current, which the boat was unable to stem. The B—— was so solemnly slow that the captain himself used to say she must have been intended for a hearse. She is the steamboat which the newspapers once said made a trip from New Orleans to Louisville in six days and —four weeks.

Rapidity of Thought.

A very remarkable circumstance, and an important point in analogy, is to be found in the extreme rapidity which the mental operations are performed, or rather, with which the material changes on which ideas depend are excited on the hemispherical ganglia. It would appear as if the whole series of acts, can never really occupy a long space of time, pass ideally through the mind in an instant. We have in dreams no true perception of the lapse of time—a strange property of mind—for if such be also its property when entered into the eternal disembodied state, time will appear to us eternity. The relations of space, as well as of time, are also annihilated, so that while almost eternity is compressed into a moment, infinite space is traversed more swiftly than by real thought. There are numerous illustrations of this principle on record. A gentleman dreamed that he had enlisted as a soldier, joined his regiment, deserted, was arrested, carried back, tried, condemned to be shot, and led out for execution. After the usual preparation a gun was fired; he awoke with the report, and found that a noise in the next room had, at the same moment, produced the dream and awakened him.

A friend of Dr. Abercombie dreamed that he crossed the Atlantic and spent a fortnight in America. In embarking on his return, he fell into the sea, and awaking in his fright, he found that he had not been asleep ten minutes.

☞ Christmas and New Year's fall on Sunday on an average once in four years. The cycle is 28 years—the days of the week multiplied by 4, a bissextile period—within which period these holidays occur four times on a Sunday. Christmas day will happen on sunday in the years 1870, 1881, 1892—being six, eleven, six, and five years, respectively. One leap year occurs in the first period, and and in the third period, completing the weeks in six years. Two leap years occur in the fourth period, completing the weeks in 5 years: while three leap years accur in the second period, completing the fortnight in elven years, and leaping over the Sunday in 1876. The year 1892 will be the next in which the days of the week and of the month will correspond with 1864. An interruption to the regularity of cycle will take place in 1800 which will not be a leap year.

☞ Some men, who, at certain hours of the day, are great walkers, calculate not by Long Measure, not in yards and furloughs and miles, but by Ale and Beer and Wine Measure.

☞ Many persons who pride themselves upon being skeptics, will believe anything, provided it is impossible.

☞ Why does the new moon remind one of a giddy girl? Because she is too young to show much reflection.

Taking Cold.

A "cold" is not necessarily the result of low or high temperature. A person may go from a hot bath directly into a cold one, or into snow even, and not take cold. He may remain out in the coldest atmosphere until chilled through, and still not take cold. On the contrary, he may take cold by pouring a couple of teaspoonfuls of water upon some parts of his dress, or by standing in a door, or before a stove, or by sitting near a window or other opening, where one part of the body is colder than another part. Let it be kept in mind that uniformity of temperature over the whole body is the great thing to be looked after. It is the unequal heat upon different parts of the body that produces colds, by disturbing the uniform circulation of the blood, which in turn induces congestion of some part. If you must keep a partially wet garment on, it would perhaps be as well to get the whole of it uniformly. The feet are the great source of colds on account of the variable temperature they are subject to. Keep these always dry and warm, and avoid drafts of air, hot or cold, wet spots on the garments, and other direct causes of unequal temperature, and keep the system braced up by plenty of sleep, and the eschewing of debilitating foods and drinks, and you will be proof against a cold and its results.

You take his nature with his name;
Ask, too, what his religion is,—
For you will soon be of the same.

The News

Thursday, Feb. 23.

Official information of the cature of Ft. Anderson, below Wilmington, has been received. The captore of this fort neces- the troops in the town will be captured. Unless hitherto unknown obstructions have been found above Fort Anderson, our forces are in quiet possession of the city. Commander Cushing, who has been up to Wilmington, asserts that our gunboats could all pass within full sight and shelling distance of the city.

Bell, the rebel pirate and spy, is to be executed to-morrow in New York, by order of President Lincoln.

It is believed the enrollment bill will be defeated in the lower House of Congress, as its provisions are regarded as oppressive.

A special says Hon. J. K. Dubois, of Illinois is also pressed for a position in the Cabinet. It is most likely that should any Western man succeed, it will be Judge Usher.

Strong reconstruction grounds were recently taken by a lawyer named Harris in a speech at Raleigh, N. C., on the 20th ult. It had the effect to stir the rattlesnake u considerably, as Jeff. Davis ordereded his assert, but the legislature extended over him the protecting shield of the State.

From Rebel Journals

The Richmond Examiner of the 18th says Sherman's marsh is a mere overrunning of the country, in consequence of which the enemy might begin to poast of subjugation. So far as they have advanced and penetrated to the very heart of the State without serious opposition, but the only value of that advance for the general purposes of the campaign consists in being a step toward co-operating with Grant in the investment of Richmond. Shermans enterprise is only a begining. The future plans or present disposition of Beauregard's forces are unknown here, but the Confederate army is safe, and may yet lead Sherman srch a dance as Green led Cornwallis over these same riverr and swamps. The Federal army cannot reach Danville. Thus it would have been better to have staid in Atlanta all this while. There is reason to believe that Beauregard is carying out a deliberate design, and Sherman is near his end of triumphs. We may regard the audations South Carolion as one of the consequences of removing Johnson from command of our army of Tennessee.

The Richmond Whig's editorial on the peace movment says we imagine Seward was rather glad than otherwise that the Confederate gentlemen refused to be duped by him, since their refusal gave him the coveted opportunity for the use of his accostomed weapon. No doubt he was more anxious as Grant had anticipated by him telling the most stupendous falsehoods that Hunter and Stephens had expressed themselves in a manner indicating a return to the Yankee Union.

The Whig, says Seward, wrote to Mr. Adams, intimating that the Commissioners meant an alliance against England and France, thus hoping to enlist foreign nations against the rebels.

Capture of Charleston.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—A dispatch from Secretary Stanton to Maj. Gen. Dix, anounces the reception of the official report of Maj. Gen Gilmoreof the capture of Charleston. Gen. Gilmore's report is as follows:

CHARLESTON, Feb. 18, via NEW YORK, Feb. 20 Maj. Gen. Halleck, Chief of Staff:

General—The city of Charleston and all its defences came into our posession this morning with about 200 pieces of good artillery, and a supply of fine ammunition. The enemy commenced evacuating the works last night, and Maj Macbeth surrendered the city to the troops of Gen. Schemelmnfig at 9 o'clock this morning, at which if it was occupied by our forces. Our adsance on the Edisto from Bull's Bay, hastened the retreat. The cotton, warehouses, arsenals, Quartermaster stores, railroad bridges, and two iron clads were burned by the enemy. Some vessels in the ship yard were also burned. Nearly all the inhabitants remaining behind belong to the poor classes.

Very respectfully,

Q. A. GILMORE, Gen. Com.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The Post's special says that it is believed the enrollment bill will be defeated in the House as its provisions are regarded as oppressive.

The 11th Mich. Cavalry.

CAMP 11TH MICH. CAVALRY, Mt. STERLING, Ky., Feb. 16, '65.

EDITOR HERALD:

Thinking, that a brief account of the whereabouts, etc., of the Eleventh Mich. Volunteer Cavalry might not be uninteresting to your readers, I append the following for the perusal of those concerned. Regimental Headquarters is still at this place, although less than half the companies of the regiment are here. Company A, under command of Captain Gilkey, late 1st Lieut. Co. G, left here nearly a week since for Owingsville, distant twelve miles, where they will probably remain some time, scouting the adjacent country, and preventing the outrages of guerrillas. Co. B, Capt. Chas. E. Simpson, is stationed at Jeffersonville, a small town about [illegible] picketing the roads leading to the mountains, securing lost or stolen Government property, etc. Companies C and D, Captains Miles and Edwards, left about five days since on a scouting expedition towards Flat Rock, where it was reported a band of guerrillas was lurking about. Companies F and M, commanded by Major D. D. Buck, have been at Flemingsburg, a small town about 33 miles from here, for nearly a month, where it was expected they would meet with a considerable force of Bushwhackers under the leadership of the notorious Pete Everett and John T. Williams. (By the way, our Colonel has established his head quarters at Pete Everett's mansion, at this place.) They have as yet, however, made no belligerent demonstrations upon our men there, thinking it much more profitable to steal the horses and rob the houses of the citizens living in close proximity to their mountain fastnesses.

Companies H and R, commanded by 2d Lieutenants Decker and Palmer, went out a few days since in quest of some horse thieves, heard of in the vicinity, and have not yet returned. Companies G, I, E, and L, are encamped in and about Mount Sterling, which is a town of perhaps two thirds the population of Tecumseh. Much of the better part of the town has been destroyed by rebel incendiaries and guerrillas. The Courthouse, which was a very fine building of brick, is now but a mass of ruins; also a hotel, and several stores. There are many loyal people in and about Mount Sterling, and a great many who are decidedly disloyal. But so long as the place is occupied by our forces they are very quiet.

About three-fourths of a mile east of [illegible] 9th, 1864, where the forces under Gen. Burbridge attacked the unsuspecting rebels, at daylight, on that day, and drove them precipitately, and with heavy loss, towards Lexington.

The depredations of guerrillas and horse thieves continue to be a great annoyance to the people, especially those who are known to be loyal. No section of the country seems to be secred from their visitations. They prowled about mostly at night and we are enabled to capture but few of them, from the fact that at the approach of any armed detachment of soldiers, they instantly dissolve their organization and each man betakes himself to his mountain recess; therefore, capturing any organized band, however small, is next to impossible.

Five of them, however, were captured about ten days since, and sent to Lexington for trial, where they were turned over to Lieut. Vance, Provost Marshal General, District of K., whose known antipathy to bushwhackers gives us assurance that they will not be lightly handled.

About a week since, a happy party left here just at dark, to attend a wedding, some 6 miles distant, which passed off very pleasantly until late in the evening after a bounteous feast had been enjoyed, when the parties proposed to take a drive into the country. Accordingly, guests, accompanied by the lately wedded pair, started out in fine spirits to enjoy a pleasant sleighride. Ere they had proceeded far on their joyous way, they were accosted by about a score of sore-footed "Johnnies" who were greatly in need of horses, and who very obligingly relieved them of all their horses, watches, etc., and left the disappointed party to complete their bridal tour on foot. I have since learned, however, that some of the property taken has been restored to the owners.

There is not a great degree of sickness in camp at present, and the men are in fine spirits.

There is room for a few more men in our regiment, and any young "Michigander" who may want to serve Uncle Samuel for a short time and help put an end to the war, would do well to come here and enlist in the Eleventh. Our Regiment is well officered and equipped, and is in all its appointments, we think, a fine regiment.

We are armed with the Spencer Carbine, Colt's pistol, and also sabres. Our arms cannot be excelled in any army in the United States, or the world.

Respectfully,

OLIVER BITSON.

Interesting Questions and Answers relative to the 7.30 U.S. Loan.

MR. JAY COOKE, of Philadelphia, who for so long a time had the management of the Popular 500 million 5.20 Loan, has just been appointed by Secretary Fessenden, the General Agent to dispose of the only popular Loan now offered for sale by the Government, viz: the "SEVEN THIRTY."

In entering upon his duties he desires to answer plainly the large number of questions daily and hourly propounded to him, so that his fellow countrymen may all understand this "Seven-Thirty Loan"—what are the peculiar merits,—how they can subscribe for or obtain the notes, &c.

1st Question. Why is the Loan called the "Seven-Thirty" Loan?

Answer. It bears Interest at the rate of Seven Dollars and thirty cents [illegible] dollars; making the interest as follows:

One cent per day on each	$ 50	note.
Two cents " " "	100	"
Ten " " "	500	"
Twenty " " "	1,000	"
One dollar " " "	5,000	"

2d Question. When and how can they be obtained?

Answer. They are for sale, at poor, and accrued interests, by all Sub-Treasuries, National and other Banks, and all Bankers and Brokers.

3d Question. When is the interest payable and how can it be collected?

Answer. The Coupons or Interest Tickets are due 15th of February and 15th of August in each year, and can be cut off from the note, and will be cashed by any Sub-Treasurer, U. S. Depository, National or other Bank or Banker.

4th Question. When must the Government pay off these 7.308

Answer. They are due in two years and a half from the 15 of February, 1865; viz.: on the 15th of August, 1867.

5th Question. Must I recieve back my money so soon as 1867?

Answer. No! not unless you yourself prefer to do so—the law gives you the right to demand from the Government, at that time, either your money or an equal amount at par, of the famous and popular 5.20 Gold Bearing 6 per cent. Loan.

6th Question. How much do you consider this privilege of conversation, into 5.20 Loan to be worth?

Answer. 5.20s bearing Gold Interest from first of November, are to day worth 9 per cent. premium. If they are worth no more at the end of the two years and a half, when you have a right to them, than they now are, this premium added to the interest you receive, will give you at least 10 per cent. anumn for your money—but the opinion is that they will be worth more than 9 per cent. premium at that time.

7th Question. What other advantage is there in investing in the 7,30?

Answer. It cannot be taxed by States Counties, or cities, and this adds from one to three per cent. per annum to the net income of the holder, according to the rate of taxation in various localities. All bonds and stocks except those of the U. S. and all mortgages, &c, are taxed, not only by the Government, but by States, Counties and Cities.

8th Question. How does the Government raise the money to pay the interest, and is it safe and sure?

Answer. The Government collects, by taxes, internal revenue, and duties on imports, fully three hundred millions each year. This is nearly three times as much as is needed to pay the interest on all the debt and as soon as the war is ended the amount not needed to pay the interest will be used in paying off the debt.—Our government has twice paid off all its debt and can easily do so again. The interest is the very safest investment in the world. It is as safe as a mortgage on a good farm, and pays a better interest. It is in fact, a first mortgage on all lands, all incomes, all railroad and canal bonds, and bank or other stocks, mortgages, etc.

Nothing can be safer, for we are all bound for it, and all that we have is firmly held for the payment of principle and Interest. How foolish those people are, who keep their gold and greenbacks idle and locked up, or purchase mortgages or railroads stocks and bonds, which pay only 5 or 6 per cent interest, when thus 7.30s pay (counting the premium on Five-Twenties,) over ten per cent., and are so much safer and surer.

9th Question. How many Seven-Thirties are there, and how much remains unsold?

Answer. There are only about three hundred and twenty-five millions authorized by law, and only about one hundred and ninety millions remain unsold.

10th Question. How long will it take you to sell the balance?

Answer. There are about 800 National Banks all engaged in selling them; also a large number of the old banks, and at least three thousand private bankers and brokers, and special agents will be engaged in all parts of the country in disposing of them to the people.

11th Question. How long will it take to sell the whole?

Answer. In less than three months they will be all sold, and will no doubt then sell at a premium, as was the case with the old Seven-Thirties, the first Twenty-Year Loan, and the Five-Twenties.

The above questions and answers, it is believed, will give full information to all. If not, the General Subscription Agent, or any of the Banks or bankers employed to sell the Loan, will be glad to answer all questions, and to furnish the Seven-Thirties in small or large sums (as the notes are issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, and $5,000,) and to render it easy for all to subscribe—thus fulfilling the instructions of Mr. Fessenden, who earnestly desires that the people of the whole land, (as well as the capitalists,) shall have every opportunity afforded them of obtaining a portion of this most desirable investment.

Let none delay, but Subscribe at once, through the Nearest Responsible Bank or Bankers.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Sutherwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put in new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential in the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to Bolting for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, [illegible] the staff of life—upon her table, [illegible] smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

Attention is called to the Advertisement of Stebbins' Furniture and Show Rooms, of Adrian, in this issue. Give them a call.

Mrs. J. C. Eddy desires to announce to the citizens of Tecumseh and vicinity that she is now selling a Superior Article of Family Sewing Machine. She also keeps constantly on hand a full assortment of Machine Needles and Barnes's Self Sewers, at her residence, just out of this village.

Professor Whitney, the well known and popular, scientific and illustrator, who has been giving a series of entertainments at Adrian to large and well pleased audiences, opens his budget of necromantic wonders and philosophical curiosities here at Bidwell's Hall, on Monday evening the 28th inst.

O. G. Adams, who is now with D. Robbins, having applied himself for many years to Watch work, and particularly to the repairing of Fine Watches, being naturally a good mechanic, he is justly conceded to be the best work-man in the county. Any one wishing a watch repaired, well and promptly, will do well to give him a call.

Serious Accident.

A wagon containing seven persons, 4 ladies and 3 gentlemen, belonging to Justus Lowe of Ridgeway, was accidently upset about two miles north of the city on the Raisin Valley road at a place known as Bixby's Hill on Monday last. Miss Carrie Lowe of Fairfield, was quite dangerously injured, a blood vessel on the left side of the head being ruptured, causing bleeding at the ear and nose. Miss Sarah Gordon and Miss Elizabeth Northrup were both slightly injured and the 3 gentlemen all sustained slight injuries.—Expositor.

We understand that there is a project on foot for building a telegraph line from Adrian to Jackson and Lansing. A gentleman from the East is now here canvassing the matter, who offers to build the road through, if he can get the capital stock subscribed by the towns along the line of the proposed route. There is nothing which the business men of our community need so much as a good telegraph line. It would not only be a great convenience, but also an excellent investment of capital, far superior, in but opinion, to the "ile" stock, in which many of our citizens have already invested. We think it would be advisable to call a citizens' meeting, at no very distant date, to take the matter into consideration. Our business men, especially, should put their shoulder to the wheel. Let them set the ball rolling. Another such opportunity may not present itself in some time.

Anniversary Exercises.

A very pleasant and appropriate entertainment was given at Union School Hall on Wednesday morning last, the anniversary of Washington's birth day. The exercises consisted of the reading of essays, music, and addresses. The first essay, by Chas. Cook, was a biography of Washington, well written and very well read. The second, by Miss Mary Chadwick, was a well-written eulogy. Third, a poem, by Miss Annette Crossman, was a worthy production, appropriate to the occasion, closing with a beautiful apostrophe to Washington. It was well written and very distinctly read. The fourth, and last, an essay, of much merit, by Miss Eliza Adams, in which Washington, the boy, the Christian, patriot, and statesman, was presented as a worthy model for all aspiring youth. Reverends Wright and Wishard followed with addresses, the latter giving a very interesting description of Mount Vernon and its surroundings which he visited last summer. The exercises were listened to throughout with marked attention by the pupils and a respectable number of citizens. In proper time let other great and good men be thus vividly presented as worthy models for the youth in our schools.

The Bridal Party.

TECUMSEH, Feb. 16, 1865.

The unusual stir observable among the younger and more fashionable portion of our community, last evening, gave indications of the near approach of some particular event not ordinarily found among the occurrences of every-day life. About the hour of 7 o'clock these movements began to assume form, when they were discovered to gravitate in the direction of a certain well lighted mansion, the residence of one of our most respected citizens. To this attractive spot the living stream continued to flow from all points of the compass, until its ample halls were well filled with a gay and happy throng.

The cause of the activity noticeable at our Millinery and other fancy establishments, for several days past, and the extraordinary demand for various articles necessary to the completion of a lady's toilet for an evening party, was now apparent. [illegible] Miss Mary E. and Minnie B. was about to be joined in the holy bands of matrimony: the latter, the only daughter of our worthy host, the Hon. John J. Adam, and the former a son of the Rev. W. P. Wastell.

Soon after the hour of nine, the parties took their stand on the Hymeneal altar, the Bridegroom supported on his right by his twin brother, Henry Wastell, of Detroit, and the Bride, on her left by Miss Knapp, of Adrian, all appearing in rich and elegantly arranged costume. At this stage of the proceeding a solemn stillness seemed to pervade the large assemblage, which but a moment before was all life and joy and gayety, when the reverend gentleman before alluded to, stepped forward, and in a clear voice and distinct utterance pronounced the ceremony, which was at once unique and impressive; so the twain were made one flesh.

Then came the compliments and felicitations which poured in on every side, and which continued until the door of a good sized dining hall was thrown open, which revealed to the delighted vision of the happy guests, a gorgeously spread table, loaded with the choicest luxuries—all tastefully arranged, and giving evidence that the best skill of the cuisine and kindred arts, had been employed in preparing them. Justice being done to this magnificent repast, music, sweet music, was next in order. The performance on the piano, by Aggie and others was splendid, and the songs charming. But time would fail me were I to attempt a description of the many happy incidents of the evening; the beautiful bridal presents even which lay in heaps on a pier table in the drawingroom, can only be mentioned.

The festivities of the evening were [illegible] off with great eclat. The guests on the occasion were composed, not only of the elite of Tecumseh society, but many notables from abroad were also present. Chicago, Adrian, Toledo, Detroit and other places, were represented, and, taking the whole scene le tout ensemble, it was a most magnificent affair, and one which will long be remembered by those who were present at the consummation of the happy union of George and Minnie.

The Exhibition.

The exhibition given at Odd Fellow's Hall, in this village, on Tuesday evening last for the benefit of the Soldier's Aid Society, was a complete success. The net proceeds were about $53.

The Silver Band of this place, led by Fred. Emerson, kindly donated their services and added in a great measure to the interest of the occasion.

The exercises of the evening commenced with a declamation entitled "Another Year," by H. B. Roberts, which was declaimed with true spirit. Then followed a very good tableau of "When Johnny comes marching home.

The first dialogue, entitled "Dress Reform Convention," was well played and listened to with marked attention.—Each player seeming to have had the right part assigned her. The performers were Mrs. P. W. Adams, Mrs. M. E. Conklin, Misses H. Stearns, N. J. Beers, S. E. Castle, L. Tollman, E. I. McConnel, L. Train, C. Spofford, E. M. Adams.

Next music, which was followed by a tableau, in two scenes, Dr. Syntax, advertised for a wife, and is surprised by the crowd who apply for the situation, and his selection of a partner; which was received by the audience with applause.

The next play on the programme was the "Farmer's Son," supported by D. McNair, Miss H. Stearns, P. W. Adams, Mrs. P. W. Adams, M. E. Conklin, C. Cook, and H. T. Kneeland. It would be impossible for us to mention which deserves the most credit, as they all acted their parts exceedingly well. Each performer seemed to appreciate the caste assumed and played with true spirit.

The Tableau entitled 'Faith,' was well received, being personated by Miss C. Spofford, and was followed by that old but good piece, 'The Sailor Boy's Last Dream," which was ably rehearsed by P. W. Adams.

The next was a tableau in two scenes, 'The South in Rebellion, and its return to loyalty," was decidedly the best tableau of the evening.

The last play of the evening was "A Race for a Dinner," acted by G. T. Ketcham, A. L. Brewer, S. C. Stacy, H. B. Roberts, L. Van Tine, C. Cook, N. T. Burroughs and P. W. Adams.—S. C. Stacy, took perfectly easy and at home on the stage and it would be no easy task to find his competitor in the caste assumed by him.

The tableau 'When I was a Bachelor,' was decidedly rich, and was well received by the audience. It was followed by 'Advice to Husbands,' by A. D. Stacy, in a masterly and easy style. The last on the occasion was a tableau 'Striking Oil,' in which G. T. Ketcham, used the whip.

Thus ended the exhibition, and the crowd dispersed to their home, well satisfied with the evening's entertainment.

The Pacific Monthly

We are assured the demand for this new monthly magazine is unprecedented, [illegible] principally to the fact that every subscriber obtains an excellent work, well worth the price of subscription, and at the same time receives an article of jewelry as a present, worth from 5 to 10 dollars—compared with the prices of such articles in retail stores. The subscription list to the Pacific Monthly is becoming immense, attributable to the enterprise and liberality displayed by its proprietors. Send on your orders for the Monthly early, and secure the numbers complete for the year which make, when bound two handsome volumes.

The Subscriber having sold his Stock of Goods to A. Hanford, requests those indebted to him—also those indebted to the late Firm of Wheeler & Waring—to make immediate payment, as he is anxious to close up his business. At present said Notes and Accounts will be found with S. C. LeBaron, at Hood's Clothing Store, who is authorized to settle the same. Prompt attention will save legal costs. Tecumseh, Feb. 15, 1865.

Fair Notice.

Those having unsettled accounts with Grandy, Taylor & Co., are given until the 15th of March next to settle the same at W. Taylor & Son's Meat Market. If not paid by that time they will be left with an officer for collection.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificate of three eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

These Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of these Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache.
They are perfectly pure and palatable

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits. The Red Jacket Bitters are only sold in bottles with our name blown on the side, and our private government stamp across the cork.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stitch alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

Before the Battle.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA.

The lurid morn creeps redly
Up the gray eastern heights;
Along the west the moon hangs low,
A yellow globe of light;
The camp fires glow and flicker,
Pale in the rising day—
The tethered war steeds champ their bits
As eager for the fray.

Like lightning rung the whisper
All through the waking camp—
The cry to move has come at last—
Hark to the hurried tramp
Of armed men as hastening on
They grasp the sword and gun,
And looking in their gleaming eyes
You'd think the victory won.

Brave hearts will chill to marble
Before the day is done—
And eyes now lit with life see not
The setting of the sun;
Arms eager, strong and valiant,
Will folded lie to-night,
And faces flushed with brilliant hope
Be still, and cold, and white.

The dim mist rises slowly—
The glittering line of blue
Stands out revealed, upon the field
Yet wet with morning dew—
Across the redoubts of the foe
The first faint gun is heard—
The sacred silence of the morn
By death and strife is stirred.

Marcelline's Triumph.

Some ten or fifteen miles beyond the mountains in the immediate vicinity of Trieste, over among the rugged passes of the Carnic Alps, there is a small hamlet of huntsmen's dwellings, and among them, though somewhat isolated, is a sort of a rough inn, which used to serve as a shelter for travellers on their way to and from Layback. It was a cold, blustering evening in March, and though there was no storm, yet the blasts, as they came sweeping and whistling, whirling and howling down the mountain sides, failed not to drive the people to the cheer of the fireside.

Within the bar-room of this cheerful inn were collected some half a dozen of the Alpine hunters, who passed the mug and tankard with good zest, now breaking into a happy chorus, and anon bending a willing ear to the tale and joke, while nearer to the blazing fire sat two men, strangers in the place, who had arrived just at nightfall and engaged entertainment and rest for the night. These two travellers looked not much unlike common men, but yet there was a something about their countenances that attracted more than passing attention from the hunters. They did not behave exactly as honest men would be supposed to have behaved, for in all their movements there was an evident aim to escape a too critical observation. They had horses in the stable, and were also provided with large travelling sacks, which sacks were either entirely or nearly empty. Ever and anon one or more of the hunters would cast a furtive glance towards the strangers and once or twice they endeavored to draw the twain into conversation; but the two men persisted in remaining by themselves, and ere long they retired to the room which had been allowed for them.

'Marcelline,' said one of the hunters, a stout, middle-aged man, addressing a blooming maiden, who stood behind the bar, 'does Alizorf return to-night?'

'No sir,' returned the girl, 'he comes not till to-morrow.'

'And has your master left you alone?' asked the hunter.

'O, no. Alizorf has left Lubin with me.'

'But Lubin is only small boy—a mere lad.'

'Well, what of that?' replied Marcelline, looking with a somewhat inquisitive glance at the hunter.

'O, nothing,' said the man, evidently endeavoring to hide, as much as possible, the fears or suspicions he entertained; 'only I do not exactly like the looks of these two men whom you have just shown to their room.'

Several of the hunters immediately coincided with this opinion, but Marcelline laughed at their suspicions.

'What an idea,' she said. 'Why what do you take them for?'

'It is not impossible that they are robbers,' returned the first speaker.

'Ha, ha, ha!' laughed Marcelline. 'Robbers in such a place as this! Let's see—there are about twenty groshen in the drawer, and I have exactly seventeen kreutzers in my little box up stairs! What a place for robbers! My master took all the money with him to Trieste, save what I have named.'

'Marcelline,' said the first hunter who had spoken, as he stepped over and bent his head over the bar, 'do you know if your master received in trust a large wooden box an old monk—who went lately to the convent of St. Cecelia.'

'Yes, he received such a one,' replied the maiden, and it is even now locked up in his strong room.'

'That box contains the massive silver plate and ornaments of the convent. The monk left it till his return.'

'Well, 'tis not likely that these men can have heard of that,' Marcelline replied, betraying a slight suspicion of the knowledge she had just received; 'and if they had, they would not surely dare to rob the house.'

'I don't know about that,' returned the hunter. 'Even in large cities these robberies take place. You had better let either Justin or Roland remain in the house to-night.'

'O, no, I had rather not—folks would talk,' uttered the maiden as she looked with a deep blush upon two fair youths among the hunters, who had been thus designated to her.

Marcelline remained firm in her determination to accept of no assistance, or rather guard, from the hunters, and ere long they departed to their several homes. The maiden was left alone in the bar-room, for Lubin was still in the stable; and as she found herself thus solitary, she could not repress the feeling of fear that came over her. While the stalwart hunters had been there, she had felt bold and safe; but now that they were gone, she could not banish the sceptre that intruded upon her loneliness. The two men—the stranger travellers—had indeed exhibited anything but pleasing countenances, and now Marcelline now began to repent herself that she had not accepted the kind hunter's offer.

Half an hour passed away and Lubin came in from the stable. Marcelline, however, said nothing to him of what had transpired, but only requested him to be in readiness to respond to her summons in case she should have occasion to call him during the night. The boy then went to his bed, and once more the maiden was left alone. Nothing broke the stillness of the night save the blasts that howled among the Alps, and for an hour longer she sat by the fast decaying embers in the fireplace. The maiden thought surely that if the strangers meditated harm, they would have been ere this on the move; and with the trobbing of her fear-laden bosom somewhat quieted, she raked up the embers upon the hearth, extinguished the lamp that hung above the bar, and then taking her candle she started for her room up stairs.

Marcelline had passed through the narrow entry, ascended the stairs, and had her hand upon the latch of her own door, when a strange sound from the room of Lubin arrested her attention. At first she thought the boy might be talking in his sleep, but the sound of hushing feet drove that idea from her mind, and as the idea flashed upon her that the robbers were astir, she turned to flee for help; but she was too late, for hardly had she turned back towards the stairs, when she was confronted by one of her stranger guests.

'Do you want anything, sir?' asked Marcelline, hardly conscious of what she uttered, but using the phrase merely from the force of habit. 'Yes, pretty one, I do,' the man returned. 'I want Alizorf's strong box.'

'Mercy, sir! You surely would not rob us?'

'O, no—not you. It is only those baubles which beleng to the convent that we want; so bestir yourself and show us where they are.'

'I shall shriek, sir! I shall cry out for help!' exclaimed Marcelline, as she essayed to start for the stairs.

'No, no, sweet one,' the villain returned, at the same time laying a rough grasp upon the maiden's arm and drawing a pistol from his pocket. 'Your stable boy is already secured, and we shall treat you in the same way. But mark me; if you are quiet and tell us where the box is hidden, no harm shall come to you; but if you do not—'

The villain silently finished his sentence by significantly raising his pistol at the girl's head, and at that moment he was joined by his companion, who had just come from Lubin's room.

Marcelline at first thought of resistance, but soon found that she could gain nothing by that, and besides, the robbers not only threatened her life, but they vowed that they would break in asunder every door and partition in the house till they found the box. Under these circumstances, the girl thought it best to reveal the hiding-place of the box, trusting, however, that something might yet turn up to assist her, and accordingly she led the way to the bar-room, back of which was a small apartment. Taking a key from the money-drawer, she unlocked the door of the back room, and pointing to a small closet in the farther corner, she said:

'There, sirs, in that closet is the monk's box, but my master has the key in his own possession, and so, if you would open it, you must needs force the lock.'

'You are ready with your wit, pretty one,' said one of the robbers, as he cast a scrutinizing glance into Marcelline's face.

'I fear to trust you too far, so you must excuse us if we just secure you till after our job is completed.'

As the man spoke he led the girl back to the bar-room, and taking from his pocket a piece of stout cord, he proceeded to lash her to a chair. She stoutly resisted, and even attempted to utter a cry, but a napkin soon stopped her power of utterance, after which her hands were lashed behind her, and then she herself lashed to the chair. After this, the robbers took a few tools from one of their sacks and proceeded at once to force the stout closet door.

For a moment after Marcelline had been left alone, she almost gave up in despair; but her woman's wit soon came to her aid, and a gleam of hope lighted up her countenance. From where the villains were at work they could not look into the bar-room, and after listening for a moment or two to assure herself that they were fairly busy, she moved her chair noiselessly towards a table, upon which a candle had been left burning. By considerable exertion she managed to get hold of the candle-stick with her teeth, and then carefully set it upon a chair. A moment more she listened, and then she turned her back to the candle in such a manner as to bring the outer chord into the blaze. It required not half a minute to burn off the cord that had secured her to her seat, and then she soon over she took the back of her chair in her teeth and carefully moved it away. Then she turned again and placed the cord that bound her wrists in the blaze. The lashings burned, and so did her flesh, but with a perfect self-devotion, she heroically withstood the pain, and in a few moments she was free.

Marcelline now breathed more freely. She now bent her ear, and she found the villains had broken open the door and entered the closet. She heard them prying at the box which contained the silver plate and she know that no time was to be lost. The key was still in the lock of the door that opened into the back room, and quick as thought the heroic girl sprang forward and closed it upon those beyond. The key was turned, and Marcelline then ran to the front door, unlocked it, threw it open, and sprang into the highway. It was but the work of a few moments to rouse some of the hunters, and ere long the two robber travellers were in safe custody. They not only lost their booty, but also their liberty, and on the next day were safely conveyed to Trieste and delivered up to justice. Lubin was found in his room, with his mouth bound up and his arms pinioned to his chair; but the satisfaction of being released from his unpleasant situation made him forget the indignities he had received.

That little inn is still open to travellers, but Old Alizorf keeps it no longer. Justin, the hunter, is its host, and the fair Marcelline is its hostess.

A couple of youngsters met, and passed the compliments of the season.

'Bob,' says one, 'have you seen Hall? He's been looking for you all the morning.'

'Hall? what Hall?' asked Bob.

'Why, Alco-Hall, you fool.'

'Pshaw,' replied Bob, 'that's a poor joke, and you would not have caught me if I hadn't got hurt last night when John tripped me up.'

'John who?' queried Dick.

'Why, Demi-John, you greenie.'

An Irishman who was troubled with the tooth-ache, determined to have an old offender extracted; but there being no dentist near, he resolved to do the job himself; whereupon he filled the excavation with powder, but being afraid to touch it off, he put a slow match to it, and then ran to get out of the way.

"She isn't all that fancy painted her," bitterly exclaimed a rejected lover; "and worse than that, she isn't all that she paints herself."

Catching A Tartar.

When the Cornwallis was on service in China, Commander Fitzjames landed one day in the river Xang, the kings and leaving the boat's crew to amuse themselves on the beach, he, accompanied only by the coxswain of the boat, clambered upon a precipitous cliff overhanging the river, for the purpose of making a sketch of the surrounding scenery, while thus occupied, and unsuspicious of danger he thought he thought he heard a movement in the dense mass of scrubs that covered the hillside in his rear and above his head; but only catching he continued his task.

At length the sound became less equivocal and turning sharply round, he caught a glimpse of some Tartars, who, however hastily concealed themselves. Feigning that he had noticed their presence, Fitzjames called to his coxswain, and desired him to go and get the boat's crew in readiness for an immediate start, when he himself should come down. Left quite alone he awaited the attack of his treacherous foes, who steadily advanced, trusting to take their barbarian visitor by surprise. But Fitzjames, who knew that their object would be to take him alive, was fully prepared; and no sooner than the boldest, a mandrian of rank, approached within arms reach, then he suddenly grappled with him, and throwing himself and the astonished celestial on the ground, commenced rolling over down the declivity with his prisoner, amidst the cheers of his own men, and his blank dismay of his numerous opponents, who crowned the summit, trundled the captured mandarin on board, minus something more than his silken garments, which fluttered on the rocky side of the hill. The captive was well riceived on board the Cornwallis, and kindly treated; but the ignominy of his mode of capture must have rankled in his breast, for he took the first opportunity of jumping overboard and drowning himself.

A Passport for a Parrot.

One of the Paris papers tell the following story in regard to those solumn noodles who watch over the mediaval darkness of Rome:—

A French gentleman, M——, was traveling in Italy, accompanied by his wife, who carried with her a pet parrot. On coming to the frontier of the Roman States, an official demanded their passports, and after asking them what they were going to do at rome, &c., he espied the parrot.

"Ah! you have a parrot I see. Does it talk?"

"Of course it does."

"What does it say?"

"What does that signify?"

"Sir," said the official, sternly, "This is no joking matter. Proper language—seditious words, even."

"Interrogate the bird, then," was the answer.

The officials accordingly endeavored to make it speak, but not a word could it utter, perhaps because it was fatigued, or did not understand Italian. At last the official said—

"Well, there is only one way of arranging this business; you must write down the phrases your parrot can say, and declare on your own responsibility that it says nothing else. That done, I will give you a pass for it."

There was no alternive, so the gentleman made the declaration required, and went his way. M—— related the story to numerous auditory, and at the same time he showed the parrot's pass to those who wished to see the singular document which cost him escudo.

A Fable

A raven bore away a bit of poisoned meat in his claws, which an enraged gardener had intended for his neighbor's cats. He was just preparing to devour it in an old oak, when Renard approaching, said to him, "Heaven be praised, bird of jove!"

"What do you take me for?" replied the fox. "Are you not the soaring eagle, who daily ascends from the right hand of Jupiter to alight on this oak, and feed a poor wretch like me? Why do you deny yourself? Do I not see in your victorious talons the suplicated gift which your god continues to send me through you? The raven was astonished, and inwardly rejoiced at being taken for an eagle. "I must not," thought he, "enlighten the fox on his mistake." Stupidly generous, he let fall his prey, and flew proudly on. The fox seized the flesh laughing, and devoured it with manceous joy; but this soon gave away to dreadful pangs, the poison commenced taking effect, and he expired.

Cautious Witness.

A farmer was called as a witness to prove the bad character of Enoch Jones, who had formerly been his near neighbor. Counsel asked—

"Well, what do you know of Jones the plaintiff?"

Farmer: "I can't say I know much about him."

Lawyer: "Does he bear a good character?"

Farmer: "We didn't like him any too well in our neighborhood."

Lawyer: "We don't suppose you did; but would you trust him or believe him under oath?

Farmer: "He might tell the truth, if it was for his interest."

Lawyer: "Do you think him an honest man?"

Farmer: "I never gave him a chance to steal anything from me."

Lawyer: "But do you think he would steal if he got an opportunity?"

Farmer: "Well I can't say positive; but I should rather not try him."

Lawyer: "Perhaps not; but am I to understand that you have such a poor opinion of Jones' honesty, that you would be afraid to leave anything where he could steal it, if he were so inclined?"

Farmer: "No, I shouldn't be afraid to, if I watched it!"

Well Answered.

'I will not believe anything but what I understand,' said a self confident young man in a hotel one day.

'Nor will I,' said another.

'Neither will I,' chimed in the third.

'Gentlemen,' said one well known to me, who was on a journey, and who sat close by, 'do I understand you correctly, that you will not believe anything that you don't understand?'

'I will not,' said one, and so said each one of the trio.

'Well,' said the stranger, 'in my ride this morning I saw some geese in a field eating grass, do you believe that.

'Certainly,' said the three unbelievers

'I also saw some pigs eating grass, do you believe that?'

'Of course,' said the three.

'And I also saw sheep and cows eat grass; do you believe that?'

'Of course,' it was again replied.

'Well, but grass which they had formerly eaten had by digestion turned to feathers on the backs of the geese, to bristles on the backs of swine, to wool on the sheep, and on the cows it turned to hair; do you believe that gentlemen?'

'Certainly,' they replied.

'Yes, you believe it,' he rejoined, 'but do you understand it?'

They were confounded and silent and evidently ashamed, as well they might be.

A Judge's Charge.

Judge Jonas Jones recently delivered following charge to the jury, in the case of Elim Crunch for stealing:—

'Jury, you kin go out and don't show your ugly mugs here till you find a verdict—if you can't find one of your own, get the one the one the last jury used.'

The jury retired, and after an absence of fifteen minutes, returned with a verdict of suicide in the ninth degree and fourth verse. Then Judge Jones pronounced on Elem Crunch this sentence—

'Elim Crunch, stand up and face the music. You are found guilty of stealing. Now, this court do sentence you to pay a fine of five shillings, to shave your head with a bagonet, in the barracks, and if you try to cave in the hands of the jury, you'll catch thunder, that's all. Your fate will be a warning to others, and in conclusion may the Lord have mercy on your soul.'

ASTONISHING.—Snook's mother and old Mrs. Stubbs were talking about babies.

"Why, said Mrs. Snooks, 'when I was a baby they put me in a quart bottle and put the lid on.'

'And did you live?' was the astonished inquiry of Mrs. Stubbs.

'They told me I did!' was the astonished reply of Mrs. Snooks.

"Well did you ever?' and Mrs. Stubbs fell to knitting like all possessed.

We are happy to record this morning another brilliant victory by "Little Phil. Sheridan" and his invincible army. It appears that a battle was fought between Staunton and Charlottsville, last Thursday, which resulted in the defeat and capture of the rebel Gen. Early, and 1,-800 of his army.

From Mexico we learn that the Franco-Mexican and Confederate authorities are hobnobbling together.

A skermish occurred near Memphis, on the 2d inst between 300 guerillas and 50 Federal pickets, in a block house.

From Mexico we learn that Maximilian's reason for the dismissal of our Consul from Matamoras was the non-recognition by the Washington authorities of his Government.

Also, that all inhabitants favorable to the cause of the Union, are being arrested.

There appears to be some uneasiness at the large influx of rebel deserters into our lines. It is suspected that mischief is meant by it.

The rebel Col. Hatch, Commissioner of Exchange, has arranded to deliver up all Union prisoners in N. C.

From Nassau we learn that Gen. Preston had been unsuccessful in attempting to reach Charleston, and at the authorities had refused permission to the U. S. gunboat Honduras to anchor in the harbor. Robert Tombs, in a speech at Augusta, says that bad management and legislation is the cause of the dangers that beset the South at present, and calls for the removal of the Administration.

Tuesday, March 7.

Officers just arrived from Wilmington, state that deserters who had come in before they had left, say that Sherman by a flank movement, had compelled the rebs to evacuate Florence, S. C., and was moving on Fayetteville.

The steamship Pacific, from Oregon, has arrived at San Francisco with $87,-000 in gold.

The rebels are consoling themselves with the idea that Johnston is to defeat and check Sherman.

The rebel Treasury department is on the "beg" again, and soliciting donations of plate, etc., to raise money.

We have no authentic news from Sherman this morning.

The exchange of prisoners is still progressing.

In the House of Lords, there has been a movement made to strengthen the defences of Canada, on account of our alleged hostility.

Prospective Trouble in Utah

The Colorado News states that, recently, General Conner established a provost guard in Salt Lake City for the purpose of preventing disorder. Brigham Young demanded that they should be removed, and made preparations to attack them, and was only deterred from doing so by General Conner's turning his guns on Brigham's harem and throwing shells over the city to the country beyond, and telling him if he wanted the provost guard removed he must remove them. The guard remained, but the discontent remained also, and the News thinks it probable it will soon break out in acts of violence that will bring the Federal authorities into conflict with those of the semi-ecclesiastical government of the territory—a collision that will inevitably lead to a condition of actual war. General Conner apprehends this, and is making preparations accordingly.

A Successful Bore.—The arid waste of the Desert of Sahara under the hands of enterprisig Frenchmen is to be clad with verdure, and water is to spring up in abundance to the surface wherseover required. Five places are named where wells have been sunk on the artesian principle, and the result has been a flood of water to the surface continuous and vast. Besides this there is something for the epicure, who, on his travels, has tasted only dried meat, dates and dried fish, for fish have come to the surface with the stream, which flows from some mysterious source beneath the crust of the earth.

How the Rum-Seller Talks.

1. He calls himself "A Sabbath School Scholar."

Reply. Says an old member of the Sabbath School—"He is not a member of the Sabbath School, and has never been since he came to Tecumseh. (Lion's skin, etc.)

2. To the Word of God, which charges him with fearful crime, he answers NOT ONE WORD, nor can he.

3. He is furiously enraged because I came to Tecumseh.

Reply. I do not wonder at that: Ministers, churches and all religious people, are very much in the way of his craft. If they were all driven from the State it would be money in his pocket.

4. He pretends that all these people who tell him the truth are his enemies.

Reply. John Walters! you know better! You have never received any thing but kindness and forbearance from the Christian people of Tecumseh. But the end is coming.

5. He pretends that he has not been conversed with privately.

Reply. He knows that I have talked with him kindly and privately,—and that he then expressed as much contempt for his present occupation as any temperance man ever did. He knows, also, that he solemnly declared he never would engage in the business again.

6. He throws dirt through two columns and a half of the Herald.

Reply. That is an old trick of the devil, but does not alarm any one. Personal abuse is not argument.

Now, let me make the Rum-Seller

A PROPOSITION.

I will meet him in public discussion, on The Iniquity of his Trafic, in Bidwell's Hall, as soon as it can be procured. And that there may be no difficulty about his accepting the challenge, the hall will be furnished him without expense. These ministers, on large salaries, will furnish every rum-seller in the village free seats, and they shall be fully and fairly heard.

Say yes, brono;—either come out and talk in the faces of the people, or forever hold your peace.

Gen. Grant believes the War nearly ended.

We have been kindly furnished by Hon. I. N. Morris a private letter received from Maj. Gen. Grant, from which we take the annexed extract. The letter is dated "Headquarters Armies of the United States, City Point, Va., Feb. 14, 1865," and was written, not dictated, by Gen. Grant himself. The following is the extract, which will be read with interest:

"Everything looks to me to be very favorable for a speedy termination of the war. The people of the South are ready for it if they can get clear of their leaders. It is hard to predict what will become of them, the leaders—whether they will flee the country, or whether the people will forcibly depose them and take the matter in their own hands. One or the other will likely occur if our spring campaign is as successful as I have every hope it will be. Yours truly,

How to Measure Oil Wells.

A very important feature in negotiating a sale of an oil well is to know how to measure the depth of oil. We heard of a case in which everything depended upon that, and on that the bargain finally hinged. It was one of those undeveloped wells, where a hole had been dug, and water and oil struck—rather more water however than oil. But the oil, of course, was on top. The well had been dug only to the first indications of oil, and, by the measure on a stick, there were six inches of oil floating on the water in a very few hours. But the trade hitched.

The next morning the stick was produced, which showed oil a foot in depth. The oil fever in the buyer began to rage; the papers were being made out, when the seller brought in the stick again, showing still greater depth The bargain was struck.
